Jones Leads In Louisiana, Long Dynasty Tottering

Reform Candidate Cuts Machine Apart in Vote In Rural Areas

By the Associated Press

New Orleans, Feb. 20.—Sam Houston Jones, who pledged himself to destroy the old Huey P. Long political machine in Louisiana, at midnight appeared on the basis of incomplete and unofficial returns to have defeated Gov. Earl K. Long in the bitter Democratic gubernatorial State primary.

Jones, "reform" candidate, had 174,384 votes at midnight to 167,855 for Gov. Long, on the basis of unofficial returns from 1,110 of the Louisiana's 1,703 precincts in the Democratic gubernatorial run-off primary.

The city vote lead taken by Long was whittled away by returns from country parishes. Practically all parishes in the State had been heard from.

Whole Ticket Behind

Long's entire ticket was trailing badly at midnight on the basis of unofficial returns from a quarter of the State's 1,703 voting precincts.

With 411 precincts counted Dr. Marc Mouton, Jones candidate for lieutenant governor, was leading Harvey Peltier with 55,787 votes to 43,911.

Eugene Stanley, backed by Jones, had piled up 55,754 votes to 42,767 for Francis P. Burns for attorney general, and John Coxe, Jones supported, was leading the incumbent Thomas E. Harris for State superintendent of public education by 54,197 votes to 44,523.

National Guard Quiet

The Governor held the State's 3,500 National Guardsmen in readiness to quell any possible disturbances during the balloting, but little violence was reported.

Only two minor fistfights were reported in New Orleans. Anti-administrationists made many complaints of voting irregularities. These were lodged with Assistant U. S. Attorney General O. John Rogge, who had promised full investigation of all charges.

Most of today's complaints were on disqualification of commissioners who had refused to sign tally sheets in the first primary because of alleged irregularities.

Jones a Political Novice

Jones, Lake Charles attorney and novice in politics, voted early at his home town then motored to New Orleans to learn whether the electorate had heeded his plea to sweep "Longism" from office. Long remained in Baton Rouge.

State Senator James A. Noe, one-time ally of the slain "Kingfish," but a bitter foe of Earl Long, cruised the city at the head of his "Jackson brigade," a poll-watching group of former soldiers, against whom Long's mobilization order chiefly was directed.

But instead of fights, the brigadiers found smiles as they made the rounds of the booths, which were guarded by 1,600 special election police as well as by city officers.

Committee Also Selected

Generally overlooked because of the fury of the gubernatorial campaign was selection of the Democratic Central Committee which will be the one that may pick Louisiana's 20 delegates to the Democratic National Convention in July.

Administration forces have no reason to admire the Roosevelt Administration which directed Federal probes carried on here for eight months, resulting in countless indictments of former top flight political leaders.

How Would You Plan for Peace?

Walter Lippmann finds five fallacies in the current thoughts and plans concerning peace. Lippmann believes the world must rid itself of these illusions before it is even possible to think about peace plans.

In tomorrow's Post, Lippmann will discuss in detail the first of these erroneous beliefs. Look for this column on the page opposite the editorials in Thursday's Post.

Capitol's Starling Invaders Facing Blitzkrieg by Owls

By Edward F. Ryan.

A new blitzkrieg against the starlings was studied by the Capitol's ace bird warriors last night.

Out of Hartford, Conn., came word that a horned owl had sent squadron after squadron fluttering away in retreat from the eaves of a hotel.

Out of the files on Washington's own seven-year campaign against the feathered attackers came support for the owl defense theory.

Said Capt. W. H. Hunt, of the Capitol police:

"We'll try anything."

Ernest P. Walker, acting superintendent of the Zoo, said the zoo has owls, and "we always cooperate."

David Lynn, architect of the Capitol, said the plan would have to be taken up with the police board, and added he will "be glad to talk it over."

Said Clifford Lanham, District superintendent of trees and parking, and a veteran in the anti-starling war:

"Balloons are the best things in the world for scaring starlings."

The report from Hartford, sent by the Associated Press, said that Col. Clarence W. Seymour, manager of the Allyn House, gave up an elaborate system of flashing lights and electric buzzers in favor of an owl, in an ungilded cage. It worked.

Capt. Hunt said that the Capitol police officers have tried other weapons—hanging paper out of windows, shooting blank cartridges—to drive the starlings from the Capitol building.

Gave "The Bird" To Hartford Starlings

"We scare them away from the Capitol, and they go over to the House Office Building, and back to the Senate Office Building, and back to the Capitol," he said.

There are "thousands and thousands of them this year," said Capt. Hunt, and "they're terrible." The owl, he said, "might be the solution." He added that he will discuss it with Capitol officials today.

The owl attack, it was learned, was used successfully on the grounds of the Army War College two years ago. Two barred owls were borrowed from the Zoo, and set out in their cages at night under the starlings' favorite roosts. By the end of the starling season

Burke, Johnson Push 3d Term 'Smoke Out'

Each Says Roosevelt Should Make Intentions Or Choice Known Now

By Robert C. Albright

Democratic unrest over the President's third-term silence crystallized yesterday in two statements by Western Senators calling on Mr. Roosevelt to make his intentions known.

Senator Johnson (Democrat), of Colorado, original Wheeler-for-President backer, said the President should name now the man of his personal choice if he does not intend to run.

He said continued silence by the President will render the Democratic nomination "worthless to anyone other than himself, including his favorite."

Senator Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, a Garner supporter, called third-term agitation "unfair" to the President, and said it has placed Mr. Roosevelt in a position where he now must speak out.

Both statements kindled fire behind the "smoke out" campaign that has gathered force with each stride in the third-term draft move-

Rain Here Turns To Snow; More Forecast Today

Rain drizzling steadily last night changed to snow at 10:45 p. m., and came to a stop at midnight. The Weather Bureau predicted the mercury would drop below the freezing mark early today.

Forecast for today is light rain or snow again this forenoon with another drop in temperature tonight.

New Ruling Increases D. C. Auto Taxes

Year's Depreciation Allowance Lost In Valuation Change

Levies on automobiles have been increased this year, so that your year-old car will be taxed about the same as last year under a policy adopted by the Board of Tax Appraisers, it was learned yesterday.

The new figures for assessing a car are arrived at by a compromise between the "turn-in" and "resale" values of the automobile, as published in the "Automotive Blue Book," which appraisers use in determining the cash value of cars at various ages.

Basis for the new policy is the fact that two values are published this year for the first time in the "Blue Book," which until this year has given only one value for a specific type car, this value being based on the "turn-in" or "loan" value of the automobile.

"Fair Value" Computed

Tax Assessor Edward A. Dent last night said the book this year listed a new set of values, in addition to the "loan" value, which purports to be the "resale" value of the car, which in all instances is higher than the "loan" value.

Dent said the board of appraisers decided to strike a balance between the two values and bring about a "fair value" of the car.

The net result is that a car which last year brought a $10 tax, and which reasonably would be expected to rate a lower tax this year because of depreciation, actually will be taxed about $10 again under the new policy.

Augustus Wilkie, chairman of the tax appraisal board, said he felt the new valuation of the automobiles will "produce a fair market value for cars, as former values were too low."

Dent explained that the "loan" valuation was termed the "low"

Riverdale Woman Slashed To Death, Husband, 84, Sought

Mrs. Alice De Perini, 45, was found dead in the kitchen of her home, 511 Maryland avenue, Riverdale, at 5 p. m. yesterday. Her throat was slashed and there were other knife wounds on her face and neck.

Prince Georges County authorities broadcast a lookout for the woman's elderly husband, described as Joseph De Perini, 84, a retired employe of the Capital Transit Co.

Last night Washington police received a report that De Perini had talked to daughters living in Washington by telephone.

William Brosnan, machinist, of 1438 S street southeast, told police that about 7:30 p. m. he had been accosted in Anacostia by a man who said, "I just killed my wife." The man, Brosnan said, appeared to be under the influence of liquor and wanted to know where he could mail a letter. Later he entered a drug store "to make a telephone call."

The De Perini home in Riverdale is a second-floor apartment above a store. Prince Georges police said that, in the past, they frequently had complaints of a "rumpus" there.

Yesterday, after receiving a call from a neighbor, Policemen Henry C. Briscoe and Berle J. Huber went to the De Perini apartment. Peering through the kitchen window, they saw Mrs. De Perini, who weighed about 200 pounds, sprawled on the floor.

A plate with some food was on the table.

Blood spots on the ice box, the stove and on the kitchen furniture, pointed to a fight of some length, police said.

They learned that the De Perinis had been married in 1936.

According to neighbors the De Perinis moved into their Riverdale apartment two months ago. Police said that on January 22 Mrs. De Perini swore out a warrant charging her husband with assault, but the charge was nolle prossed.

Clean Up Blue Plains, D. C. Told

D'Alesandro Calls For Larger Staff; 3 Witnesses Testify On Receiving Home

Immediate expansion of the service staff at Blue Plains and exclusion of diseased children from the Receiving Home were demanded last night by Representative Thomas D'Alesandro (Democrat), of Maryland.

The chairman of the subcommittee investigating District welfare institutions urged employment of enough waiters so that diseased inmates would no longer assist in serving meals at the Home for the Aged and Infirm.

After hearing from three witnesses at yesterday's hearing that the Receiving Home lacks facilities for isolation of infected children, D'Alesandro said physical examinations should be given all children before admission to the home. Those found to be suffering from contagious diseases should be sent to hospitals, he declared.

Grady H. Leonard, superintendent of the home, had testified that two part-time physicians make a total of six calls at the institution during the week. Almost all children are examined on the same day they are admitted, he stated.

"Something Must Be Done"

D'Alesandro said the subcommittee will not resume hearings until "the Commissioners have had an opportunity to act" on these suggestions. They will be invited to report at the next session of the inquiry, which probably will take place next week, he said.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown also will be summoned, the Maryland legislator announced, to answer charges that as much as 48 hours elapse between arrest of minors and notification to their parents.

The police superintendent said last night he had not heard of such delays as those cited by D'Alesandro. If they had occurred, he said, "it would simply be because the parents were not at home and could not be reached elsewhere."

After hearing three witnesses describe Receiving Home facilities as "inadequate," the chairman cut short testimony to say, "Everyone agrees that something must be done."

Bondy Makes Reply

Turning to Commissioners Allen and McCoach, who were present at the hearing with District Auditor Daniel J. Donovan, D'Alesandro asked, "Do you have a contingent fund?"

"No, sir," they replied.

Post Readers Look Forward To Next 'Our Town in Pictures'

George Pandarvis and Edward Kelly, elevator and bell boy at the Colonial Hotel, reading "Our Town in Pictures"

A record in pictorial journalism was established by The Washington Post last Sunday with the first issue of its eight-page section "Our Town in Pictures," said one of many readers in public and private life who yesterday continued to praise the new feature.

Senators, college professors, civic leaders and housewives joined in complimenting The Post. All who saw the new section—it dealt last Sunday with elementary schools and next week will take readers behind the scenes in junior high schools and show how teachers are trained—expressed the hope that other local fields would be covered in future issues.

From one of the country's best-known newspapermen came an enthusiastic comment: "It was swell!" said Walter M. Harrison, Oklahoma City newspaper executive, member of the Pulitzer Prize committee and former president of the American Society of Newspaper Editors. "It was just the kind of job that newspapers have got to start doing more and more. The first section was so well done that a newspaperman is bound to be curious as to how it can be improved upon."

Waverly Taylor, president of the Operative Builders Association and vice president of the Washington Real Estate Board, was the reader who regarded the feature as "a new record in pictorial journalism."

"I consider 'Our Town in Pictures,' one of the most constructive interesting and graphic presentations in the history of the press," said Taylor. "I hope it was the first

Reds Report Fall of Key Fort As 800 Planes Bomb Finns; Nazi Raiders Claim 3 Ships

London Repulses German Aircraft; 6 U-Boats Sunk, British Report

By the Associated Press

London, Feb. 20.—Germany's big black bombers blasted again today at the ship lanes up and down the British east coast, bringing the banshee wail of air raid sirens and the metallic cough of antiaircraft fire to London itself.

(D. N. B., the official German news agency, reported in Berlin that two British mine layers and one armed merchant ship were sunk by the raiders, who returned home safely.)

Great Britain did not immediately announce the result of the raids. At least one vessel sent an S O S, however, and a British coastal lifeboat put out to sea upon receipt of word of an attack about 30 miles offshore.

Machine Guns in Essex

Attacks were reported off the coasts of Northumberland, Norfolk, Lincolnshire and Suffolk. Machine gun fire was heard in Essex and residents scurried to shelter during an air-raid alarm lasting 50 minutes.

London's sirens screamed early in the evening. Antiaircraft fire was heard in the outskirts. The "all-clear" signal—a long, even note of the sirens—came an hour later.

The raids on shipping were the first since February 9. There were four separate attacks in late January and early February.

6 U-Boats Reported Sunk

British authorities asserted today that last week's British and neutral shipping losses were the heaviest of the war, but said four German submarines "were definitely sunk" and two others were believed destroyed by the British navy or air force.

The successful attacks on the six U-boats were said to have occurred within a space of six days last week, which British naval sources said was marked by the return of the torpedo to first place as a weapon of destruction.

The admiralty listed five British and 15 neutral ships as lost during the week ending Sunday with a total of 86,077 tons, surpassing the previous high mark of 78,193 tons set in the second week of the war.

The admiralty's figures today said that the five British ships sunk last

Single Word 'Oil' Holds Secret If War Breaks in Near East

(Frazier Hunt, famous author on a roving assignment for International News Service, has just completed a 600-mile tour of inspection of the Allied Army of the Near East. In his dispatch, second of a series, he tells the reason for that army's existence.—Editor's note.)

With the French Army in Syria, Feb. 20.—This war might be won by Gen. Maxime Weygand's army of mystery tucked away in scores of villages and cities in this ancient Syrian land.

A single three-letter word holds the secret of this war. It is—"OIL."

The side controlling oil wins the war if it can cut off the supply from its enemy. That is largely the reason the great soldier, Weygand, is here with his army gathered from every corner of the French empire.

FRAZIER HUNT

For the task of the army is not only to help guard the Allies' priceless oil fields in Iraq, Arabia and Iran, but also to help Rumania hold her oil away from Germany and—to venture a long prophecy—possibly some day to cut off the supply of oil from the Baku and Batum fields in southernmost Russia and prevent its reaching Germany.

The strategic port of Tripoli, halfway up the coast of Syria facing the Mediterranean Sea, is the chief outlet for the French oil pipe-lines from Iraq. This pipeline is one of two great branches. The other outlet is at Haifa, Palestine.

In the harbor, an Allied tanker is filling up with the precious oil piped almost 600 miles across the desert from the rich Mosul fields of Iraq, which is the Arab name for ancient Mesopotamia, the region surrounding Bagdad.

This is one of the lifelines of empire. Through these pipes flow energies that can win or lose wars. It is impossible to overestimate the part oil plays in modern mechanized warfare. Without it, airplanes are grounded, tanks and mechanized weapons helpless.

As long as the Allies control the

Chamberlain Has No Apology in Case Of Altmark, He Says

By Raymond Daniell

Copyright by New York Times

London, Feb. 20.—Before a cheering house today, Prime Minister Chamberlain declared Great Britain had no apologies to make to Norway or anyone else for an "admirably conducted operation" whereby a boarding party from the destroyer Cossack liberated British prisoners aboard the German government ship Altmark in Norwegian territorial waters.

The Premier's statement was couched in the stiffest language he has used yet toward any neutral.

Replying to points raised by the Norwegian Foreign Minister, Halvdan Koht, addressing the Storting last night, the British Prime Minister said it would appear from Koht's words that the Norwegian government saw no objection to the German vessel, whether warship or not, using territorial waters to convey prisoners to Germnay.

Implies British Will Patrol

Chamberlain's next words contained the hint that if Norway persisted in this view or proved unequal to the task of protecting the inviolability of her coastal waters, the British would be justified in assuming the task.

"Such doctrine is in variance with international law as the government understand it," he said. "It would, in their view, legalize abuse by German warships of neutral waters, and create a position which His

The Federal Advisory Council, consisting of representatives of the 12 regional Federal Reserve banks, urged by unanimous vote yesterday that the Government's purchase of foreign silver be discontinued.

Roosevelt Stops Off Costa Rica For Sailfishing

Aboard the U. S. S. Lang, at sea, Feb 20 (AP) (via wireless).—Still studying problems of inter-American defense, President Roosevelt cruised through Pacific waters today in the vicinity of the Panama Canal Zone.

In the afternoon he dropped his studies long enough to try his hand at sailfishing from the U. S. S. Tuscaloosa, his cruise ship, near small islands off Costa Rica.

The time of the President's return trip through the canal was not revealed.

114 American-Built Ships Fly Foreign Flags Since War

By Edward T. Folliard.

Foreign flags have been run up on 114 American-built ships since Adolf Hitler unsheathed his sword and marched into Poland, a survey showed yesterday. These vessels range all the way from a lumber schooner, sold to Canadian interests to the 15,000-ton liner President Fillmore, which now sails through the dangerous waters of Europe under the flag of The Netherlands.

Never in history has there been such a large-scale transfer of American ships to foreign registery. The nearest approach to it was in Civil War days, when ship owners, fearful of losing their vessels either to the North or the South, sold them outright or transferred them to British or other foreign registry.

Officials of the United States Maritime Commission, in contrast to some critics in Congress, think the European war has given this country a good chance to get rid of some old, slow-moving ships that otherwise would end up in a "ghost fleet" or on the junk heap.

The situation, they explain, is entirely different from that of the World War period. When the war broke out in 1914, the United States had only 93 ocean-going ships of 2,000 tons or over. Vast quantities of supplies rotted in the freight yards because of lack of ships.

When the current war started, the United States had 335 ships of 2,000 tons or over. Old, slow and expensive to operate though these ships are for the most part, they all probably could have been operated profitably had it not been for the American Neutrality Act.

That act, outlining combat zones through which no American ship could travel, had the effect of tying up 90 American passenger and cargo ships. There has been some reshuffling of trade routes since

Death From the Sky

By the Associated Press

Russia's army, fighting at top speed to give itself the Finnish city of Viipuri as a birthday present, today reported the capture of the vital Finnish fort and city of Koivisto and sent 800 planes to raid nearly every community in the southern part of Finland.

The Red army communique said its troops occupied the town and fortress of Koivisto yesterday and cleared the enemy from the peninsula. The army also said 47 Finnish planes were downed in air fights.

The latest Finnish military reports, covering mostly the fighting on Monday, merely said that enemy attacks in the area between the Gulf of Finland and Lake Muola were repulsed. There was no comment from Helsinki early today on the Russian claim to the capture of Koivisto, the western "anchor" of Finland's Mannerheim Line.

Aim at Viipuri

Russian sources say Viipuri will be captured by Friday, the twenty-second anniversary of the Red army. Russia has claimed that her forces have penetrated the Mannerheim Line to within 5 or 6 miles of Viipuri.

The fall of Koivisto is a serious blow to Finland, if true.

Reports in Helsinki, which had seven air raid alarms but no bombs, said the Soviet planes flew over much of the southern country. Early advices, however, told of no casualties beyond the wounding of two persons. There were from four to eight air raid alarms in most of the raided communities.

Capture Foreshadowed

The Koivisto fortress and surrounding fortified area, key to the entire western end of the Mannerheim Line, were reported by the Russians to have fallen after 12 weeks of hammering from Soviet bombs and shells.

Its capture was foreshadowed in Russian announcements Sunday that a spearhead drive to the Gulf of Finland had cut coastal railway communications with Viipuri at Johannes and two other places.

Thus isolated, the Russians reported yesterday, Koivisto was made untenable when nearby islands were mopped up.

Over the Coffee

MRS. SMITH GOES TO THE WHITE HOUSE

(And brings Mr. Smith, also, to one of Mrs. Roosevelt's musicales.)

Earlier this winter Mrs. Smith warmed her will-power to the boiling point and left her cards at the White House. Now she has an invitation to listen to some music with Mrs. Roosevelt, and she has dragooned Mr. Smith into meeting her at a quarter - to - five.

Harlan Miller

His unwillingness was partly pretended . . . So he has strolled over from his office . . . They walk to the east gate in the iron picket fence, or get out of limousines or taxis. If they've never been here before their hearts are fluttering a little. A musicale at the White House, after all, is something!

It's a warm February day. There are women in expensive furs and cheap ones; in sport suits and cotton dresses; men in striped pants and in shabby belted-back coats. That young wife's hat seems made of 30 cents worth of dime store ribbon; rubber elastic and artificial flowers.

For long minutes they wait in the lower corridor. They admire the portrait of Mrs. Coolidge in red, and each exclaims "How lovely she is!" at the life-size painting of Mrs. Teddy Roosevelt . . . And now they are crowding past a few uniformed police, Secret Service men and ushers up the red-carpeted stairs to the main hall.

"—the chandelier seems a menace"

Mrs. Roosevelt stands there, alone, tall and kindly, and shakes hands with each as they troop past to the rows of gilt chairs in the East Room. They wait. Now there are 600 sitting, waiting, a little tense. An excited young brunet flashes her teeth at the guests and plays something called Eclogue, op. 35, No. 6, on the piano. With the music the tension eases.

You become aware of the colossal, heavy chandelier . . . Pink carnations and pussy willows near the tall windows . . . Now the brunet is playing something—Scherzo-Polka, op. 5 no. 1, Smetana, the little program says—that you've heard on the phonograph. So that's op. 5 no. 1! You relax a little.

It's you, you, you sitting here at the White House listening to a brunet play La Leggierezza on the pianol Wheee! That's an infernally heavy chandelier up there. You listen dreamily and feel sorry for those unsuspecting people beneath the chandelier.

Now a barrel-chested tenor strides heroically to the low platform and sings Vaghissima Sembianza, which seems far, far away from the third-term issue . . . You've never heard it on the radio . . . But a lady who likes pink carnations wouldn't let her husband bring pain to Frank Gannett. The tenor seems needlessly vigorous.

Ah, the brunet is back . . . You prefer the female voice, and the title "Toccata" and the names Ravel and Debussy are more familiar, and you begin to feel a bit of a connoisseur of music. In the mirror you can see the portrait of Martha Washington . . . She couldn't have kept up with Mrs. R.

"—they all say she's lovely"

That sleepy-eyed deb i front of you looks trim in the tight smoky dress with the diagonal stripes . . . But her mother's complexion is better . . . Now it's the exalted tenor again, singing something in English, and you feel more kindly toward him. "The Night Has 1,000 Eyes." He wafts you up to that glistening menacing chandelier set atremble by his tenor vim. Those imperilled guests . . .

Hell's bells, there's another chandelier right above your head . . . You've been in danger all this time yourself! What good is a 2-ton chandelier with maybe six 100-watt bulbs in it? . . . Is this claustrophobia? The tenor is pouring it on in his finale. You've never been chandelier-conscious before.

Mrs. Roosevelt hastens to congratulate Young Caruso and the brunet, and invites the guests to step down the hall to the other room (she means the State Dining Room) for some tea. And cookies. And the paper-thin sandwiches with which officialdom keeps body and soul together . . . She is like a new Methodist minister's wife with her parish . . .

The music has taken the kinks out of you . . . But you turn sharp right in the corridor, toward the stairs and the cloakroom downstairs. "What, no tea?" asks Wilson Searles, the usher. You'd like to stop and tell Mrs. Roosevelt what a swell girl she is. But you walk swiftly to Jack Garner's hotel a block and a half away and order your first mint-julep of the season.

Inquiry Reveals NLRB Bids For Witnesses

Prospect Asked Board to 'Coach' Him in Testimony

By John B. Oakes.
Post Staff Writer

The National Labor Board Relations Board is actively engaged in efforts to obtain witnesses to testify against proposed amendments to the Wagner Act, evidence offered to the Smith Committee disclosed yesterday.

As a mass of letters between board officials and prospective witnesses were placed in the record, Allan R. Rosenberg, assistant to the board's secretary, declared that he had been assigned to "legislative duties" last winter in connection with Senate hearings on the Wagner Act.

The 31-year-old attorney added that he had "six or eight" assistants to help him in the board's work in preparation for the hearings.

In one letter introduced in the record by Committee Counsel Edmund M. Toland, Prof. Harry Shulman, of the Yale Law School, wrote Board Chairman J. Warren Madden that before testifying for the board, "I shall be very glad to receive from you any such coaching as you may think desirable."

Cooperation Denied

Earlier in the day, Chairman Emil Schram, of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and Frank Healy, of the Treasury Department's Procurement Division, explained to the committee that their agencies had given the labor board virtually no cooperation in its alleged effort to "blacklist" firms cited for unfair labor practices under the Wagner Act.

Schram stated that the RFC temporarily had withheld disbursements in three cases, on information supplied by the labor board; while in another instance, the board's request to hold up a loan was refused.

Pointing out that the RFC retained full freedom of action in its arrangement with the board, Schram said his agency followed similar procedure with other Government bureaus, including Wage-Hours, Internal Revenue and SEC. Under questioning of Representative Healey (Democrat), of Massachusetts, Schram agreed that knowledge of a company's labor relations is of "vital concern" to the RFC in granting loans.

Remington Contract Questioned

Healy related details of interest evinced by the Labor Department and Labor Board in a proposed contract in 1936 with Remington-Rand, then involved in Wagner Act litigation. Procurement Division held the "fundamental belief," he said, that nothing could be written into invitations for bids, specifications or contracts that would restrain competition, or increase the cost of an article, without express direction of Congress.

The letters Toland introduced in the record to show the board's alleged "lobbying" were exchanged between board members and educators, businessmen, labor experts and others. After reading some of them, counsel asked the committee to renew its request to Attorney General Jackson for a ruling on whether the board has violated an antilobbying statute.

Toland brought out that C. I. O. propaganda against Wagner Act amendments proposed by the A. F. of L. was sent to the board, and that Board Secretary Nathan Witt had written T. F. Silvey, C. I. O. official, responsible for the material:

"The board wants to compliment you for putting forward such intelligent and vigorous efforts in defense of the NLRA . . . continue to send me further material on this subject."

On the stand with Rosenberg during most of the day was Robert Condon, board attorneywho also took part in the "legislative work."

Meet on Board's Time

Former president of the NLRB union, Condon said that union representatives had met with supervising officers on the board's time and property. One memo Toland put in the record was addressed to Condon from Gertrude Satz, a board stenographer.

Headed "unfair labor practices," it said: "I have been getting as many as 10 to 15 calls a day relative to union stenographic work . . . they concern union business and are made on board time." The note concluded that complaints against this practice were justified.

Meanwhile, the House Labor Committee was told by Oliver Holden, executive director of the American Press Society, that "the closed shop in news rooms is an infringement upon the freedom of opinion and affiliation of news workers."

The Gallup Poll

U. S. Is Against War, Even If Allies Should Be Losing, Survey Discloses

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Feb. 20.—If Germany appears to be defeating England and France, should the United States enter the war?

With surveys showing that public sympathy is overwhelmingly on the side of the Allies, this question grows in importance every month the war drags on. Three times since hostilities began, the American Institute of Public Opinion has measured sentiment on the issue. The trend shows a sharp decline in the number of voters who believe the United States should take up arms against Germany if the Allies are losing.

GALLUP

Whereas more than two-fifths of voters advocated this action the first week of the war, only about one-fifth favor it today.

The trend is as follows in the Institute's three separate surveys.

"If it appears that Germany is defeating England and France, should the United States declare war on Germany and send our Army and Navy to Europe to fight?"	Yes	No
Last Sept.	44%	56%
Last Oct.	29	71
Today	23	77

The decline is not due to any decrease in American sympathy for the Allied cause, for Institute surveys find the majority want the Allies to win and want to give them every aid short of armed intervention. The decline, is rather, another indication of the deep-seated desire of the people to avoid shedding American blood in Europe's battles. The majority apparently consider at the present time that keeping out of war is even more important than giving unrestricted aid to the Allies.

There is, however, a tiny group of voters who have always been in favor of taking up arms against Germany regardless of circumstances. Institute researches show that the group numbers approximately 3 per cent. The amount of war sentiment in the country ranges, therefore, from about 3 per cent—the number who want to fight Germany now—to 23 per cent—the number who would fight Germany only if the Allies appear to be losing. The rest, an overwhelming majority, are for staying out no matter what happens.

The future trend of sentiment will depend directly on events in Europe. If Hitler launches a spring offensive and the Allied losses are bloody and staggering, it is distinctly possible that the emotional reaction of the people will alter present sentiment.

For the present, however, the general sentiment of the majority as expressed in the survey is that "it isn't our fight." "as long as Germany doesn't bother us, there's no reason to bother her," "it would ruin us financially for years to come," and "at least one nation should be left to pick up the pieces."

The ones who, on the other hand, think we should go in if the Allies were fighting with their backs to the wall declare that "if we didn't help England and France we would be next," that "we should do all we can to save democracy," and that "the Germany must not be allowed to win."

2 Senators Push 3d Term 'Smoke Out'

ment. Burke has not formerly favored a White House commitment. Neither Burke nor Johnson believe the President wants to run.

"The President will be drafted unless in a most vigorous manner he makes it perfectly clear to the American people that he will decline the nomination," said Senator Johnson.

"Demoralizing Party"

"If it be his intention in the final analysis to submit to draft, his present attitude of silence is smart politics. If, on the other hand, the President has no intention of accepting the nomination, his continued silence is terrible and he must accept the full responsibility for demoralizing and disrupting the Democratic Party."

If the President has a personal choice, the Colorado Democrat declared, "there is no reason he should not take the people into his full confidence now. It is far beneath the dignity of the President of the United States to plan the manipulation of delegates."

Burke said there were "serious objections" to the President declaring himself too early, but the time has come when he should "make his intentions clear."

Third-term activities by persons "who want the President to run merely because of their own local political considerations" have made it necessary for the President to speak, the Nebraskan said.

Sawyer Takes Place

Burke said he agreed with Johnson that continued silence by the President may render the nomination valueless to any other Democrat. He predicted the President, when he speaks, will decline a third term.

In Ohio, meanwhile, Charles Sawyer, Democratic National Committeeman, accepted the "favorite son" spot on that State's Democratic primary ballot previously rejected by Senator Donahey (Democrat), of Ohio, who refused to be a third-term stalking horse.

Sawyer, who would deliver delegate votes cast for him to the President at the Chicago Democratic convention, warned "out of State" possibilities against entering the Ohio primaries. He said "we will demonstrate in devastating fashion" that Ohio Democrats favor the State organization's indorsement of Roosevelt.

Wheeler, Garner Delay Action

Nonetheless, friends of two of the three other Democratic candidates considering an Ohio tryout continued to urge their men to file. Pending further conferences with Ohio contacts, Garner forces reached no decision. Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, likewise delayed action.

Supporters of Federal Security Administrator McNutt, who had planned to enter Ohio if Garner did, indicated McNutt will remain out of all primaries in which the President is interested until Mr. Roosevelt makes known his views.

Feelers recently were put out toward giving McNutt the second place under Sawyer on the Ohio organization's Presidential preference slate, but the plan was rejected.

Candidates have until March 15 to file in Ohio, and Garner and Wheeler forces were "taking their time" and studying the situation.

Garner already has entered his own slate against pro-Roosevelt delegations in Wisconsin and Illinois. One plan being discussed by the Vice President's friends yesterday is to file his name only in those Ohio districts promising success and leave the Sawyer slate uncontested in the delegate-at-large balloting.

Wheeler backers were waiting for Garner to move first in Ohio. The Montana Senator has said he will enter no primary against the President. In Ohio the President's name will not figure on the ballot although the State organization has made clear a vote for Sawyer is a vote for Mr. Roosevelt. If Garner enters Ohio, Wheeler followers thought it possible their Senator may do likewise. They count on a friendly railway labor vote and farm support for the Montanan.

Senator Donahey, who turned down Ohio's favorite son role as a "subterfuge" for throwing the delegation to Roosevelt, yesterday agreed to accept a place on the ballot as a delegate-at-large. But in consenting, he advised Sawyer by telephone he would be entirely independent at the convention, and not bound by the organization's third-term commitment.

White Also a Delegate

In Columbus, Sawyer said former Gov. George White, a close friend of Garner's, likewise had accepted a delegate-at-large spot on the organization slate. Former Gov. Martin L. Davey, who once called Garner Presidential timber, also will be invited to accept a delegate role, Sawyer said. Both White and Davey have been anti-Administration. Their inclusion would be part of Sawyer's program for harmony in State Democratic ranks.

Other developments:

Mrs. Robert A. Taft headed westward on a speechmaking tour for her husband, Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, who yesterday expanded his Taft-for-President organization to include a women's division. It will be headed in Cleveland by Katherine Kennedy Brown, Republican National committeewoman.

The Pennsylvania State committee's slate of 16 candidates for delegate-at-large to the Democratic National Convention was announced—representing all factions, but failing to include the names of Former Gov. George H. Earle and Senator Guffey. Earle has been named Minister to Bulgaria and Guffey is seeking nomination for reelection.

Coffee Leads Move to Alter Trade Program

Democrat Offers Bill to Require Senate Ratification

By the Associated Press

Representative Coffee (Democrat), of Nebraska, took a leading position in the movement to alter the Hull trade agreements bill yesterday with the submission of an amendment which would make all future reciprocal tariff treaties subject to Senate ratification.

Delivering the first Democratic speech criticizing the program, Coffee asserted that his amendment would "assure American agriculture, labor and industry an adequate opportunity to be heard" on all future trade pacts. The House quit for the day before voting on amendments.

Despite Coffee's move, Democratic leaders looked forward with confidence to the stage of voting on the bill, to be reached tomorrow. After a poll they reported that a maximum of 25 Democrats would desert them, leaving a comfortable majority for the bill in its present form, even though the whole Republican membership should vote in opposition.

Program Expires in June

The trade agreements program expires in June unless the pending bill is approved. The measure would extend it for two years.

Yesterday the continuation resolutions was pending before the House for general debate. The discussion attracted little attention. Most of the day there were fewer than 50 members present on the floor.

Advocating the renewal of the program, Representative Boehne (Demorat), of Indiana, asserted that if the United States should return to Republican tariff "embargoes," a "precious opportunity" to restore sound world economy at the close of the war would be lost.

Representative Cannon (Democrat), of Florida, criticized the trade program as inconsistent. While the United States has attempted to pay high wages and improve the condition of the farmer, it has through tariff reductions, he said, "put certain States in competition with nations that pay low wages."

The nominal leader of the opposition, Representative Treadway (Republican), of Massachusetts, the ranking Republican of the Ways and Means Committee, was at home ill, but he sent to the House a statement minimizing Democratic claims that the program was an instrument for world peace. The program, he said, "would neither be efficacious nor desirable in dealing with the chaotic conditions that undoubtedly will exist when peace comes."

Pork Barrel Rivers Bill Cut in 4 Parts

Economy Bloc Wins Concession In Procedure

By the United Press.

Congress' favorite pork-barrel measure—the $412,000,000 rivers and harbors authorization bill—underwent a major operation yesterday when the Senate Commerce Committee cut it into quarters.

Committee chairman, Josiah W. Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina, explained the action by decrying use of the "pork-barrel" appellation and emphasizing that every project it would authorize has been approved by Army engineers. But other committee members privately admitted the quartering was decided upon as a concession to the Congressional economy drive.

The bill authorized projects totalling only $83,840,100 when the House approved it last year. The Senate committee added projects totalling well over $300,000,000 and cries of "Pork!" were so widespread that Senate leaders sent it back to the Commerce Committee.

The committee yesterday rejected by a 7-to-6 vote a resolution by Senator Maloney (Democrat), of Connecticut, to limit to $5,000,000 the authorization for any single project. Had the resolution been adopted the omnibus bill's total would have been slashed to $51,315,600.

Under yesterday's action, four new bills will be drawn up, respectively, including navigation, power, flood control, and miscellaneous projects. The navigation projects will be considered the Senate's version of the House bill, and will be taken to the Senate floor for action.

Bioff Flies Into Prison, For an Hour

Film Union Czar Gets Bond After Surrender in Chicago

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Feb. 20.—William Bioff, stocky motion picture labor chief, rode in and out of jail today on a merry-go-round of legal action.

In the midst of the swift sequence of events, he announced that he had resigned as chairman of the Conference of Studio Unions, the control center of most of the A.F.L. organizations in the Hollywood industry. He emphasized, however, that he would retain his other position as a representative of the International Alliance of Theatrical and Stage Employes.

Bioff whisked into town on an airliner from California at noon, surrendered to detectives and was hustled to the Bridewell lockup to begin serving an uncompleted six-month term imposed here in 1922, when he was convicted of pandering.

He was fingerprinted, given a dingy uniform and assigned number 1288.

But, less than an hour later, his counsel rushed before Chief Justice John Prystalski, of the Criminal Court, and filed a petition for a writ of habeas corpus. The attorneys, Harold and Abraham Marovity, contended that, although Bioff was convicted January 17, 1922, and his conviction was affirmed by the Appellate Court February 19, 1923, no capias had been issued for his arrest until last November 24, despite the fact that he had lived in Chicago for ten years after his conviction.

The jurist issued the writ and ordered the prisoner released pending a hearing next Friday. The bond of $5,000 was provided by a bonding firm, and Bioff walked out of jail, Natty in his blue ensemble.

Assistant State's Attorney James Cuningham argued in vain that "this is not the type of case for a bond."

Bioff told reporters the 18-year-old sentence and the Federal charge of income tax evasion against him in California were part and parcel of a "conspiracy" involving "Communists, the C. I. O., big money interests and the Government."

"It looks like persecution," he complained. "I came back to clean it (the old case) up once and for all."

From Hollywood came word that the studio conference had declined to accept Bioff's resignation.

Australian Envoy Lands Here After His Greeters Go Home

Richard Gardiner Casey (left), first Australian Minister to the United States, arrived at Washington Airport last night. He was received by Maj. Keith Officer, of the British Embassy staff, who will become the first secretary of the Australian Legation

Lord Lothian and Summerlin Leave Airport on Hearing Plane Is in Carolina; Dodged Storm as Far South as Atlanta

Maj. Richard Gardiner Casey, D. S. O., M. C., Australia's first minister plenipotentiary to the United States, arrived at the Washington Airport at 11:25 o'clock last night.

As he stepped from the plane into a driving snow, six hours behind schedule, the diplomat from "down under" said:

"I think we've been everywhere short of Florida."

The plane, which took off from Los Angeles on Tuesday afternoon, had gone as far South as Atlanta to fly around storms that were raging east of the Mississippi.

As a result of the delay, the welcome given the new Australian Minister was simple in the extreme. Lord Lothian, the British Ambassador, was at the airport earlier. He cooled his heels for an hour or so, and then went back to his embassy after he learned that the plane was somewhere in South Carolina, taking on fuel.

Keith Officer, counselor in charge of Australian affairs at the British Embassy, waited around until about 10 o'clock, and then he, too, went home. (Officer learning of Carey's arrival, went to the airport and took him to the Shoreham.) George T. Summerlin, State Department protocol officer, who meets all incoming diplomats, gave up several hours before this.

A reporter, not blaming Lord Lothian and the others, but feeling that something was needed to offset the snow and the absence of protocol, nominated himself as good will ambassador.

"Welcome to Washington, Mr. Minister," he said.

"Thank you, thank you," said the Minister.

It had been said in advance that Maj. Casey was Australia's Anthony Eden. Truly, he does look a lot like the dapper Eden, even to the Homburg hat, the mustache and the clipped accent. However, his features are somewhat more rugged, as though he lived more and endured more.

His friends in the British Embassy recalled that he was a hero in the World War. He was aide de camp to Gen. Bridges, and went through the Gallipoli campaign in which Bridges was killed. He received the Distinguished Service Order and the Military Cross.

A graduate of Melbourne and Cambridge universities, and a mining expert until he went into politics and rose to treasurer of the Australian Commonwealth, Maj. Casey is married and has two children, a boy and a girl.

He has his own plane in Australia and travels almost entirely by air. He said he planned to buy a plane in this country.

A chancellery has been leased for the new Australian Legation at 1911 Twenty-fourth street northwest, but this is only temporary. Maj. Casey said he planned to have a new legation built. He is not entirely unfamiliar with Washington, having been here three times, the last time when he was on his way home from the coronation in 1937.

The new minister, who is going to be popular in Washington unless some hard-boiled people at the airport last night miss their guess, said that the idea of establishing a legation here has been "mooted for several years."

"There is no reason for it," he said, "other than bringing the two countries closer together."

He pointed out that Clarence Gauss, the newly designated American Minister to Australia, would set up the first foreign legation on Australian soil at Canberra.

Maj. Casey will not formally take up his duties until President Roosevelt returns to Washington and he is able to present his credentials.

On his arrival last night he was accompanied by Peter Heydon, who will be second secretary of the legation. Keith Officer will be the first secretary.

Only New Zealand among the British dominions now is unrepresented in Washington by a minister. Lord Lothian serves as the diplomatic representative of that island.

Mystery Cloaks Suicide of N. Y. Art Authority

Another Former Official Of Gallery Found Beaten After Ride

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 20.—John Poggi, a barrel-chested and monosyllable man of uncertain background, became a key figure tonight in a mystery of the art galleries that involved the suicide of John T. Geery and the all-but-fatal slugging of Milton B. Logan.

Both were indicted former officials of the famous American Art Association-Anderson Galleries, Inc. They were accused of having withheld some $65,000 from clients in the sale of objets d'art.

Poggi was identified by Logan, police said, as his assailant and was charged with felonious assault. When he was taken to the bedside of the victim, he leaned forward and said:

"What? Who, me?"

Logan was beaten over the head last night on a motor car ride which was a prelude to Geery's suicide.

Through the strange fog that surrounded the case only this much seemed beyond dispute:

That in the course of the ride Logan was knocked unconscious and either thrown from the car or assisted from it;

That Geery, his face splotched with blood, turned up later at the Waldorf-Astoria to meet his wife and that from there he went to his Long Island home and shot himself in the head.

He left a five-page letter to his wife. Authorities said this note had been begun in April, 1939, and all save the last ten lines had been typewritten. These lines, by hand, were set down just before Geery's death.

The ostensible purpose of the motor ride, Logan told authorities, was to see one Arthur Wilson about a real estate deal. Geery, Logan and a "stranger"—later identified by Logan as Poggi—set out with Geery driving.

Logan said Assistant District Attorney Robert H. Thayer, apparently had not demurred at the trip, thinking the "stranger" was a friend of Geery's.

Geery, in a report made by telephone to the police, had said he had heard a "swish" and a cry from Logan and that the next moment he himself was struck on the head. He fled then, according to his story, and hailed a taxicab to the Waldorf-Astoria.

Mother Admits Sacrifice Death Of Daughter, 5

By the Associated Press

Palm Springs, Calif., Feb. 20.—Police Chief Bispham said today 26-year-old Mrs. Betty Hardaker told him that she killed her 5-year-old daughter, Geraldine, in Montebello, Calif., yesterday.

Mrs. Hardaker, missing since her baby's body was discovered in a park rest room, was taken into custody this afternoon. A few minutes later, Mrs. Hardaker told him, the chief said:

"Geraldine was too good to live. I did not want her to grow up and go through what I endured. We were in the washroom and I was seized with a sudden impulse. I took her in my arms and loved her. Then I lifted her high in the air and bashed her against the floor."

The child's father, Charles Hardaker, was taken into custory early today in nearby South Gate for questioning. Police said he was at work in an automobile factory at the time the girl died.

Colonial Village Has Big Blood Bank Party

American Legion Check to Be Presented At Its Ball Tomorrow

More than 160 bridge players took part in one of the largest card parties of The Washington Post-WJSV blood bank campaign for Children's Hospital last night at Colonial Village in Arlington.

The games will realize considerably more than $100 for the fund, according to P. E. Henninger, who with J. T. Onley and J. C. Blake, manager of the village, arranged the party.

The affair was one of hundreds staged this month, proceeds from which will go to Children's Hospital for maintenance and expansion of its transfusion and serum services.

Funds collected yesterday and Monday totaled $268.75, including $100 from the George E. Killeen Post and Auxiliary, American Legion; $11.52 from United Federal Workers, Local No. 132; $5 from the Business Women's Council and numerous remittances from individuals who gave benefit bridges.

With several parties yet to be held, final results of the campaign will not be known for some time.

At the American Legion's annual departmental ball at the Hotel Mayflower tomorrow night, a check will be presented to the blood bank fund for the amount raised to date by legion posts and auxiliary units.

I work my cars hard, so I shopped the entire field before I bought my 1940 Packard. In 4 months I've run up 18,017 miles — spent only $1.35 for mechanical upkeep. I get a real kick out of the pick-up and performance of my 1940 Packard because it's so thrifty — as cheap to run as smaller cars I've owned.

L. J. O'Neil.

L. J. O'Neil, Milwaukee, Wis.

ON EVERY COUNT— PACKARD'S THRIFTY

"MORE CAR FOR YOUR MONEY"—to begin with . . . and thrifty to own for thousands upon thousands of miles. Marked buyer approval—followed by complete owner satisfaction—explains why Packard, of all motor car manufacturers, has the fastest-growing family of owners in America!

Compare the 1940 Packard with any other car. See if it doesn't surpass it in performance . . . roominess . . . comfort and looks. And let the table below show you that even a big, roomy car like Packard can be serviced almost as cheaply as much smaller cars. See Packard at your dealer's, today.

Here's why Packard has the fastest-growing family of owners!

"After looking at other automobiles, I decided the 1940 Packard was the car I wanted. Low-cost operation made me decide. I'm getting 18 miles to the gallon." T. C. Lanier, Atlanta.

"—my 1940 Packard is as thrifty—if not more thrifty—than smaller cars I've owned . . . 10,158 miles and I've spent not a dime for repairs." M. A. Jacobson, Baltimore.

COMPARISON OF SERVICE CHARGES

Type of Service Operation	Average Charge: Packard 110	Average Charge: "Lowest-priced 3"
Service brakes, adjust complete	$ 2.70	$ 2.53
Re-line and adjust brakes, 4 wheels	13.65	12.81
Clean and adjust carburetor	2.40	2.43
Tune engine	4.75	4.07
Piston rings—re-new all, align rods	23.65	24.12
Carbon and valve job	13.00	13.98
Front wheel toe-in, check and adjust	1.25	1.02
Clutch, pedal clearance, adjust	.50	.53
Fan belt, renew	1.90	1.57

SPECIAL NOTE: These prices are taken from an impartial flat rate manual used by over 30,000 garages. Being average costs, they may be somewhat higher or lower in your city because of local conditions, but they do illustrate the small difference in upkeep expense between Packard and much smaller cars.

Post Readers Are Awaiting Next Our Town

Pulitzer Prize Committee Official Hails New Section

of an equally interesting and artistic series."

The new Post section, however, caused considerable consternation in the household of Representative John R. Murdock, of Arizona. The family was just leaving the house to keep a Sunday engagement when Mrs. Murdock caught a glimpse of "Our Town in Pictures" lying on a chair. Everyone had to wait while she sat down to read it.

"I was fascinated by those splended pictures," said Mrs. Murdock, who was a teacher of English and physical education in Phoenix for 10 years. "I am glad to see a build-up for the schools instead of a tear-down. It was a grand thing to do. It shows what children are doing and the work of teachers. Something should be said of the marvelous work of the teachers in Washington schools. I have never been in a place where they gave more time and unselfish service than they do here—and with too little praise for it."

Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas, said the section was the first part of The Post he read last Sunday. "It made a great hit with me," he said. "I was looking for it because of the advance publicity. It was a very constructive and interesting job—one of the best things The Post has done."

Ord Preston, president of the District of Columbia Bankers Association, was one who hoped The Post would extend its new feature to other fields. He said: "I think The Post 'Our Town' feature is a splendid medium by which there will be brought home to the residents of Washington an appreciation of the many fine facilities which the institutions and organizations of the city have to offer."

Coleman Jennings, winner of the Cosmopolitan Clubs "distinguished citizen" ward this year, called The Post to say: "The 'Our Town' section was a very swell job. It was handled in an effective and imaginative manner. I was very much impressed."

Other comment:

Albert R. Miller, instructor at George Washington University: "The character and arrangement of the photographs were excellent. I was particularly impressed with the treatment accorded Negro students. The captions were fine—in short, I liked the whole thing!"

Carter Field, Washington correspondent of the Bell Syndicate: "It was a highly commendable job. I think it was an excellent way to make Washingtonians conscious of our city's progressive teaching technique."

Miss Beatrice Hodgson, director of public relations, Community Chest: "It was a stunning job! I had two reactions to the presentation. It was a revelation to me what Washington schools are doing. I hadn't realized they are as advanced in curriculum as they are—and I was impressed with the make-up of the picture pages. They were planned for great reader interest."

Mrs. L. Lamar Matthews, information service of the Social Security Board: "I was particularly interested because years ago when I edited the school page in the Montgomery (Ala.) Advertiser, I used to go around getting pictures of school children in action. The new Post section has not only mind interest but heart interest."

Vincent Saccardi, Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. executive: "I think The Post's new section represents one of the most splendid pieces of community service any Washington newspaper ever has done."

Miss Anne Swindell, Council of Social Agencies: "I was impressed with the thoroughness with which the reporter and photographer went into the various school grades. This presentation should be of great value to parents."

Miss Gertrude McNally, secretary-treasurer, National Federation of Federal Employes: "Congratulations to The Post. I thought the first issue of 'Our Town' was very interesting. It should do a lot of good in Congress. Many Senators and Representatives think of Washington as a city of Government employes and merchants, forgetting the 'Our Town' part of it—the schools, the hospitals, the parks, etc."

Mrs. Harold E. Roberts, Westchester Apartments: "I learned more from those grand pictures than I would have learned from a large amount of type, because I would not have had time to read very much. The section was just the sort of thing a mother needs for helping her learn about things she needs to know about."

Everett G. Clements, 4881 Colorado avenue northwest: "My young son who is in the sixth grade at West School got hold of the Sunday Post before anyone else in the family. I saw him and his sister poring over the new section and it aroused my curiosity. I looked it over, found it extremely interesting and am looking forward to next Sunday's issue."

Buchman Calls Moral Rearmament a Race With Time to Remake Men and Nations

In Washington with a company of speakers for a one-day visit Dr. Frank N. D. Buchman explained the moral rearmament movement to 50 socially prominent ladies and a few of their husbands yesterday at the home of Mrs. Harold Walker, 2110 Leroy place northwest. Left to right—Ebenezer Cunningham, lecturer at St. John's College, Cambridge; Mrs. Walker, Dr. Buchman, founder and leader of the M. R. A., and Mme. van Beuningen-Fentener van Vlissingen, wife of the Dutch industrialist

A new spirit, "traveling with lightning speed around the world," alighted in the home of Mrs. Harold Walker, 2110 Leroy place northwest, yesterday afternoon when Dr. Frank N. D. Buchman and a company of four speakers arrived in Washington for the day.

Mrs. Walker had invited a few friends to hear from Mrs. van Beuningen-Fentener van Vlissinger, of the moral rearmament of Holland. When she heard of Dr. Buchman's arrival, she asked the leader and his companions to join the party and bring word of the sweep of MRA across America.

Dr. Buchman defined MRA as "a race with time to remake men and nations." America, like Europe, is engaged in war, he said, but "ours is a war for industrial cooperation and national unity."

Even while he was speaking, Dr. Buchman went on, National Unity Luncheons were being held at which employers and employes were sitting around a table together—to eat.

This, he said, is America's Maginot Line on the West in the war for industrial cooperation and national unity.

John McCook Roberts, Harvard University graduate, just returned from England, reported that MRA is "still sweeping that country faster than ever. It is the hope for the peace," he said. Dr. Morris Martin, of Merton College, Oxford, declared that Finland owed her national unity to moral rearmament, and urged America to follow in Filand's footsteps.

Ebenezer Cunningham, professor of mathematics at St. John's College, Cambridge, England, called MRA "the science of living together." He said it is "an experimental science—you have to do the experiment first and you find the theories later."

Miss Elizabeth Morris, Vassar graduate, asked her hearers to "plan to make Washington the center of national unity."

Dr. Buchman then introduced Mrs. van Beuningen, who described how she and 40 Dutch women had started the movement to organize moral rearmament on a national basis in Holland.

"Things are serious in Holland," she said. "The roads are broken up, all our beautiful brides are undermined. Parts of our beautiful country that we worked so hard to keep out of water are flooded, the peasants are without crops and cattle. * * *

"My only son is in the army. There are 500,000 of our young men at the frontiers. We decided that while the men are mobilized for national defense the women should mobilize for peace. * * *

"Holland is a small country. We can't influence the whole world. So I came over to America to ask for your help. If all the neutral countries were to work together to get this new spirit of reconciliation into the world the war would stop."

value of the car and that the "resale" value is the "high" value.

The advisory board of the Keystone Automobile Club heard a discussion of the new assessments from A. B. Evans, member of the Board of Tax Appraisers, at a meeting last night in the Willard Hotel, and voted to defer action until the club's legal department had completed an investigation.

Evans pointed out that the board is under bond to assess personal property as nearly as possible at its actual value, and said the new schedule would accomplish that end. Motorists' objections to the new schedule have been based only on the increase, he said, not on the claim that assessments are greater than the value of their cars.

William A. Van Duzer, director of vehicles and traffic, told the club additional appropriations for maintenance of traffic lights should take precedence over any plan for a master control system.

Van Duzer reported that only $2,500 of the $7,500 appropriation for traffic safety education had been spent because of restrictitons imposed on the Commissioners. The board voted to recommend to the House and Senate Appfopriations Committees that the Commissioners be given a free hand in spending this money.

Following reports on the alleged swindling of cut-price gasoline retailers by George M. Roberts, superintendent of weights and measures, and Dr. H. C. Dickinson, of the Bureau of Standards, the following committee was appointed to investigate: Dr. Dickinson, T. Howard Duckett and William Ullman.

D'Alesandro Asks Exclusion of Diseased Children From Receiving Home

funds," D'Alesandro said. "We heard, for instance, that at Blue Plains diseased persons are serving food."

"That was not in my testimony or the superintendent's," answer Robert E. Bondy, public welfare director. D'Alesandro thumbed through the transcript for several minutes but was unable to find the passage.

"There's no use going on with these hearings," he told Bondy, "unless there is going to be a real check-up on the things that are brought out."

Police Bring 88%

(D'Alesandro later told reporters he found the statement in question in testimony given last Thursday by Frank B. Haskell, Blue Plains superintendent.

The decision to call Maj. Brown came after Leonard had testified that 88 per cent of the children admitted to the Receiving Home are sent there by the police. Notifying the family that a child has been detained is a police responsibility, he said.

"Do the police cooperate with you?" D'Alesandro asked.

"Very well," Leonard replied.

"When there are two-day delays—do you call that good service?" the chairman demanded. "I think we'll have to call Maj. Brown and get this thing straightened out."

D'Alesandro, who was the only sub-committee member at the hearing, interrupted Leonard frequently. When the superintendent said the bill of fare at the institution is "as good as at the average home," D'Alesandro broke in to ask:

"Didn't you feed them bologna one day while you were eating lamb chops?"

Leonard said he didn't remember. The menu for the staff includes a good deal of fried food, he stated, while that for the children "runs more to stews."

"There are two separate menus, then, one for the staff and one for the children?" D'Alesandro asked.

Leonard Defends Food

"Yes," said the superintendent, adding that he often prefers the inmates' menu. D'Alesandro cut him off to remark, "In any case you get the best every day."

"I want to emphasize," Leonard replied, "that I feel the way we feed the children is the best part of our program there. One reason we don't have any more difficulty with them than we do is because their stomachs are full."

Bondy was not given an opportunity to testify on the Receiving Home. He will be called to the stand when hearings are resumed, D'Alesandro said.

Mrs. Leonard, wife of the superintendent, who is in charge of meals at the Receiving Home, said the institution has a staff of 16. Average daily population of the home, according to Leonard, is 43.

"That seems like a pretty big staff, when you think of so few employes serving 700 poor old people at Blue Plains," D'Alesandro commented.

"And the children themselves are doing the cleaning, making beds and helping to serve the food."

Judge Fay Bentley of Juvenile Court, first witness, declared, "No one has ever believed the Receiving Home is adequate either in construction, facilities or play space."

Both Judge Bentley and Miss Elsa Castendyck, director of the delinquency division of the Children's Bureau, agreed on the necessity for centralizing control of admission to the home, now divided among the police, Public Welfare Board and Juvenile Court.

The home at present holds "a good many children not really requiring detention," Miss Castendyck said. These children, particularly the younger ones, are forced into "undesirable" associations, she reported.

Crammed quarters make it impossible to obtain "satisfactory segregation of white and colored children," according to the witness. She pointed out that the school has no resident trained nurse, "no adequate educational program," no trained dietitian and "no adequate recreational outlet for the children's energies."

In the dormitory for colored boys a number of beds are less than six inches apart, she stated, describing the situation as "a definite health hazard."

F.P.A. Author of "The Conning Tower" in the N. Y. Post and expert on "Information Please" comments on The Washington Post

Franklin P. Adams

"I was astonished how much better The Washington Post is than when I last saw it."

The Conning Tower
THE DIARY OF OUR OWN SAMUEL PEPYS

Sunday, January 28

LAY UNTIL AFTER TEN IN THE morning, and so up and read newspapers, and I was astonished at how much better the Washington Post is than when I last saw it. So Betty Lindley come for us, and we with her to Cleveland Park, and had dinner with her and Ernest, and talked of many things, and it made me feel that Washington is the place for journalists, and that every journalist, wheresoever, should be sent by his newspaper to Washington for at least one month each year. So to our inn, and had dinner with Alison Smith and Peg Day, who tells me that her name is not Margaret at all, but Katherine, and R. Crouse, and then we all to the theatre, and saw "Life With Father," and then Mr. Sullivan and I walked to 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, and there was a supper party there, and I sate at table with Miss Malvina Thompson and Miss Peggy LeHand and Capt. Waddell and Beatrice Blackmar, and had a mighty merry time, what with having some soup and some chicken and some ice cream, and all seemed to be oblivious of the fact that my train was to leave at 2:10 a. m., and if the Secretary of the Treasury had not let me hitch-hike I should not have had time, and indeed had not found my berth before the train started to move.

From The New York Post of February 3, 1940

We don't know exactly when F. P. A. last saw The Washington Post, but we do know there's been a marked improvement in the paper in the past six years. In a Pulitzer Prize, in Ayer Awards, in C. I. T. Safety Awards, The Post has gained more national recognition than all other Washington papers combined. Post editorials are quoted more often than are those of any other Washington paper.

The Washington Post has added three news services; the International News, the N. Y. Herald Tribune Service, and the N. Y. Times War Service. Wirephoto picture service has been brought to Post readers. More columnists have been added, including three of America's favorite seven. The Post has almost doubled the number of its comics, and improved its sports, woman's and society pages. No wonder F. P. A. was astonished!

Turkey Warns She'll Fight Over Balkans

Invasion Will Mean Immediate War, Inspired Press Says

By the Associated Press

Ankara, Feb. 20.—In the midst of new military preparations by the government, the Turkish press declared tonight that any attack against the Balkans would bring Turkey into the European war.

"Turkey will enter the war the day a foreign power marches into the Balkans," the newspaper Yeni Sabah, of Istanbul, warned.

The supreme war council opened a week's emergency session to study plans for coordinating Turkey's armed forces with the huge reservoir of manpower being assembled in the Near East by her French and British allies.

Significantly, it was announced that President Ismet Inonu soon would tour Thrace, frontier region of European Turkey, in which the government is rushing new fortifications to oppose a possible thrust at the Dardanelles. Inonu and the general staff have already toured the Russian border.

Plans were announced also for spending $15,000,000 of the recently granted British-French loan for rapid construction of a port at Eregli, on the Black Sea, 150 miles east of the Bosporus. At present, Turkey is without a Black Sea harbor adequate as a base for naval operations.

"Turkey is not seeking war, and would fight only if imperiled," Yeni Sabah said, but added pointedly:

"If Germany attacks the Balkans she will find us facing her on the side of the Allies because such aggression would directly menace us.

Won't Await Turn

"To reach Istanbul it is necessary to cross the Balkans. Our country will not await her turn with folded arms while the Balkans are crushed. That is one mistake we shall not make."

It was understood British and French military missions charged with coordinating British-French-Turkish forces would participate in the meetings, which find Turkey already on a virtual war footing.

Turkey has an estimated mobilized strength of 350,000 men and a potential strength of 1,000,000 men which she could coordinate with the total of some 570,000 men Britain and France have assembled in Syria, Palestine, Egypt and other near eastern areas.

300,000 on Border

The Turkish army has arrayed 300,000 men along the Russian frontier, three times the normal border garrison, competent sources reported.

The national economy has been mobilized gradually and martial law put into force in frontier districts.

Field Marshal Fevzi Karmak is presiding at the supreme war council sessions, which began amidst declarations of the inspired Turkish press that the whole world must aid Finland, described as "battling for civilization against the Red barbarians."

Starlings Facing Owl Blitzkrieg

there were four owls, the other two captured on the grounds, and one owl was being released for night attacks.

Last year, officials said, they borrowed the owls again, but the starlings had been sufficiently discouraged—the owls didn't have to leave the cage. This year, said officials, there aren't enough starlings to worry about on the grounds.

Lanham said he was doubtful about the owls. He brought a pair to the District Building three years ago, and the starlings went right ahead roosting there. The difficulty, he explained, was that there wasn't enough owls. Each owl was tied by a string, in a window alcove, and their effective range for scaring starlings was not more than 3 or 4 feet. Lanham took the owls back to the Zoo after a four-day experiment.

During the height of the anti-starling drive, Lanham directed all kinds of attacks—with riot guns, with pebble-filled cans and hydrogen-filled balloons. The balloons, he said, were the most effective. Recently, the District has had no appropriation for fighting starlings.

Walker, in commenting on the Zoo's supply of owls, said that if "responsible officials want to get in touch with us, we're always glad to cooperate." He said that he had favored use of parallel charged wires to shock starlings into retreat, but he made clear that he wanted to stay outside of any controversy over methods of starling control.

Navy Establishes New Service Medal

Goering Paper Hits Belgian Purchase of 8 U. S. Vessels

By C. Brooks Peters

Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, Feb. 20.—A Belgian corporation's purchase of eight American vessels with a total tonnage of 65,000 tons, for carrying cargoes between America and Belgium, England and France, is not exclusively in Belgium's interest, declares Marshal Goering's Essener National Zeitung.

Belgium, says this newspaper, gave its permission for this transaction after the Norwegian government on the basis of neutrality refused its permission for a similar transaction.

According to the Belgian press, Goering's organ adds, 48 per cent of the stock of the new corporation—Societe Maritime Andersoise, belongs to Agence Maaritime Internationale which, it adds, "may well be owned by the French and British" while 32 per cent "belongs to the 'United States Line Co.' to which the ships in question formerly belonged."

The purpose of the whole business, the Essener National Zeitung declares, is "by employing the neutrality of a docile third party to get around, for the benefit of England and France, the cash and carry clause (of the American Neutrality law).

By the establishment of an allegedly neutral corporation in a neutral land, American ship owners who prefer to sell ships to laying them up, will be in a position to carry on their business without pronounced violation of the cash and carry clause." In wartime, the Goering organ adds, one would expect neutral countries, particularly if situated like Beglium in the midst of the disturbance, "would do all possible to avoid anything which could arouse any doubt relative to their neutrality."

'Oil' Key Word If War Breaks In Near East

seas their supply is certain, but Germany must seek a constant flow. This nonfighting war enables Germany to conserve her supplies and build up reserves but once the real fighting starts, it will be absolutely necessary to keep great supplies of oil rolling into the Reich.

If the Allies are able to cut off this supply, the war is over.

I believe this is one of several reasons why France sent Gen. Weygand here to build up an army so as to be able to strike deep into the Balkans when the moment comes.

If Germany attacks Rumania and the latter can hold out until Weygand rushes to the rescue with the Anglo-French forces being massed in the Near East and with the probable help of the Turks, it may prove to be a vastly different story than the easy conquest of Rumania in 1915.

Turks' Position Important

Some military authorities are convinced these great armies of the Near East might be able to arrive in time to check the German drive and save the Rumanian oil fields. This may be getting into the realm of pure speculation, but there's no speculation about the power of the Anglo-French armies in this region.

The most important part of the picture is Turkey's position. If she throws her full weight to the side of the Allies and opens the Straits into the Black Sea in the event of a German attack on Rumania, then this force could be quickly moved by sea for the assistance of the Rumanians if they can hold out long enough.

Another possible route would be through Saloniki and north Greece, where the Allies fought desperately in the last war, finally breaking through in the September, 1918, drive to Budapest.

But even Weygand himself does not know where and when there will be action. The Soviets are imponderable. No one can guess what their next move may be.

If the Allies reach the Black Sea, they can certainly cut off all tankers carrying oil from Russia for Germany.

But let me reiterate: No one knows when, where, or what will happen. Weygand is a cagey old "fireman" ready for the outbreak of a fire anywhere at any time.

Pass of Destiny

Today, I drove by troops from Algiers marching along a narrow pass 5 miles north of Beirut over a bridge of the famous Dog River.

It is a pass of history. And even today you can see 17 great tablets commemorating the conquering armies that have used the Dog River Pass from Rameses II in the thirteenth century B. C. to Gen. Gouraud's French army in 1920.

Watching the lean, hard fighters from Algiers, I could not help but feel that soon another tablet will be added to this pass of history.

I stopped my car, climbed the old Roman roads at the side of the mountain, and looked down the pass. I felt the same as I did 20 years ago when I first saw the British Tommies at the great Khyber Pass of northwest India.

Echoes from long ago rolled up from the dusty road below. Three thousand years of marching men have gone through this pass, singing martial songs, their banners snapping in the breeze.

Way back in the olden days, they carried bronze swords.

These worriors of today carried machine guns and trench mortars.

Otherwise, there is little difference.

The Egyptians, Persians, Greeks, Assyrians, Chaldeans, Romans, Turks, Crusaders and the war-weary British and French all walked through this pass of destiny.

Silver Buying Halt Urged by FAC

only periodically to advise the Federal Reserve Board with regard to matters pertaining to the operation of the Federal Reserve System.

The group poined out, however, that a bill to discontinue foreign silver purchases, introduced by Senator Townsend (Republican), Delaware, was now before the Senate Banking Committee. It asked the Reserve Board to transmit a copy of is resolution to the committee.

Reserve Board officials said the resolution would be referred as requested. It was recalled that Chairman Marriner S. Eccles had taken the same position with regard to foreign silver purchases.

"The council," its resolution said, "is unanimously of the opinion that these purchases of foreign silver should be discontinued forthwith, particularly in view of the fact that silver purchases increase the already excessively large bank reserves."

Excess Reserves Grow

Due mainly to gold and silver imports, excess reserves or idle funds of Federal Reserve member banks have risen to the unprecedented total of $5,600,000,000. This huge money supply has depressed interest rates on Government and other high-grade securities. Reserve Board officials maintain that it is so large as to be uncontrollable, and, as a result, constitutes an inflation threat.

The council's action was hailed by Townsend and denounced by members of the Senate silver bloc.

"That's great," Townsend exclaimed. "It should strengthen my chances of getting the bill out of the committee with a favorable report."

Senator Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, predicted that the Townsend bill would be killed. He said silver purchases had benefited China.

Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, saw in the council's recommendation a forerunner to an attempt to reduce the subsidy which the Treasury is required to pay domestic silver producers.

Townsend pointed out that his bill was not directed at the domestic silver subsidy.

Action on Bill Deferred

Action on the Townsend bill has been deferred by the Senate Banking Committee pending consultation with Administration officials.

Purchase of foreign silver is provided for under the 1934 silver purchase act, which was forced on the Administration by the silver bloc. This bill provides for purchase by the Treasury of silver until the $1.29 per ounce monetary value equals one-third the value of gold holdings or until the price of silver is increased to $1.29 an ounce.

Both objectives are still remote. Due to the enormous gold imports in recent years, the ratio of silver to gold has been declining, despite continued silver purchases. The Treasury last year cut the price it pays for foreign silver to 35 cents an ounce.

The Federal Advisory Council opposed the silver purchase act at the time it was proposed. Its action yesterday, therefore, was in line with its former stand.

objectives. Forty-seven enemy airplanes were brought down in air combats."

Air Sleds Smashed

Helsinki, Feb. 20 (AP).—The Finnish defenders of the battered Mannerheim Line were reported tonight to have scattered a Soviet swarm of strange, bug-like "air motor sleds" which swarmed across the ice of Lake Ladoga in an attempt to skirt stubborn land fortifications in a surprise coup.

At least 200 Russians were killed and the entire detachment dispersed, the Finns said, after the Russians, "in great force" had set out from the Taipale area in a fleet of bobsleds, powered by propellers.

Between the Gulf of Finland and Lake Muola, spearhead of the 20-day Red army drive on the half-ruined city of Viipuri, an official Finnish communique said with military terseness: "Enemy attacks continued . . . the attacks were repulsed."

On the ice of Lake Suvanto, inland from Lake Ladoga near Taipale, Red army infantry pressure also was declared beaten back.

Taipale, Lake Ladoga and Lake Suvanto are on the eastern terminus of the Mannerheim Line; besieged Viipuri, with the conflict licking almost at its edges, stands behind the western end of the line, on the Gulf of Finland.

The undramatic language of the Finnish communique gave only a hint of the intensity and gravity of the struggle on the isthmus south of Viipuri—(which Soviet sources have predicted would be captured by Friday).

Fighting drew so near to Viipuri, with artillery shells screaming amidst ruined buildings, that Finns classed the city as a sector of the fighting front, although not necessarily in immediate danger of capture.

Most of Viipuri's 74,000 inhabitants were removed before the Russian invasion started.

Tonight a Finnish army spokesman said that the Finns' new positions were as strong as or stronger than before, but there was acknowledgment that the situation could again become critical if Russia should launch a new series of major attacks with force equal to that of the attacks of the past 18 days.

The Finns counted on a breakdown of Soviet supply lines being hastened by Finnish aviators.

Northeast of Lake Ladoga, more than 50 miles across the lake from the isthmus fighting, the Finns declared there was "continued cleaning up on bases taken from the enemy" where destruction of Russia's Eighteenth Army Division was reported yesterday.

Further north in the Kuhmo region, about half way along the Finnish-Russian boundary, "a few strong points" were reported captured by the Finns in fighting with "individual enemy detachments."

MAXINE INTO MAYFLOWER. Remember Maxine Tappan who played that record-breaking engagement in the Mayflower Lounge two years ago? She'll be back at the Mayflower on Friday with Dick Koons' orchestra. Maxine's gift of rhythm is so superb that she was christened the "First Lady of Swing" while she was in Washington. In recent months she's been on national tours with the bands of Ozzie Nelson and Gus Arnheim.

ART BARKER TO MAYFAIR. After Maria, Joann and Joy wind up their Mayfair engagement on March 2, it's pretty certain that the Art Barker Trio, including Jole and Walter Scott, will return. This crew, enjoyed so much by our town last summer, is in Florida now and Mayfair's Jimmy Byrd is talking turkey to them via wire . . . Maria, Joann and Joy will vacation in Washington during the first week in March. That's fine news for all the pals and admirers they've made in the Mayfair.

SHOW GIRL CONSCIOUS. Eddy Brandt's Metronone Room orchestra is fast coming down with show girl fever. Skeets" Polen, drummer, is in a dither every day until that letter arrives from Betty Allen, who's Ethel Merman's understudy in "Du-Barry Was a Lady." Fred Jaegel, pianist, is counting the days until Thelma Temple arrives at the National Theater with the "Streets of Paris." On Monday the entire band was pop-eyed when Lois Andrews, late of George White's "Scandals," arrived swathed in white fox and orchids. Lois is Betty Allen's best girl friend, stopped off in Washington on her way to Florida, just to visit a bit with "Skeets."

PLEASANT PAYNE. Personable young Roger Payne is the new assistant of Manager Richard Butler at Hotel 2400 Sixteenth Street. Mr. Payne hails from upstate New York near the Canadian border, was recently associated with the Dodge Hotel.

BLUE ROOM BUBBLE. Talia is really doing that "Bubble Dance" in the Shoreham Blue Room for the late show. Her costume consists of a veil and the bubble. The Rudy Vallee Songsters bring down the house with their "When a Gypsy Makes a Violin Cry." Those plastic blondes, True and Trudy Wilkins, are held over. Spec and Spot, the cyclomaniacs, are back on all wheels.

MAXINE TAPPAN, "First Lady of Swing," is returning to the Mayflower Lounge on Friday

PLATINUM MEMORIES. Mrs. Jean Bello, beautiful mother of the late Jean Harlow, was recently in La Salle Versailles renewing memories of Jean with Orchestra Leader Burrus Williams. Mrs. Bello wished especially to see a letter Jean had written to Burrus. Later he played the favorite tunes of America's most famed platinum blonde. They were "Melancholy Baby," "The Very Thought of You" and "Did I Remember."

ART IN THE LOTUS. Art is great sport at the Lotus this week. Paul Marin draws pictures of the ringsiders on the pretty backs of the Tip Tap Girls. But you can't take your portrait home, positively! Patrons can also draw doodles, letters or figures and dare Artist Marin to make pictures therefrom. He didn't fail, but we think he cheated a little on the letter X. . . . The new Tip Tap Girls are all fresh as daisies, twice as pretty and dance like all get-out.

ROBIN HOOD ARRIVALS. Manager "Mac" McCarthy, of the Robin Hood, knows his talent. Listen to these attractive bookings. Singer Lynne Allison will arrive on Saturday. Accordionist Eddie Whitesel, one of the best, will tune up for the supper session on Friday. Pianist-Organist Tommy Johnson remains, naturally.

Allies Imply They'll Guard Norway's Seas

Chamberlain Has No Apology in Case Of Altmark, He Says

Frequently Chamberlain was interrupted by cheers from the opposition as well as the government benches.

A Laborite spokesman said at the conclusion of the prime minister's statement that the Labor opposition indorsed the navy's action in freeing the seamen, the exact number of whom was given by the premier as 299 officers and men of merchantmen sunk by the pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee.

No Reply Received

Chamberlain said that apart from the original protest from Oslo, the government has not received any official communication from the Norwegian government. He then proceeded to discuss Koht's statement of the Norwegian position.

Cries of "Hear! Hear!" rang out as the premier said Koht's statement made "action, or rather inaction, more difficult to understand than was originally supposed."

To Chamberlain, Koht's statement that the Norwegian authorities did not know that British prisoners were aboard the Altmark, was "most surprising" in view of the wide publicity that had been given the matter.

Failure of the Norwegians to search the ship and to do more than to "protest" when it was discovered to be a prison ship, using its wireless in territorial waters, together with the refusal of the Norwegian naval officers to cooperate with the British in preventing a violation of neutrality by Germany, were all cited as justification of the British action.

Chamberlain said Norway "displayed complete indifference as to the use which might be made of their territorial waters." But even if such "indifference" were due to German pressure, Chamberlain said, it was nevertheless "inconsistent with active impartial duty of a neutral toward ourselves as a belligerent."

Patrol of Norway Hinted

Copyright by New York Times

Paris, Feb. 20.—The Altmark incident, it was said in an official statement here today, has raised the possibility that France and Great Britain will be forced to take action to prevent Norwegian waters from being used as a refuge for German vessels.

The French presume that the stand adopted by Halvdan Koht, the Norwegian foreign minister, with regard to naval incidents and that of King Gustav of Sweden with regard to aid to Finland, give unquestionable evidence that pressure and intimidation have been brought to bear on the northern countries by the Reich.

Londoners Hear Antiaircraft Fire

week totaled 39,276 tons and the 15 neutrals 46,801 tons.

The list included the neutral losses previously unannounced: The 5,396-ton Finnish ship Wilja, sunk by an explosion February 16, with the crew rescued; and the 4,297-ton Norwegian steamer Sangstad, torpedoed February 18 with the crew of 28 and 1 passenger saved. It was not known whether others were aboard the Sangstad.

A Reuters (British news agency) dispatch from Oslo today said that the Norwegian steamer Hop, 1,365 tons, was believed lost with her crew of 17. The Hop sailed from Bergen for England February 3.

The British naval source said that "probably" 13 of the 15 neutral vessels were sunk by submarines without warning.

Nazi Trawler Taken

The admiralty also disclosed the capture of the German trawler Herrlichkeit, 268 tons, by a British warship which brought her into a British port.

The naval source compared last week's British and neutral shipping losses with those of April, 1917, when Germany's World War unrestricted submarine campaign was at its height and when weekly sinkings averaged 105 British, Allied and neutral ships with a tonnage of 203,000.

This source added that 160 neutral ships were given British convoy protection during last week and that only 19 ships had been lost out of 8,969 convoyed since the war started.

Suit Seeks to Prevent Nazis Extending Polish Grab to D. C.

Mr. and Mrs. Abe Greenbaum, 1440 Whittier street northwest, looking at a picture of Mrs. Greenbaum's sister, Mrs. Golda S. Chleboszki, trapped in Poland by the German invasion

Couple Asks Court to Void Deed Of $9,000 Home to Couple Trapped By Invasion; Confiscation Feared

How a Polish family about to seek haven in America was trapped by the Nazi invasion was revealed yesterday when a suit was filed in the District Court to protect their property here from a possible claim by the German Reich.

For several years, Mr. and Mrs. Abe Greenbaum, 1440 Whittier street northwest, have been trying to arrange visas so Mrs. Greenbaum's sister, Mrs. Golda Chleboszki, could come to America with her two children and her husband, Chaim. The Chleboszkis lived in Kalisz, Poland.

For some years the Chleboszkis were blocked by the immigration quota, then by difficulty in satisfying the American authorities that they would be able to maintain themselves. To overcome this difficulty, the Greenbaums last August 14 deposited $4,000 for the Chleboszkis in the Anacostia Building Association. To guarantee that the Chleboszkis would have a home here, the Greenbaums on last August 16 deeded them a house at 2703 Eleventh street northwest, valued at $9,000. Solomon Greenbaum, brother of Abe, planned to have Chleboszki, who is a tailor, enter his shop.

The Greenbaums' attorney, Nathan S. Lubar, said that apparently the Chleboszkis were about to receive their visas last September when Germany invaded Poland. Since then nothing has been heard of the Polish family.

The Greenbaums asked the court to void the deed by which they conveyed the property, or to appoint them trustees so that they might take care of it. Lubar said it was feared the German Reich might confiscate the property of the Chleboszkis in Poland and then claim the house in Washington.

114 U. S. Ships Sold Since War

then, but there are still many idle ships—a fact that was illustrated the other day by the Maritime Commission's announcement that the one-time mutiny-ridden Algic and two other freighters had been put up for sale.

Point to Ship-Building Plan

But the chief difference between the situation today and that of the World War period, Maritime Commission spokesmen emphasize, is that today the United States is engaged in a mammoth ship-building program, a program that is to add 500 ships to America's merchant marine, 50 a year for 10 years.

Already the $16,000,000 passenger liner America and 39 freighters have been launched under this program. Something like 141 other ships are under construction, and are sliding down the ways at an average of one a week.

Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, U. S. N. (retired), chairman of the Maritime Commission, recently told a Senate Committee that these new American ships are 50 per cent faster than the old Hog Island ships of the last war, and yet consume 50 per cent less fuel. His statement was borne out recently by the new freighter Challenge, which left New York for India a month after an old Hog Island vessel, and got back to New York the same day as the other vessel, with 1,000 tons more cargo.

Cash for New Vessels

In many instances, the money that American ship companies are receiving for ships sold to foreign interests is being put into these new ships. Thus, the United States Lines, which has just sold eight ships to Belgium, has contracted to take five freighters and five combination passenger-freighters, not to mention the America, the new queen of its fleet, which is to have her maiden voyage soon.

Thomas M. Woodward, a member of the Maritime Commission, has this to say in answer to critics of the transfer policy of the commission:

"The average age of transferred ships is from 20 to 50 years . . . No ship which the Navy or the Maritime Commission considers essential has been transferred . . .

"The market for old ships is now good; the ships are, in our judgment, obsolete, and it has appeared to the commission to be sound business to sell the old 'jalopies' and use the money for replacements . . ."

Swedes Demand Help Be Given Finns Despite Opposition From King Gustav

By the Associated Press

Stockholm, Feb. 20.—Swedes banded together in a movement for active aid for Finland heightened tonight the political upheaval which has drawn aged King Gustaf into a controversy over his government's refusal to intervene with troops against Russia.

In general, politicians insisted an acute political crisis had been averted, largely by the King's own declaration in support of nonintervention in Finland. But, although some of the leaders of the so-called Finnish-aid "activists" said they could not proceed against the monarch's wishes, it was questionable whether the activists would abandon their drive for direct military help. Today they sent a strong plea to Premier Per Albin Hansson.

Abdication Is Hinted

Indicative of the extent to which even the King has become involved in the issue, the chief editor of the Norwegian Tidens Tegn, writing from Stockholm, hinted that Swedish military men might press for a decision on intervention, "a sort of coup d'etat," which would lead to King Gustaf's abdication and the accession of the Crown Prince.

In Swedish political circles this theory was generally ridiculed, and the Stockholm newspaper Tidningen, which has supported the "activist" movement, approved the King's statement that he had refused military intervention to Finland "with sorrow in my heart" in order to keep Sweden out of both European wars.

However, the Tidningen said it was "deeply pessimistic" over Sweden's future.

The "activists" resolution today was made in the name of "The Northern Freedom Conference." Although it did not specifically ask for direct military intervention in Finland it urged that Sweden send aid "so vigorously that any other help is unnecessary."

"Finland's cause is ours," the resolution said, "the Finnish front must be held and helped by Swedish assistance. Intervention from states outside the north would threaten to make our country a war theater."

May Appeal to Allies

(In the face of Swedish refusal of direct military aid, the Finns are reported contemplating an appeal for troops to the Western Allies. This would bring into formal question the passage of Allied troops through Scandinavia. The Swedish foreign office has said this will not be permitted.)

The activists also appealed to Swedish youth to "fill the gaps in the Finnish army," declaring "the deciding hour has come!"

Premier Hansson said his government intended to give Finland "all aid possible," but only under "our chosen political framework" or neutrality.

German Threats Inferred

Copenhagen, Feb. 20 (U.P.).—Leading Scandinavian newspapers charged today Germany had threatened to involve Sweden in the European war if Sweden actively participated in the military defense of Finland.

They said that from the declarations of the Swedish premier and the Swedish King it was clear some country or countries had threatened Sweden with war. Leading Swedish and Finnish newspapers claimed that Germany was that country.

The semi-official Finnish newspaper Helsingin Sanomat, in Helsinki, accused Sweden of hurting the "vital interests of Sweden" by giving way before the "real or imaginary threat" of involvement in a general war.

John Manning Funeral Today At Arlington

Funeral services for John Bernard (Jack) Manning, 43, dance instructor and former Broadway star, will be held at 2 p. m. today at Hines funeral home, 2901 Fourteenth street northwest. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Mr. Manning died Sunday at the home of Leroy Thayer, 6435 Barnaby street northwest, after collapsing in the studio of Adelaide Courtney, 3308 Fourteenth street northwest, where he was conducting an exhibition for members of the National Capital Dance Association.

In the World War, Mr. Manning served in the Navy at New Haven, Conn., where he staged service musical shows.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Hill Manning; his mother, Mrs. Grace Manning, and two sisters, the Misses Grace and Mary Manning.

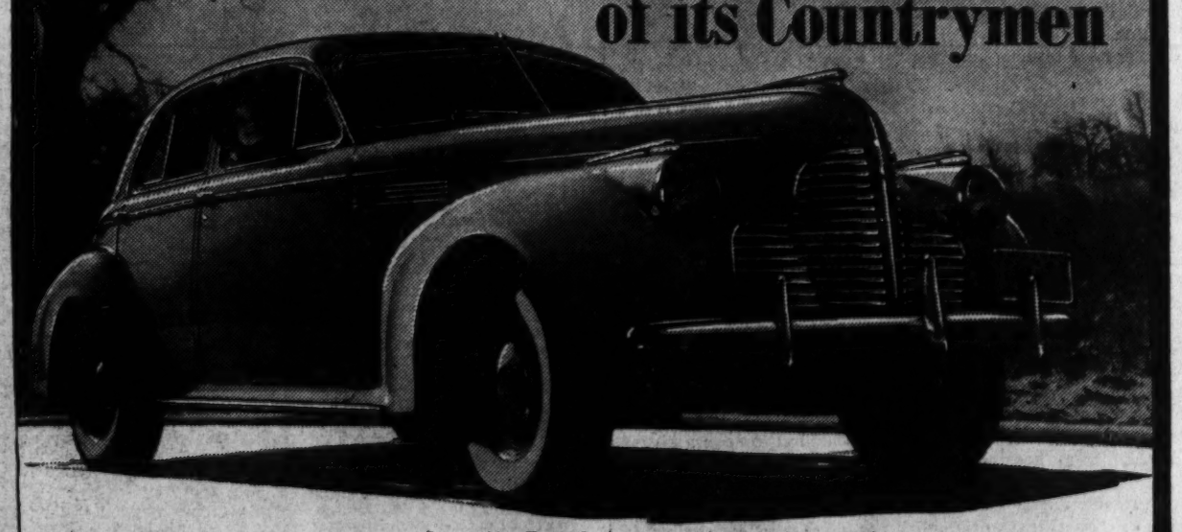
First in the Hearts of its Countrymen



YOU don't have to look farther than the nearest parking lot to see how the public has taken to this 1940 Buick.

Although it is not the largest seller, polls of public opinion mark it clearly as the car "first in the hearts of its countrymen."

On general appearance, for instance, Buick gets better than a 19% vote as best looking, to 11% for the Number Two car.

Its thrifty Dynaflash power plant, now balanced after assembly, gives it twice as many Best-of-the-Bunch votes as any other, as does its chassis construction.

With soft and easy coil springs all around it's only natural that some two and a half times as many people pick Buick as best for ride. And a two to one vote on room is understandable in view of the SUPER'S close-to-five-feet front seat.

But the really satisfying thing to us is the way people size up Buick's value.

Half again as many people pick Buick as best buy as pick any other. And three out of five who rate Buick No. 1 say it's the value that gives it the edge.

So it's not surprising when polls show more people wanting Buick than want any other car — and when Buick's midwinter sales hit new peaks.

And shouldn't that, in turn, logically suggest: better get yours now — and be sure of having it?

The model illustrated is the Buick SUPER *model 51 four-door touring sedan $1109 delivered at Flint, Mich. White sidewall tires additional.

Not a six but an EIGHT for $895 and up delivered at Flint, Mich. *Transportation based on rail rates, state and local taxes (if any), optional equipment and accessories extra. Prices subject to change without notice.

'Oil' Key Word If War Breaks In Near East

seas their supply is certain, but Germany must seek a constant flow. This nonfighting war enables Germany to conserve her supplies and build up reserves but once the real fighting starts, it will be absolutely necessary to keep great supplies of oil rolling into the Reich.

If the Allies are able to cut off this supply, the war is over.

I believe this is one of several reasons why France sent Gen. Weygand here to build up an army so as to be able to strike deep into the Balkans when the moment comes.

If Germany attacks Rumania and the latter can hold out until Weygand rushes to the rescue with the Anglo-French forces being massed in the Near East and with the probable help of the Turks, it may prove to be a vastly different story than the easy conquest of Rumania in 1915.

Turks' Position Important

Some military authorities are convinced these great armies of the Near East might be able to arrive in time to check the German drive and save the Rumanian oil fields. This may be getting into the realm of pure speculation, but there's no speculation about the power of the Anglo-French armies in this region.

The most important part of the picture is Turkey's position. If she throws her full weight to the side of the Allies and opens the Straits into the Black Sea in the event of a German attack on Rumania, then this force could be quickly moved by sea for the assistance of the Rumanians if they can hold out long enough.

Another possible route would be through Saloniki and north Greece, where the Allies fought desperately in the last war, finally breaking through in the September, 1918, drive to Budapest.

But even Weygand himself does not know where and when there will be action. The Soviets are imponderable. No one can guess what their next move may be.

If the Allies reach the Black Sea, they can certainly cut off all tankers carrying oil from Russia for Germany.

But let me reiterate: No one knows when, where, or what will happen. Weygand is a cagey old "fireman" ready for the outbreak of a fire anywhere at any time.

Pass of Destiny

Today, I drove by troops from Algiers marching along a narrow pass 5 miles north of Beirut over a bridge of the famous Dog River.

It is a pass of history. And even today you can see 17 great tablets commemorating the conquering armies that have used the Dog River Pass from Rameses II in the thirteenth century B. C. to Gen. Gouraud's French army in 1920.

Watching the lean, hard fighters from Algiers, I could not help but feel that soon another tablet will be added to this pass of history.

I stopped my car, climbed the old Roman roads at the side of the mountain, and looked down the pass. I felt the same as I did 20 years ago when I first saw the British Tommies at the great Khyber Pass of northwest India.

Echoes from long ago rolled up from the dusty road below. Three thousand years of marching men have gone through this pass, singing martial songs, their banners snapping in the breeze.

Way back in the olden days, they carried bronze swords.

These worriors of today carried machine guns and trench mortars.

Otherwise, there is little difference.

The Egyptians, Persians, Greeks, Assyrians, Chaldeans, Romans, Turks, Crusaders and the war-weary British and French all walked through this pass of destiny.

800 Red Bombers Rain Death Over Wide Area of Finland

Air Sleds Smashed

Helsinki, Feb. 20 (AP).—The Finnish defenders of the battered Mannerheim Line were reported tonight to have scattered a Soviet swarm of strange, bug-like "air motor sleds" which swarmed across the ice of Lake Ladoga in an attempt to skirt stubborn land fortifications in a surprise coup.

At least 200 Russians were killed and the entire detachment dispersed, the Finns said, after the Russians, "in great force" had set out from the Taipale area in a fleet of bobsleds, powered by propellers.

Between the Gulf of Finland and Lake Muola, spearhead of the 20-day Red army drive on the half-ruined city of Viipuri, an official Finnish communique said with military terseness: "Enemy attacks continued . . . the attacks were repulsed."

On the ice of Lake Suvanto, inland from Lake Ladoga near Taipale, Red army infantry pressure also was declared beaten back.

Taipale, Lake Ladoga and Lake Suvanto are on the eastern terminus of the Mannerheim Line; besieged Viipuri, with the conflict licking almost at its edges, stands behind the western end of the line, on the Gulf of Finland.

The undramatic language of the Finnish communique gave only a hint of the intensity and gravity of the struggle on the isthmus south of Viipuri—(which Soviet sources have predicted would be captured by Friday).

Fighting drew so near to Viipuri, with artillery shells screaming amidst ruined buildings, that Finns classed the city as a sector of the fighting front, although not necessarily in immediate danger of capture.

Most of Viipuri's 74,000 inhabitants were removed before the Russian invasion started.

Tonight a Finnish army spokesman said that the Finns' new positions were as strong as or stronger than before, but there was acknowledgment that the situation could again become critical if Russia should launch a new series of major attacks with force equal to that of the attacks of the past 18 days.

The Finns counted on a breakdown of Soviet supply lines being hastened by Finnish aviators.

Northeast of Lake Ladoga, more than 50 miles across the lake from the isthmus fighting, the Finns declared there was "continued cleaning up on bases taken from the enemy" where destruction of Russia's Eighteenth Army Division was reported yesterday.

Further north in the Kuhmo region, about half way along the Finnish-Russian boundary, "a few strong points" were reported captured by the Finns in fighting with "individual enemy detachments."

only periodically to advise the Federal Reserve Board with regard to matters pertaining to the operation of the Federal Reserve System.

The group poined out, however, that a bill to discontinue foreign silver purchases, introduced by Senator Townsend (Republican), Delaware, was now before the Senate Banking Committee. It asked the Reserve Board to transmit a copy of is resolution to the committee.

Reserve Board officials said the resolution would be referred as requested. It was recalled that Chairman Marriner S. Eccles had taken the same position with regard to foreign silver purchases.

"The council," its resolution said, "is unanimously of the opinion that these purchases of foreign silver should be discontinued forthwith, particularly in view of the fact that silver purchases increase the already excessively large bank reserves."

Excess Reserves Grow

Due mainly to gold and silver imports, excess reserves or idle funds of Federal Reserve member banks have risen to the unprecedented total of $5,600,000,000. This huge money supply has depressed interest rates on Government and other high-grade securities. Reserve Board officials maintain that it is so large as to be uncontrollable, and, as a result, constitutes an inflation threat.

The council's action was hailed by Townsend and denounced by members of the Senate silver bloc.

"That's great," Townsend exclaimed. "It should strengthen my chances of getting the bill out of the committee with a favorable report."

Senator Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, predicted that the Townsend bill would be killed. He said silver purchases had benefited China.

Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, saw in the council's recommendation a forerunner to an attempt to reduce the subsidy which the Treasury is required to pay domestic silver producers.

Townsend pointed out that his bill was not directed at the domestic silver subsidy.

Action on Bill Deferred

Action on the Townsend bill has been deferred by the Senate Banking Committee pending consultation with Administration officials.

Purchase of foreign silver is provided for under the 1934 silver purchase act, which was forced on the Administration by the silver bloc. This bill provides for purchase by the Treasury of silver until the $1.29 per ounce monetary value equals one-third the value of gold holdings or until the price of silver is increased to $1.29 an ounce.

Both objectives are still remote. Due to the enormous gold imports in recent years, the ratio of silver to gold has been declining, despite continued silver purchases. The Treasury last year cut the price it pays for foreign silver to 35 cents an ounce.

The Federal Advisory Council opposed the silver purchase act at the time it was proposed. Its action yesterday, therefore, was in line with its former stand.

MAXINE INTO MAYFLOWER. Remember Maxine Tappan who played that record-breaking engagement in the Mayflower Lounge two years ago? She'll be back at the Mayflower on Friday with Dick Koons' orchestra. Maxine's gift of rhythm is so superb that she was christened the "First Lady of Swing" while she was in Washington. In recent months she's been on national tours with the bands of Ozzie Nelson and Gus Arnheim.

ART BARKER TO MAYFAIR. After Maria, Joann and Joy wind up their Mayfair engagement on March 2, it's pretty certain that the Art Barker Trio, including Jole and Walter Scott, will return. This crew, enjoyed so much by our town last summer, is in Florida now and Mayfair's Jimmy Byrd is talking turkey to them via wire . . . Maria, Joann and Joy will vacation in Washington during the first week in March. That's fine news for all the pals and admirers they've made in the Mayfair.

SHOW GIRL CONSCIOUS. Eddy Brandt's Metronone Room orchestra is fast coming down with show girl fever. Skeets" Polen, drummer, is in a dither every day until that letter arrives from Betty Allen, who's Ethel Merman's understudy in "Du-Barry Was a Lady." Fred Jaegel, pianist, is counting the days until Thelma Temple arrives at the National Theater with the "Streets of Paris." On Monday the entire band was pop-eyed when Lois Andrews, late of George White's "Scandals," arrived swathed in white fox and orchids. Lois is Betty Allen's best girl friend, stopped off in Washington on her way to Florida, just to visit a bit with "Skeets."

PLEASANT PAYNE. Personable young Roger Payne is the new assistant of Manager Richard Butler at Hotel 2400 Sixteenth Street. Mr. Payne hails from upstate New York near the Canadian border, was recently associated with the Dodge Hotel.

BLUE ROOM BUBBLE. Talia is really doing that "Bubble Dance" in the Shoreham Blue Room for the late show. Her costume consists of a veil and the bubble. The Rudy Vallee Songsters bring down the house with their "When a Gypsy Makes a Violin Cry." Those plastic blondes, True and Trudy Wilkins, are held over. Spec and Spot, the cyclomaniacs, are back on all wheels.

MAXINE TAPPAN, "First Lady of Swing," is returning to the Mayflower Lounge on Friday

PLATINUM MEMORIES. Mrs. Jean Bello, beautiful mother of the late Jean Harlow, was recently in La Salle Versailles renewing memories of Jean with Orchestra Leader Burrus Williams. Mrs. Bello wished especially to see a letter Jean had written to Burrus. Later he played the favorite tunes of America's most famed platinum blonde. They were "Melancholy Baby," "The Very Thought of You" and "Did I Remember."

ART IN THE LOTUS. Art is great sport at the Lotus this week. Paul Marin draws pictures of the ringsiders on the pretty backs of the Tip Tap Girls. But you can't take your portrait home, positively! Patrons can also draw doodles, letters or figures and dare Artist Marin to make pictures therefrom. He didn't fail, but we think he cheated a little on the letter X. . . . The new Tip Tap Girls are all fresh as daisies, twice as pretty and dance like all get-out.

ROBIN HOOD ARRIVALS. Manager "Mac" McCarthy, of the Robin Hood, knows his talent. Listen to these attractive bookings. Singer Lynne Allison will arrive on Saturday. Accordionist Eddie Whitesel, one of the best, will tune up for the supper session on Friday. Pianist-Organist "Tommy Johnson remains, naturally.

Chamberlain Has No Apology in Case Of Altmark, He Says

Frequently Chamberlain was interrupted by cheers from the opposition as well as the government benches.

A Laborite spokesman said at the conclusion of the prime minister's statement that the Labor opposition indorsed the navy's action in freeing the seamen, the exact number of whom was given by the premier as 299 officers and men of merchantmen sunk by the pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee.

No Reply Received

Chamberlain said that apart from the original protest from Oslo, the government has not received any official communication from the Norwegian government. He then proceeded to discuss Koht's statement of the Norwegian position.

Cries of "Hear! Hear!" rang out as the premier said Koht's statement made "action, or rather inaction, more difficult to understand than was originally supposed."

To Chamberlain, Koht's statement that the Norwegian authorities did not know that British prisoners were aboard the Altmark, was "most surprising" in view of the wide publicity that had been given the matter.

Failure of the Norwegians to search the ship and to do more than to "protest" when it was discovered to be a prison ship, using its wireless in territorial waters, together with the refusal of the Norwegian naval officers to cooperate with the British in preventing a violation of neutrality by Germany, were all cited as justification of the British action.

Chamberlain said Norway "displayed complete indifference as to the use which might be made of their territorial waters." But even if such "indifference" were due to German pressure, Chamberlain said, it was nevertheless "inconsistent with active impartial duty of a neutral toward ourselves as a belligerent."

Patrol of Norway Hinted

Copyright by New York Times

Paris, Feb. 20.—The Altmark incident, it was said in an official statement here today, has raised the possibility that France and Great Britain will be forced to take action to prevent Norwegian waters from being used as a refuge for German vessels.

The French presume that the stand adopted by Halvdan Koht, the Norwegian foreign minister, with regard to naval incidents and that of King Gustav of Sweden with regard to aid to Finland, give unquestionable evidence that pressure and intimidation have been brought to bear on the northern countries by the Reich.

week totaled 39,276 tons and the 15 neutrals 46,801 tons.

The list included the neutral losses previously unannounced: The 5,396-ton Finnish ship Wilja, sunk by an explosion February 16, with the crew rescued; and the 4,297-ton Norwegian steamer Sangstad, torpedoed February 18 with the crew of 28 and 1 passenger saved. It was not known whether others were aboard the Sangstad.

A Reuters (British news agency) dispatch from Oslo today said that the Norwegian steamer Hop, 1,365 tons, was believed lost with her crew of 17. The Hop sailed from Bergen for England February 3.

The British naval source said that "probably" 13 of the 15 neutral vessels were sunk by submarines without warning.

Nazi Trawler Taken

The admiralty also disclosed the capture of the German trawler Herrlichkeit, 268 tons, by a British warship which brought her into a British port.

The naval source compared last week's British and neutral shipping losses with those of April, 1917, when Germany's World War unrestricted submarine campaign was at its height and when weekly sinkings averaged 105 British, Allied and neutral ships with a tonnage of 203,000.

This source added that 160 neutral ships were given British convoy protection during last week and that only 19 ships had been lost out of 8,960 convoyed since the war started.

Suit Seeks to Prevent Nazis Extending Polish Grab to D. C.

Couple Asks Court to Void Deed Of $9,000 Home to Couple Trapped By Invasion; Confiscation Feared

How a Polish family about to seek haven in America was trapped by the Nazi invasion was revealed yesterday when a suit was filed in the District Court to protect their property here from a possible claim by the German Reich.

For several years, Mr. and Mrs. Abe Greenbaum, 1440 Whittier street northwest, have been trying to arrange visas so Mrs. Greenbaum's sister, Mrs. Golda Chleboszki, could come to America with her two children and her husband, Chaim. The Chleboszkis lived in Kalisz, Poland.

For some years the Chleboszkis were blocked by the immigration quota, then by difficulty in satisfying the American authorities that they would be able to maintain themselves. To overcome this difficulty, the Greenbaums last August 14 deposited $4,000 for the Chleboszkis in the Anacostia Building Association. To guarantee that the Chleboszkis would have a home here, the Greenbaums on last August 16 deeded them a house at 2703 Eleventh street northwest, valued at $9,000. Solomon Greenbaum, brother of Abe, planned to have Chleboszki, who is a tailor, enter his shop.

The Greenbaums' attorney, Nathan S. Lubar, said that apparently the Chleboszkis were about to receive their visas last September when Germany invaded Poland. Since then nothing has been heard of the Polish family.

The Greenbaums asked the court to void the deed by which they conveyed the property, or to appoint them trustees so that they might take care of it. Lubar said it was feared the German Reich might confiscate the property of the Chleboszkis in Poland and then claim the house in Washington.

then, but there are still many idle ships—a fact that was illustrated the other day by the Maritime Commission's announcement that the one-time mutiny-ridden Algic and two other freighters had been put up for sale.

Point to Ship-Building Plan

But the chief difference between the situation today and that of the World War period, Maritime Commission spokesmen emphasize, is that today the United States is engaged in a mammoth ship-building program, a program that is to add 500 ships to America's merchant marine, 50 a year for 10 years.

Already the $16,000,000 passenger liner America and 39 freighters have been launched under this program. Something like 141 other ships are under construction, and are sliding down the ways at an average of one a week.

Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, U. S. N. (retired), chairman of the Maritime Commission, recently told a Senate Committee that these new American ships are 50 per cent faster than the old Hog Island ships of the last war, and yet consume 50 per cent less fuel. His statement was borne out recently by the new freighter Challenge, which left New York for India a month after an old Hog Island vessel, and got back to New York the same day as the other vessel, with 1,000 tons more cargo.

Cash for New Vessels

In many instances, the money that American ship companies are receiving for ships sold to foreign interests is being put into these new ships. Thus, the United States Lines, which has just sold eight ships to Belgium, has contracted to take five freighters and five combination passenger-freighters, not to mention the America, the new queen of its fleet, which is to have her maiden voyage soon.

Thomas M. Woodward, a member of the Maritime Commission, has this to say in answer to critics of the transfer policy of the commission:

"The average age of transferred ships is from 20 to 50 years . . . No ship which the Navy or the Maritime Commission considers essential has been transferred . . .

"The market for old ships is now good; the ships are, in our judgment, obsolete, and it has appeared to the commission to be sound business to sell the old 'jalopies' and use the money for replacements . . ."

Swedes Demand Help Be Given Finns Despite Opposition From King Gustav

By the Associated Press

Stockholm, Feb. 20.—Swedes banded together in a movement for active aid for Finland heightened tonight the political upheaval which has drawn aged King Gustaf into a controversy over his government's refusal to intervene with troops against Russia.

In general, politicians insisted an acute political crisis had been averted, largely by the King's own declaration in support of nonintervention in Finland. But, although some of the leaders of the so-called Finnish-aid "activists" said they could not proceed against the monarch's wishes, it was questionable whether the activists would abandon their drive for direct military help. Today they sent a strong plea to Premier Per Albin Hansson.

Abdication Is Hinted

Indicative of the extent to which even the King has become involved in the issue, the chief editor of the Norwegian Tidens Tegn, writing from Stockholm, hinted that Swedish military men might press for a decision on intervention, "a sort of coup d'etat," which would lead to King Gustaf's abdication and the accession of the Crown Prince.

In Swedish political circles this theory was generally ridiculed, and the Stockholm newspaper Tidningen, which has supported the "activist" movement, approved the King's statement that he had refused military intervention to Finland "with sorrow in my heart" in order to keep Sweden out of both European wars.

However, the Tidningen said it was "deeply pessimistic" over Sweden's future.

The "activists" resolution today was made in the name of "The Northern Freedom Conference." Although it did not specifically ask for direct military intervention in Finland it urged that Sweden send aid "so vigorously that any other help is unnecessary."

"Finland's cause is ours," the resolution said, "the Finnish front must be held and helped by Swedish assistance. Intervention from states outside the north would threaten to make our country a war theater."

May Appeal to Allies

(In the face of Swedish refusal of direct military aid, the Finns are reported contemplating an appeal for troops to the Western Allies. This would bring into formal question the passage of Allied troops through Scandinavia. The Swedish foreign office has said this will not be permitted.)

The activists also appealed to Swedish youth to "fill the gaps in the Finnish army," declaring "the deciding hour has come!"

Premier Hansson said his government intended to give Finland "all aid possible," but only under "our chosen political framework" or neutrality.

German Threats Inferred

Copenhagen, Feb. 20 (U.P.).—Leading Scandinavian newspapers charged today Germany had threatened to involve Sweden in the European war if Sweden actively participated in the military defense of Finland.

They said that from the declarations of the Swedish premier and the Swedish King it was clear some country or countries had threatened Sweden with war. Leading Swedish and Finnish newspapers claimed that Germany was that country.

The semi-official Finnish newspaper Helsingin Sanomat, in Helsinki, accused Sweden of hurting the "vital interests of Sweden" by giving way before the "real or imaginary threat" of involvement in a general war.

John Manning Funeral Today At Arlington

Funeral services for John Bernard (Jack) Manning, 43, dance instructor and former Broadway star, will be held at 2 p. m. today at Hines funeral home, 2901 Fourteenth street northwest. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Mr. Manning died Sunday at the home of Leroy Thayer, 6435 Barnaby street northwest, after collapsing in the studio of Adelaide Courtney, 3308 Fourteenth street northwest, where he was conducting an exhibition for members of the National Capital Dance Association.

In the World War, Mr. Manning served in the Navy at New Haven, Conn., where he staged service musical shows.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Hill Manning; his mother, Mrs. Grace Manning, and two sisters, the Misses Grace and Mary Manning.

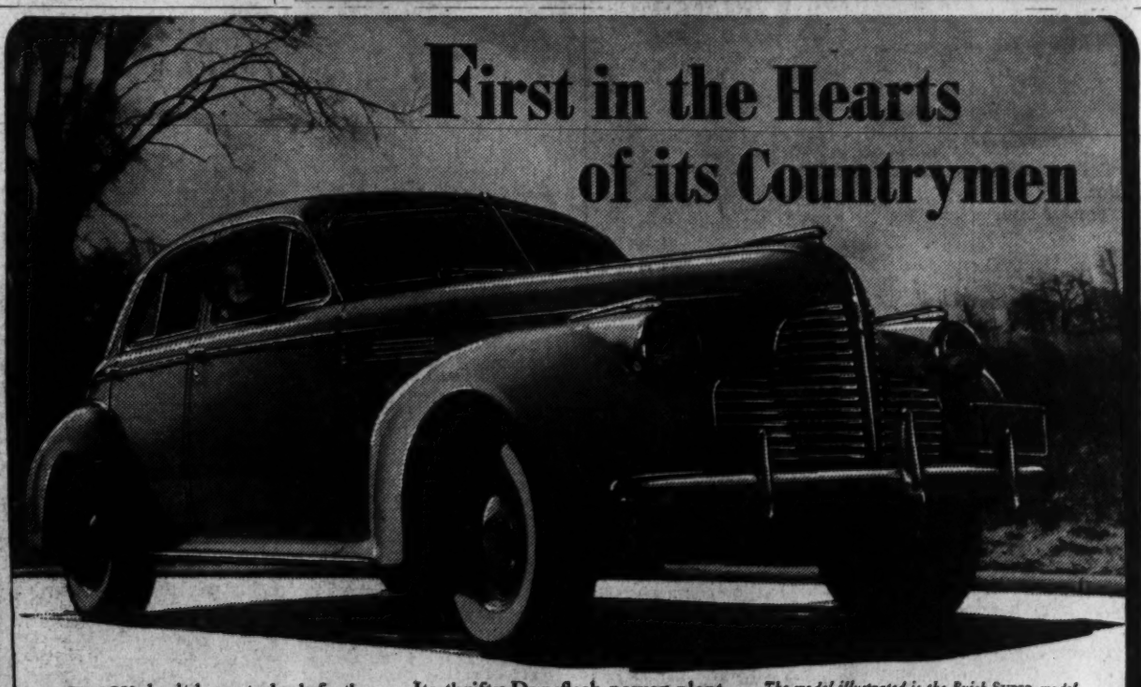
First in the Hearts of its Countrymen



YOU don't have to look farther than the nearest parking lot to see how the public has taken to this 1940 Buick.

Although it is not the largest seller, polls of public opinion mark it clearly as the car "first in the hearts of its countrymen."

On general appearance, for instance, Buick gets better than a 19% vote as best looking, to 11% for the Number Two car.

Its thrifty Dynaflash power plant, now balanced after assembly, gives it twice as many Best-of-the-Bunch votes as any other, as does its chassis construction.

With soft and easy coil springs all around it's only natural that some two and a half times as many people pick Buick as best for ride. And a two to one vote on room is understandable in view of the SUPER'S close-to-five-feet front seat.

But the really satisfying thing to us is the way people size up Buick's value.

Half again as many people pick Buick as best buy as pick any other. And three out of five who rate Buick No. 1 say it's the value that gives it the edge.

So it's not surprising when polls show more people wanting Buick than want any other car — and when Buick's midwinter sales hit new peaks.

And shouldn't that, in turn, logically suggest: better get yours now — and be sure of having it?

Sweden's No

The strength of Swedish sentiment in favor of direct military intervention on behalf of Finland can be gauged by the fact that King Gustav himself has found it necessary publicly to oppose that demand and to favor, instead, the stand taken by the government in behalf of "the maximum of voluntary aid."

The aged and beloved monarch did not try to conceal his own or his nation's profound sympathies for Finland. He openly admitted that Sweden has from the beginning, "through volunteers and through great help in other ways," tried to assist its hard-pressed neighbor. Indeed no nation has furnished Finland with greater aid than has Sweden. But to order Swedish regiments to the defense of the crumbling Mannerheim Line, said King Gustav, "would mean not only war against Russia, but immediate involvement in the great war with other powers."

It is plain from this that it is not merely Russia that Sweden fears. A greater fear is that of attack from Germany. And once involved in war, the monarch argued, it would not be possible for Sweden "to give Finland even the amount of aid we now provide for her."

This view may prove shortsighted. There can be no disguising the fact that if the Finns are defeated, and Sweden's negative response to Finland's appeal for direct military aid may mean the latter's doom, the plight of the other Scandinavian nations will be intensified. Yet it is impossible not to sympathize with the Swedish government's decision or the mental agonies which produced it. Nobody, least of all Americans aware of the exceedingly cautious policy of their own country, can quarrel with the Swedish stand.

The little neutrals are on the spot. Alone, each of them is in a most precarious position. But they hesitate to form a common front for fear of bringing on the very catastrophe such unity might conceivably avert. They are, because of similar considerations, equally averse to taking a bold, individual stand. They prefer to suffer the ills they have rather than fly to others that they know not of.

The Juvenile Court

The reforms effected in the Juvenile Court a few years ago have greatly increased the responsibility of the judge who presides over that institution. So there is good reason for the keen public interest in the prospective appointment of a successor to Judge Fay Bentley when her term expires this week. Her record should properly be subjected to close scrutiny.

It would be outrageous, however, if the work of an agency so vital to the welfare of children should be misrepresented at a time when the reappointment of Judge Bentley is under consideration. Probably the reorganized Juvenile Court has made some mistakes. Infallibility can no more be expected in a court for children than in any other institution directed by human beings. The important question is whether the work of the court as a whole has been constructive and intelligent.

Those who examine Judge Bentley's record objectively will not overlook the Advisory Committee to the Juvenile Court which she created in 1937. This group is composed of educators, a psychiatrist, lawyers, a doctor, social workers and representatives of various civic organizations. Its function is to study typical cases that come before the court and advise the judge as to their disposition.

By this method Judge Bentley has brought to her aid the best available advice of both experts and laymen. Methods of dealing with delinquent children, and with adults who are failing in their responsibilities toward minors, are thus devised with the greatest care before they are applied by the court. The activities of this committee, and the conscientious manner in which Judge Bentley has utilized its advice, form a cogent recommendation that she be nominated for a second term.

Before any case reaches the judge, moreover, it is thoroughly investigated by the court's director of social work. The home environment of the child, his record in school and every other circumstance connected with his delinquency are analyzed before any action is taken. Decisions are then made primarily on the basis of what is deemed best for the child.

When so large a measure of discretion is left to the juvenile judge, and when hearings are not open to the public, it is not surprising that the court should be subjected to some criticism. The desirability of maintaining this technique for the protection of children, however, is not open to question. And unfair criticism of the court will doubtless lose its weight as the constructive achievements of Judge Bently become better known.

The Embargo Issue

When the Senate Foreign Relations Committee meets today it will again confront the issue of whether or not to take action on either of the resolutions, providing for an embargo against Japan, which are now under its jurisdiction. Neither the Pittman resolution, nor the more drastic measure bearing the name of Senator Schwellenbach, will get through Congress unless this powerful Senate committee gives a prior indorsement.

The Administration is evidently not disposed to press for an embargo measure immediately. The Department of State seems to believe that abrogation of the commercial treaty with Japan is a sufficiently drastic action for the moment. It is inclined to see whether that move brings constructive results before proceeding to action which would undoubtedly arouse strong resentment in Tokyo.

At the same time the Administration does not wish to obstruct any Congressional action which would have the support of public opinion. There is some reason to believe that Secretary Hull would tacitly welcome passage of the Pittman resolution, authorizing the President to place an embargo on exports and imports and to apply exchange and credit restrictions. The Schwellenbach resolution leaves less discretionary power and would of itself put an embargo into effect.

Neither the Pittman nor the Schwellenbach resolution can be realistically considered without examining the present status of the Sino-Japanese war. After two-and-one-half years of heavy fighting the invaders control the entire seacoast, occupy an enormous territory and have broken the authority of the Nationalist government everywhere except in the mountainous and primitive western district. But the Japanese army has not yet forced Chiang Kai-shek to sue for peace and probably it will be unable to do so.

In the meantime the strain on Japan has become almost intolerable. To extreme national chagrin the army, in spite of many costly victories, is wholly unable to deliver a knockout blow. The civilian population is restless under the burden of seemingly fruitless sacrifices and is steadily becoming more so. And Japanese diplomacy is at the end of its rope. Tokyo knows all too well that its Chinese policy is now viewed with suspicion and mistrust in every great capital.

There is small consolation in the fact that Japan has only herself to blame for this situation. Had the army been satisfied with its seizure of Manchuria; had there been any effort thereafter to make a reasonable and enduring peace with Chiang Kai-shek, the Far East would long since have been stabilized and Japan would have gained solid, permanent and controlling advantages in that area. But those who direct Japanese policy have tried to use world confusion as a pretext for reducing all China to puppet status. And in doing so they have bitten off more than they can chew.

Japan's hopes for a favorable settlement now rest almost entirely on the ability of Wang Ching-wei, an ambitious politician who dislikes and envies Chiang Kai-shek, to form a stable Chinese government amenable to the wishes of Tokyo. But the competence of Wang, despised by most Chinese Nationalists as a traitor, is very dubious in this respect. At best it would take months for him to build a new regime with any stability. And when completed it would need the constant support of Japanese bayonets.

It follows that the reasonable and hopeful course for Japan to pursue is to swallow false pride and treat for peace direct with Chiang Kai-shek, who has more than demonstrated his right to speak for united China. At present Japan could probably obtain far-reaching concessions from Chiang and, more valuable, it could win the friendship instead of the enduring enmity of the Chinese nation. But if Tokyo continues to blunder, and to drive the iron of conquest deeper into the soul of the Chinese people, the end for the island empire must be disaster.

It follows that the role of the United States, anxious to be friends with China and Japan alike, should be the exertion of quiet pressure in behalf of the only reasonable settlement. It should be made plain that if Japan continues to refuse to make peace this country will be forced to withdraw the support which, very much against the will of an important section of public opinion, we have been and are still lending to Tokyo's unbridled schemes of conquest.

The Pittman resolution, therefore, is wholly in order. It would be well to place the power which it contemplates in the hands of the Executive without further delay. The use of the power thereby afforded would then depend on whether Japan makes any voluntary move for a constructive peace, or continues to force an aggression which without indirect American support would soon be doomed to failure.

Americanization Wanted

The Seal bill has at last been sent to Capitol Hill, with what may prove to be its death warrant attached. The appeal of Washington residents for a larger measure of home rule has been sidetracked. And even the milk-and-water advice of the city's appointed officials, as embodied in this bill, has been further diluted by the unsolicited criticism of five Federal agencies.

It was the advice of the Board of Commissioners which the House subcommittee on reorganization of the District government requested. But the Commissioners were not permitted to submit their proposed bill until it had been mulled over by various Federal officials who naturally have only a secondary interest in the District as a municipality. This procedure alone gives Congress a pointed illustration of the grave handicap under which the so-called local government operates.

The Federal officials to whom the Seal bill was submitted by the Budget Bureau regard the District as merely a subsidiary agency of the National Government. So far as the present law is concerned, they are unquestionably right. What they fail to understand is that the reorganization movement now under way is an attempt to free this city of 625,000 disfranchised residents from its impotence and to give it some measure of self-government.

Some of the objections to the Seal bill are nevertheless helpful in pointing the issue. Director Harold D. Smith of the Budget Bureau complains, for example, that the bill cannot be considered "an adequate or final solution" of the local reorganization problem. Acting Comptroller General R. W. Elliott believes that if the present relationship between the District and his office is to be disturbed the break should be complete—that the Comptroller General should be divested of all authority over financial transactions of the District.

In both instances these officials are protesting against halfway measures. They do not wish to be relieved of control over the District's finances if the local government is to remain an appendage to the Federal Government. That attitude is wholly reasonable. The basic fault lies in the bill approved by the Commissioners. It is a halfway measure pretending to create a fullfledged District regime, but actually leaving the most vital municipal powers in the hands of Federal agencies.

Two courses are open to Representative Kennedy's reorganization subcommittee. It can accept the Seal bill, with such amendments as seem desirable, and ignore the protests of Federal agencies which place their functional responsibility above the cause of District reform. That course probably would not lead to satisfactory results, but it would be a step in the right direction.

Far more promising, however, would be a decision to go ahead with a comprehensive reorganization plan designed to give Washingtonians a voice in their own government. That would not be as difficult as may at first appear. The committee already has the Griffenhagen plan before it. Indeed, the Seal bill grew out of a request for suggested amendments to Mr. Kennedy's bill based on the Griffenhagen study.

The first principles of American government call for a separation of the District from other governmental establishments, except that Congress would continue to enact basic legislation for the city. That is the issue which should be laid before the House and Senate. If any lesser solution is proposed by the District committees, they will have the problem of Americanizing the Capital City thrust upon them again and again until a satisfactory answer to its plea is finally given.

Rise Of The Nickelodeon

From the Detroit News.

A reference in the report of the death of Harry Davis, in Pittsburgh, to the deceased as the father of the nickelodeon will hardly go unchallenged. It may be that Mr. Davis was first to open a 5-cent movie in the country, but in any new form of entertainment which may break forth in a hundred places the claims to originality are many and impossible to establish or disprove.

Davis began in 1905 with "The Great Train Robbery," but this was also the year in which Marcus Loew rented an upstairs hall in Cincinnati, borrowed chairs from the undertaker below, and put on a film called "Three Little Blackberries." The boxoffice man was also the projectionist.

Some weeks later, a down-and-out tragedian was hired by the new impresario to take tickets at the door. Unwilling to see so ripe a talent submerged, Loew had him also recite "Boots" between reels, which he did up to 30 times a day. Thus, according to Loew in after years, was the first combination stage-and-screen policy born. But he may have been in error in this, for "firsts" in the amusement world are notoriously undependable. The name nickelodeon may have originated with the Pittsburgh impresario, but even with this some doubter will take issue. The mists of controversial opinion hang nowhere as heavy as over questions of theatrical precedence.

Plight Of Neutrals

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Sweden and Norway are very seriously threatened by Russia, and somewhat by Germany. Yet international law demands that Sweden shall prohibit troops marching across her land to a war which is really in defense of Sweden, and that Norway shall actively protect belligerent vessels which are using her territorial waters for a safe passage.

Ain't international law wonderful?

Germany considers that she is justified in using submarines as commerce destroyers. It is universally agreed that submarines cannot so act effectively without violating the traditional rules of sea warfare. So Germany, logically, disregards those rules in her own action.

Neutral sailors on peaceful errands have been killed by submarines. Yet Germany is profoundly shocked at the awful wickedness of those same persecuted neutrals when they not commit but even fail to prevent an alleged violation of the same traditional rules which she has discarded for herself.

The Altmark was a battleship auxiliary and was still continuing her raiding activity, since she had the prisoners aboard. Her captain lied to the Norwegians about this vital matter. Yet when she was treated accordingly the Germans shrieked to high heaven about piracy.

It would seem that the Germans think they are privileged to violate all laws, but that even when they are in the act of doing so others must scrupulously observe the laws in their favor.

Unfair Criticism?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I was much impressed with Mary Buist Hope's letter of Wednesday, February 14, in which she scored Democrats and others for fighting Mr. Roosevelt. Pray tell me how can any fair-minded man or woman, most especially those of us in the lower walks of life, criticize him or Mrs. Roosevelt? How can unthinking citizens criticize our President and his wife who have done more for the poor and needy, the lame and the blind, regardless of race or creed, than any other President we have ever had?

Can We Wonder?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Unlike Shakespear's Cassius, President Roosevelt laughs easily. Nevertheless, his political enemies had better be on their guard. He may be laughing at them.

Men who voted against him when he ran in 1932, and who repeated with fervor and delight in 1936, are raging mad today because he threatens to let them vote against him again in 1940.

Can we wonder the President keeps them in suspense—and laughs? ALBERT A. VOLK.

Self-Government In The District

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post of February 18, Mr. William J. Conlyn, calls attention to certain chapters in the history of the District that are far from edifying and concludes therefrom that "the best way to ruin the District is to confer on its residents the right of suffrage."

The periods referred to by Mr. Conlyn were certainly not happy ones, especially the decade between 1868 and 1878, but it so happens that during these periods the District had little more than a semblance of self-government, and ultimately even this was withdrawn. The elective bodies occasionally provided could enact legislation, but this was subject to veto by Congress down to the smallest regulation.

Furthermore, commissions or boards the members of which were appointed by the President and not responsible to the District in any way spent the District's taxes as seemed to them best, with the result that the District was brought to the verge of bankruptcy. Compelled at last to "sit up and take notice," Congress passed the Act of 1878, now usually termed the "Organic Act," under which the District is now governed.

Congressman (later Senator) J. C. S. Blackburn, of Kentucky, who took charge of the bill in the House of Representatives, had this to say regarding the situation presented:

> The people of the District, no matter by what parties, or at whose hands, . . . have been pillaged, plundered and robbed, and by the agents selected by Congress, too! It is not the fault of the citizens of the District that they are now burdened by debts for improvements beyond their power to pay. You must go back to your old Board of Public Works and your Board of Audit, who made claims and allowed claims for which nothing appears. The people of the District had no voice or part in selecting these boards. They are the victims, loaded by debt they did not create or approve of, and which now, unaided, they can never pay.

The amount of the indebtedness and how incurred are thus stated by Senator George E. Spencer, of Alabama, in a minority report submitted to Congress:

> In four years only, of executive government, the debt had been increased $20,000,000, with proportionately far less to show for it than had the preceding original debt of $3,000,000; and of this increase $3,000,000 only had been authorized by the local Legislature or by the people. At the end of six years only, of a government irresponsible to the people, the public debt amounts to $25,000,000—more than one-fourth of the assessed valuation of the property of the District.

N. P. Chipman, the last (and I think the only) Delegate to Congress the District ever had, said this to the assembled Representatives:

> Do not forget that this entire community, as large as some of your States in population, is existing practically under a despotism, which might, if it would, oppress this people to a point that would bring lasting disgrace upon every one of you and tarnish the fair name of American liberty.

Mr. Conlyn refers with justifiable pride to the newspapers we have in Washington and the fine civic organizations; but who will contend that these would disappear with self-government? The weaknesses of majority rule are also pointed out, but has it not been demonstrated that, by and large and in the long run, majority rule has served mankind better than any other?

It seems a fair conclusion that were Congress to grant suffrage to the District of Columbia, the Act would contain the usual safeguards as to literacy, residence, a secret ballot, punishment for bribery, and probably proportional representation.

Mr. Conlyn need not fear that he would find it desirable to go into exile if the American principle of self-government were given operation in the Nation's Capital.

'Lack Of Spirit'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Much has been written in our papers recently urging help for Finland, and yet many Americans, including Congressmen, seem to be indifferent or in a state of apathy to the tragic struggle of Finland. The heroic, highly civilized and Christian people of Finland are being beaten to death by Soviet hordes. A spirit of God and anti-God is loose in the world as never before.

So far Finland has kept the northern gateway shut against communism, but woe betide Europe and America also if Scandinavia should go down before the forces of communism, and all decent people with a Christian spirit of liberty and humanity are crushed under the hates and greeds of Stalin and Hitler. Hitler will grab Sweden to get possession of the iron ore Germany has long coveted.

I plead with every American citizen to quickly take up their responsibilities and deluge their respective Congressmen, especially the faint-hearted ones, with demands that America give immediate help to Finland of planes, ammunitions and antiaircraft, so that they may defend themselves against the brutalities of the Soviets.

Also, the State Department must make it possible for Americans to volunteer to fight for Finland if they want to. As it stands now, without passports it is almost impossible for an American to get over there. Congress will listen to the voice of the people if the people will take the trouble to use their rights.

I cannot condone the lack of courageous spirit the United States shows in dealing with international gangsters. R. W. S.

Women Smokers

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Every woman is a potential mother and every action should be to fit herself for efficient motherhood—spiritually, mentally and physically. She should rigidly exclude from her life everything which could injure soul, mind or body so that she may transmit to oncoming generations a heritage of health, sanity and happiness. This is wise economy—divine and human.

Thus, as it has been proven that smoking is an injurious habit, one which militates against physical well-being and wholesome womanhood, I beg that women will not indulge it. MYRTLE SIGGERS.

Dorothy Thompson

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The publication in Friday's Post of Dorothy Thompson's "An Unsolicited address to the American Youth Congress" was a splendid contribution to the defense of our Republic. Every youth in America should read it, and see to it that his parents also read it.

It is such a masterpiece of common sense and plain, unanswerable truth that it ought to be reprinted and distributed in every school in America, public or private. I believe it would very greatly counteract the deceptive propaganda that has been fed to our youth of the present generation.

The Red Bird

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A red bird on a barren bough poured out its raptures bold. I listened till they died away in cloudlands gray and gold. Methought what songful joy it knew with life so brief a spark; whilst I, immortal entity, should sorrow in the dark.

The Post Impressionist

Rolling Stone

George took up the telephone and the man at the other end called him by name.

"Yes?" George said, not recognizing the voice.

The man cleared his throat slightly. "You don't know me from Adam," he said, "and I don't know you from Adam. Is that a fair enough basis on which to begin?"

George said he thought it was. The man was certainly frank. And George couldn't help noticing that his voice, his choice of words, his unseen manner, all connoted a man who knew his way about. An educated man.

"All right," the man said, "I'm one of that unfortunate breed known as writers. I'm out of a job. I'd like to talk with you. I've tried everything in town and I've got to get something to do. May I drop by now?"

There was a note of urgency in his voice. George said he didn't know that he could do anything but if the man wanted to come by, why all right.

When George returned from lunch a man sat at his desk, smoking a pipe and patiently waiting. He was a large man, not really young any more, with a large round face made up of pudgy features. He had no hat and wore a soiled gray overcoat tightly buttoned that was badly worn and too small for him. His feet, in old, broken tan shoes, were thrust back under the chair in which he sat.

As George came in the man mentioned his name and made a half-hearted attempt to rise from the chair. Then, as if it weren't necessary anyway and too much trouble to bother with, he gave it up and sank back.

George sat down, turned to the man and saw that he was searching his face with sharp keen eyes. His eyes had large, round, black pupils and the look in them was intense. The eyes seemed to be appraising George.

"Did you ever sleep in the waiting room at Union Station?" the man asked suddenly.

George admitted that so far he had been fortunate enough not to have done so.

"Well I have! I've slept there for six nights now and I'm tired of it!"

George regarded the man with considerable surprise. The tone of voice was the same as that he had heard over the telephone—really cultured, experienced, with a not-overdone use of the broad "a." The voice seemed to be coming from someone else, the words from the man in the chair.

"Well, I'm sorry," George said.

Then the man began to talk about himself. Nine years ago, he said, his first novel was published. It wasn't a big success financially—the total sales, he said, were 2,800 copies—but it brought him good reviews and a lecture tour that took him from Greenwich Village to the Middle West, even up to Michigan and Wisconsin.

He liked the lecturing. It was mostly before ladies' clubs and it paid well—all expenses and $75 or $100 a lecture. Sometimes there were even three or four lectures a week. That part was all right.

George was glad to know that.

But, the man said, it didn't last forever. And he was just as glad, too. It got monotonous after a while going over and over the same thing—the early history and settlement of a certain section of Pennsylvania and how he had adapted it in his novel. So he wrote another novel. It was just a pot boiler, he said, and even he didn't like it. It was written in Boston. But this time he changed publishers and he guessed now that was a mistake.

So he went South for a change and got a job as publicity director for a large historical pageant in one of the Carolinas. The pageant was given only in the summer, and winter came. He went to one of the cities in Tennessee and got a job on a newspaper doing a signed column of 1,700 words seven days a week for the grand sum of $75 per month. All that work, on anything in the world he wanted to write about, for only $75 per month! Well, he found out that the managing editor, who had been on the paper for 30 years, made only $125 a month. So he quit.

There followed a time of a few lectures each week for one semester at a small Southern school. This, he explained, was just to fill in. He had a lot of time so he wrote a few articles on the side, and to prove it drew a soiled, folded letter out of his pocket which was an acceptance of an article for a very successful nationally known magazine. The letter had inclosed a check for $25.

The black eyes searched George's eyes. "A writer can't write for that—and live!" the educated voice said.

At a university in Georgia he was offered a small house on the campus and $50 a month for a course of lectures on writing. And he refused it. "You can't live on it!" he complained. "You'd have to heat the house. You'd have to buy food and your clothes. Art in a garret doesn't work these days!"

George cleared his throat.

"You've told me you had to get a job," he said. "You say you've been to every newspaper in Washington and they tell you their staffs are full. Yet you were offered a job and you didn't take it. I'm not sure, but it seems to me a house on the campus of a university and $50 a month with spare time in which to write is preferable to making a bed out of a bench in the Union Station waiting room!"

For an instant the intense black eyes stared at George. Then the man suddenly rose, put his pipe in his pocket and walked out of the room.

George turned back to the work on his desk.

The Bum Rap

EDWIN LEAHY, of the Chicago Daily News, a reporter who has made a specialty of union affairs, has just finished a series of ten stories, intended, as he said, "to allay the increasing public suspicion of the labor movement."

"The purpose of these articles," he wrote, "has been to offer a basis for the conclusion that the vast majority of the trade unions are on the up-and-up and that the black sheep among them are giving the whole movement a 'bum rap.'"

Having read his series, it is my conclusion that he did not accomplish his purpose.

IN THE FIRST PLACE, he didn't show that the vast majority of the unions are on the up-and-up, but took the position that only the bad unions receive notoriety. It is true that those unions which have received notoriety lately—namely, the so-called Stagehands Union and the Union of Building Service Employes—are bad unions and not on the up-and-up. But it doesn't follow that all of the bad unions have received the same measure of publicity.

The teamsters, for example, enjoy a better reputation than they deserve because their national leadership is personally clean. In detail, however, the teamsters have been a bad lot in New York, and it is well known, of course, that on the Pacific Coast, under Dave Beck, this union established a Fascist dictatorship which not only undertook the legitimate and laudable task of raising the teamsters' wages but presumed to limit and regulate business competition by the decrees of one man.

Mr. Beck boasted that he had placed an embargo on California beer in Washington and Oregon and had taken over certain breweries and was running them because the teamsters were having a jurisdictional fight with the brewery workers.

Behind the curtain of privacy in some unions, the A. F. of L., while claiming great privilege as the body of Labor with a Capital L, has not delivered an account of its trust, and there is so much unrest and complaint within the unions that the suspicion arises that all is not necessarily on the up-and-up in the quiet unions. Union rank and file keep quiet for other reason than content.

IT SHOULD BE NOTED that the stagehands' and building service employes' unions also enjoyed quiet until a few weeks ago, and that when that quiet was disturbed the American Federation of Labor was not responsible for the outcry. The A. F. of L. was content to take its toll, or lug, off the top of the dues of the members and to let unioneering criminals get away with extortion and terrorism until the rotten conditions were exposed. Ever since then, although the best minds of the Federation have held a meeting in Miami, they have not deplored the "rottenness itself but the expose."

It seems not to occur to the American Federation of Labor that it has responsibilities to the nation which are equal to its great privileges. The betrayal of labor occurs not when foul conditions are exposed but when men elected to responsible office neglect their duty to guard the sanctity of A. F. of L. charters, and certainly to keep these charters out of the hands of criminals.

The rank and file are not necessarily content because they are quiet or because they contribute out of their poor pay to keep wages going to racketeers who have been sent to prison for robbing them. It is not in a spirit of loyalty that the rank and file reelect thieves to office in their unions so that they may be robbed again and again.

THE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR needs a reorganization and a revival of spirit in its national authority. It needs men on top who will instantly challenge intrusion into Labor with a capital L by thugs who have been underworld characters ever since they were old enough to snatch a purse and men who will demand an accounting of union moneys by arrogant grafters with prosperous sidelines who rise to the command of big component groups.

Mr. Leahy is correct, I think, in saying that the black sheep unions are giving the whole movement a bum rap. But the high command was not ignorant of the character of these black sheep unions. And still nothing has been done to this very hour to clean up those unions, and that is a worse rap, because it shows that the A. F. of L. doesn't care.

A Modern Child

THE MODERN CHILD is the core of Edwin Corle's exquisite story "Solitaire" (Dutton, $2.50), which is, to my mind, the most distinguished novel that this miserly year of 1940 has yet vouchsafed us. The publishers do not go wrong when they say that "this story has qualities that remind us at times of Robert Nathan, sometimes of Steinbeck, but Corle is neither as 'slight' as the one nor as 'tough' as the other." "Solitaire" has moments definitely reminiscent of "One More Spring," and an occasional, though less definite, whiff of "Of Mice and Men." But it is never whimsical, and even in its one moment of violence it contrives to be gentle.

It is the story of a tramp, a little girl and a rat, and I find it difficult, without telling too much of this winsome story, to explain how a story of a hobo, his pet rat and the 10-year-old daughter of a Pasadena bank vice president can escape sheer whimsy. It would seem even more impossible should I confide in you that the hobo explains to this modern child the idea of God, from which she has been sedulously shielded, and does it well.

Virginia lived on the Arroyo Drive—you can find it, though not some of the other streets in question, on your map of Greater Los Angeles, just below the Devils Gate Dam and just above the golf course and the Rose Bowl. Ben lived in a shanty in the chaparral, on the slope of the arroyo below Virginia's father's house, and his rat, which was Virginia's introduction to him, lived with him. His world and Virginia's father's world were divided by a few hundred geographica feet and a million psychological miles. The two men could not possibly understand each other; neither of them entirely understood Virginia, though Ben came closer to it, for Ben knew that "children are like animals; you got to put yourself in their place in order to figure out what they're thinking." But Virginia, being a child, understood and loved both men. Most of all, of course, she loved Wicky, the rat.

MR. CORLE manages to see things through Virginia's eyes with an almost miraculous precision. There is one beautifully told scene where Virginia, hopping about her mother's bedroom while that lady dresses for dinner, itches to tell of her discovery of Ben and his rat and is saved by a series of grown-up accidents and child intuitions. Sometimes Mr. Corle emerges from within Virginia's mind long enough for a bit of adult irony.

"It's a good thing you're a girl," declared a patriotic hobo friend of Ben's one day in the arroyo, "or I'd sock some hundred per cent Americanism into you."

"Pooh," said Virginia. "We had Americanism in school today. We learned its basic ideal. I bet you don't even know what it is."

"What is it?" asked the hobo.

"Tolerance," said Virginia.

This is Edwin Corle's fifth book. I missed "Fig Tree John." The stories in "Mojave" revealed his talent. "People on the Earth," a story of a Navajo boy, was, I thought, a better novel than "Laughing Boy." In "Burro Alley" he sometimes lost his overtones in incident. With "Solitaire" his work attains a ripeness of form and content. Watch Edwin Corle. And read "Solitaire."

Individualist's War

By Dorothy Thompson

Reflections On The Altmark Incident

I DON'T KNOW what the international law is regarding the rescue of British prisoners from the Altmark, a German ship in Norwegian territorial waters. I guess it's about the same as the international law under which the German chancellor ordered the Austrian chancellor to resign, otherwise his country would be invaded in 60 minutes; or the international law under which the Nazi organized a revolution in Czecho-Slovakia and then ordered the Czech government to hand power over to them, otherwise they would be invaded; or the international law under which the German government confiscated the Czech and Austrian treasuries and stole the money in them, some of which belonged to us; or the international law under which Russia attacked Finland on the ground that she was defending herself against a Finnish assault; or the international law under which the Japanese are not making war in China but spreading peace; or the international law under which the Russians and the Germans organize Americans inside the United States while their paid agents agitate them, at present to pacifism, under the portraits of Washington or Lincoln.

International law in this world at present is what any nation has the power to do. A little English girl was recently asked in class for the definition of a neutral, and she said, "A small country that is in danger." Small neutrals make their policies not according to international law but according to whom they fear most. No international law prevents the Swedes from sending an army to Finland, nor does the fear of Russia, Finland's enemy, do so.

But the Swedes are afraid that if they send an army to Finland someone else, the British or/and the Germans, will send an army to Sweden.

There is one international law for the strong and another for the weak, as the Germans have been demonstrating. International law, like Napoleon's God, is on the side of the biggest battalions. Or, as one says to the taxi driver who argues that it was the other fellow's fault: being right doesn't do you much good if you are dead. Undeclared wars are against international law, but if there is a war, and one side goes in for violating international law, it is difficult for the other side to win it by looking every time in the book.

In the incident over the City of Flint international law was on our side; but if this country had been Denmark, it would not have been.

INTERNATIONAL LAW ASIDE, the rescue of the prisoners from the Altmark reminds us that in this mechanized, organized, socialized, communalized and highly anti-individualistic world individual iniative still counts—and even in the most socialized and mechanized manifestation of this world, namely, war.

The rescue of the prisoners from the Altmark was very old-fashioned, almost Victorian. Such a battle might have occurred at any time in history since the invention of firearms. The weapons were chiefly nerve and pistols.

A British destroyer hove into sight, the Altmark tried to ram her and ran aground on the rocks and ice of the fjord; a boarding party—whose leader leapt 8 feet to the Altmark's deck and made her fast with grappling irons—scrambled aboard and a hand-to-hand fight ensued in darkness. Five Germans were killed and five wounded, and one Englishman lost his life. Three hundred men, more or less, were rescued.

THE BATTLE is like one from a Chesterton ballad of chivalry—"Lepanto," for instance:

"And below the ships are prisons,
where with multitudinous griefs
Christian captives sick and sunless, all a laboring race repines,
Like a race in sunken cities, like a nation in the mines.
They are lost, like slaves that sweat, and in the skies of morning hung
The stairways of the tallest gods, when tyranny was young.
Don John pounding from the slaughter-painted poop,
Purpling all the ocean like a bloody pirate's sloop,
Scarlet running over on the silvers and the golds
Breaking of the hatches up and bursting of the holds
Thronging of the thousands up that labor under sea
White for bliss and blind for sun and stunned for liberty
Don John of Austria has set his people free!"

THE WORLD lives a rescue, the rescue of individual men. The men are visible to our imagination, locked in darkness below deck, hungry, gaunt, and fed—according to one of the captives—on terrible tales of British cities in ruins from Nazi airplanes; futilely floating out an S O S message in a tin can, planning a hopeless mutiny . . . and then, liberation, homecoming, joy!

THIS WAR was heralded as the horrible triumph of mechanics over men. Apocalyptic pictures were painted of a war on men by robots; of mass slaughters by metallic monsters. A mechanized society would make mechanized war and finally blot out the race of humans. Mass slaughter by supermechanics was to be the end of Homo Sapiens.

MAYBE. But so far this has been a peculiarly individualist war. The chief warriors are seamen, fighting very much as seamen have fought for generations—battles in which personal courage, quickness and intelligence determine the victory or defeat as much as they ever did.

Or aviators, fighting alone or with a comrade or two, high in the blue air. The competing armies gauging their relative strengths compare not only their numbers but the quality of the men and the quality of the machines they have made. Neither in men nor in machines is mass production the measuring rod. Germany outnumbers Britain and France together in the number of planes she possesses. But her pilots are, most of them, kids, and the French pilots, who have been navigating the air for 20 years, fight with pink-faced Nazi boys whose air experience is so limited that a French pilot the other day abandoned a fight because he couldn't bear to kill the youngster he saw floundering around in the air in the enemy machine.

The story is comforting. It is pleasant to think that an adult has an advantage over a youth in this youth-affirming world; that acquired skill, mature judgment and the realistic courage of the grown-up have a better than even chance against youthful impetuosity, idealism and violence. It is an argument why men should be encouraged to grow up at all.

EVEN THE MACHINES have varying personalities. The German Messerschmidt was heralded in a manner to evoke terror. It looks very impressive indeed. But it quails before the cocky Curtiss P 36 from the United States, with its far greater elasticity and maneuverability. The qualities of the free man's plane are the qualities of the free man—elasticity and maneuverability. Perhaps, one thinks, free men are even more efficient than the mobilized mass.

The German war heroes are the men in submarines, a profession that requires enormous personal courage and heroism. It also requires something more than blind obedience, which may be the reason why a leading citizen of the German concentration camps is a former U-boat commander.

The Frank Report

By Ernest K. Lindley

The G. O. P. Wakes Up

IN 1932 the report of Glenn Frank's Republican Program Committee would have been regarded as progressive. For proof compare it with the Democratic platform of 1932, or even with Franklin D. Roosevelt's speeches.

In many respects it is a marked advance over the official position of the Republican Party in 1936—as distinct from the personal views of Alf M. Landon, whose tendencies toward a realistic liberalism were overwhelmed by the pressure from the old-guard leaders and big campaign contributors of his party.

In 1940, it is a platform for reasonably intelligent conservatism.

The Frank program is, therefore, heartening, even to a reader who, like myself, finds it blurred, contradictory, and nostalgic in certain respects, and inadequate as "A Program for a Dynamic America."

Our system seems to work best when the two major parties offer the voters a real choice between progressivism and conservatism. The terms are hackneyed and often become meaningless. Yet, in terms of the most pressing problems at any particular time, it is usually possible to distinguish between a program of forward action and the absence of one.

There should be a real choice, but it is probably equally important that the alternatives not to be too far apart. Regardless of election results, great changes cannot be brought about peacefully and in more or less orderly manner any faster than the great majority of the people are willing and able to absorb them. Being practical, the bulk of the American people shun the rigid theories of the extremists and choose between the two major parties, whose desire for victory deters them from moving too far ahead or dropping too far behind.

The Frank report is a sign that the rear of the line is catching up with the main body of public opinion. The further the rear advances, the less the front lines need to retreat, and the sooner they can organize for another forward movement.

Name-calling and fact-twisting seem to be unavoidable in any document put forth in the name of a political party. The Frank report is no exception, especially in its effort to link the New Deal with "defeatism." While denying this charge, a captious critic could assert that the Frank report is overburdened with smug optimism. Just give business a chance—it will pull us out of the very considerable economic depression which is still with us! Maybe. Everybody would like to think so. But we can't gamble our national destiny on hope. As business takes up the slack, the relief burden will diminish and other problems will become easier to deal with. We can't sit back and wait. We did that under Herbert Hoover.

On the economic side the Frank report is chiefly an essay on optimism, rather than a program. To condemn the New Deal it reaches back to the NRA. Positively, it proposes little that has not already been done or is not being attempted under the Roosevelt Administration.

The Frank program does not assert that the Federal budget can be balanced immediately. This miracle is postponed until 1942. It is admitted that the balance must be brought about largely by increase in the national income—which is what the Roosevelt Administration has been contending all along.

On the tax side, the Frank program may make some of the Republican contributors wince. It proposes lower taxes on the largest personal incomes, it is true, and also some readjustments in the corporation taxes. But it advocates higher taxes on the middle incomes, and a reduction of taxes on consumption. How these readjustments could be made immediately without reducing the Treasury's receipts is not explained. But most of the tax principles set forth are beyond criticism from the viewpoint of the New Dealers.

Over collective bargaining, the Frank report dances dizzily. It tries to prove that the National Labor Relations Act increased industrial strife, by quoting the strike figures for 1937, during part of which the act was openly defied by employers on the advice of some of the most eminent lawyers in the country. The figures for 1938 and 1939 point toward the opposite conclusion. Despite exceptions and a few doubtful recommendations, the important fact remains that the Frank report comes out strongly for genuine collective bargaining as a basic right, and for its protection by Federal law.

For full analysis this 116-page report requires more than a column. At many points it can be hit hard. But it is in good temper and, on the whole, reflects an attempt to examine and to deal honestly, if cautiously, with some of the main problems of our times.

British shipping losses in the past week were greater than in any comparable period since the beginning of the European conflict. Is Mr. Churchill losing his naval war? See Barnet Nover's analysis below

Struggle At Sea

By Barnet Nover

The Losses Continue To Mount

DURING THE WEEK ending Sunday, Allied and neutral shipping losses were the greatest for any similar period since the present conflict began.

According to figures made public by the British admiralty, 5 British ships, totaling 39,276 tons, and 15 neutral ships, with a combined tonnage of 46,601, were sent to the bottom by German mines and torpedoes. Altogether last week's losses were greater by almost 8,000 tons than the previous high point reached during the second week of September.

This is doubly ominous for the Allies. The destruction of merchant shipping during the seven days between February 11 to 18 was in itself not inconsiderable. Of greater importance was the circumstance that the curve of destruction is again on the upgrade despite the tremendous efforts being made by Great Britain and France to meet the menace of U-boat, mine and bombing plane.

To be sure, the Allies can take solace in the fact that the situation was very much worse in the period immediately following the opening of Germany's campaign of unrestricted submarine warfare in 1917.

In February of that year the loss of merchant shipping by Great Britain alone amounted to more than 300,000 tons, rising to 352,344 in March, and to the staggering total of 526,447 in April. During those three months more than 2,000,000 tons of Allied and neutral shipping were destroyed. This time, the total Allied and neutral shipping losses for a period almost twice that length has been slightly more than half as great.

It is by no means certain that this comparison gives an adequate picture of the present status of that struggle at sea which may have a decisive bearing on the outcome of this war as it did of the last.

In the first place, the Allies are somewhat less favored both with regard to total tonnage and numbers of ships than was the case during the World War and the same holds true, in part, with respect to their capacity to replace lost tonnage by new construction.

Then, too, the fact that German destructiveness showed an increase during the sixth month of the war despite all the experience gained by the Allies in combatting submarines and mines, suggests either that German U-boats are today more efficient or that there are more of them than the British and French can easily take care of. Finally there is the still unsolved problem of the damage which airplanes can do to merchant vessels in and out of convoy.

By and large, however, the Allies have reason to view the struggle at sea with reasonable hopefulness. So far as can be determined, the blockade is operating against Germany with cumulative force. This means that Germany is being forced to fall back more and more on whatever reserves of food and raw materials she managed to accumulate during the pre-war period plus whatever supplies she may be able to buy or browbeat from neighboring neutrals or get from Russia.

On the other hand, the British government is doing far more this time than in 1917 and 1918 to economize on shipping. Rationing has been resorted to with regard to all commodities that have to be transported from overseas, particularly those, such as frozen meat, which come long distances. And while it may prove impossible to replace all of the vessels lost by new construction, part of the losses can certainly be replaced in that manner.

Furthermore, if the total of British tonnage was less at the outbreak of the present war than it was in 1914, the neutral nations of Europe, notably Norway and the Netherlands, have increased their merchant marines. It is the maritime neutrals who are today bearing the brunt of submarine warfare, Germany paying no attention whatever to their neutral rights but treating them for all intents, so far as the war at sea is concerned, as belligerents. No wonder, then, that despite their fears of incurring the wrath of the Nazi government, an increasingly large total of neutral tonnage is now moving under Allied convoy.

No matter how successful the counter-measures taken by the Allies may be with respect to mine and submarine warfare, they may never succeed in fully putting an end to this twin menace, let alone the new menace from the skies.

It is a very revealing fact that while British and neutral tonnage losses went down sharply after the first quarter of 1917, they remained large, according to present standards, to the very end of the war although, in the meantime, the United States had entered the struggle and the American Navy was cooperating with the British and French navies in fighting the submarine.

During the last three months of the war, for instance, shipping losses were still in excess of 500,000 tons, with total Allied and neutral losses over 900,000 tons. Yet by that time the Allies were wholly justified in saying that the danger of unrestricted mine and submarine warfare had long since been put behind them.

From the long run point of view, therefore, it is still a fair assumption that the war at sea is being won not by Germany but by the Allies.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Uncle Sam, Realtor

The House That Jack Built has become the Bungalow That Uncle Sam Owns.

The Government finds itself not only in the real estate business, but stuck in it.

The theme song of the HOLC is, "It may have been home, sweet home, to somebody, but it's just another headache to me."

Official reports show that thousands upon thousands of Americans who were succored by Uncle Sam in their hour of need did not hesitate very much to make a sucker of the old gentleman. And do it with music.

Once Uncle Sam took over the mortgage, tens of thousands of citizens not only stopped worrying over the interest, but stopped worrying over the house.

Given a chance to pull through, they decided to duck and get out. It's an ugly picture reflecting the feelings of too many Americans that their Government owes them everything, but that they owe it nothing except three cheers in return.

If there ever was a case of the Good Samaritan being hit with a water bucket, this would appear to be it.

In the Nation, 158,053 homes which Uncle Sam tried to save for the owners have been left on his hands, a percentage of one in every seven. In New York State 25,754 of the 80,145 homes refinanced to Uncle Sam, even of lower interest rates, would amount to a scandal if the guilty party had not been George P. Citizen.

The HOLC agents found thousands of citizens who evidently believed in the adage, "Charity begins at home, but repudiation runs it a close second."

"Didn't I save this home for you?" demanded Uncle Sam. And in thousands of cases he got the answer: "Well, you've got it; what're you kicking about?"

And the strange fact is that the folks who stuck their Government did it without a twinge of conscience, and in the belief that when the lifesaver is Uncle Sam it is okay to let him pay for the pulmotor and the rowboat.

There is no place like home. (And no mortgage holder like the Government.)

How can you do this with mere paint and brush,
Imprison the beauty of a morning on a hill?
How can you bring me peace and lovely hush
That falls where golden sunbeams softly spill?
Here are the trees that you gave life forever,
Swaying gracefully in harmony together.
Winter cold and stinging blasts can never sever
This lovely day you caught in autumn weather.
Here is the soft wind playing yet
Within the glory of the autumn glow.
Here gold-drenched leaves are met
And sealed in beauty, with no fear of snow!
O, would my lines could half express
The beauty of your trees to me,
Or would my lips might softly press
Against each leaf's pure ecstasy!

Rumania's Embarrassment Of Riches

Copyright by New York Times

Bucharest, Rumania, Feb. 20.—"Our wealth of natural resources is our misfortune," said a Rumanian politician a day or two ago, and events of the last few months seem to confirm this statement. Since the outbreak of the war Rumania has been on the firing line of international interest owing to the fights and intrigues in connection with Rumanian oil. Now a new fight has begun for the acquisition of Rumanian timber.

Before the war Germany's two chief suppliers of timber were Sweden and Finland. The blockade made deliveries from Sweden difficult and the Russo-Finnish war hampered deliveries from Finland, so that Germany tried to get timber from Rumania. Toward the end of December a German delegation came to Bucharest and negotiated for the purchase of one of the largest saw-mills in Rumania. Nothing, however, came of this attempt.

Toward the middle of January a new timber company was founded with Rumanian and German capital. Although it began operations immediately it has not come up to German expectations in capacity. The Germans tried to cover their needs by taking over Rumanian timber bound for Hungary.

The timber question has created other difficulties as well. Since the middle of January the British have been buying up large quantities of timber in Rumania which were forwarded to Constanza for shipment. When the transactions took place the British stated that the goods would be taken away on February 1. However, no British ships were available at the time and the timber stocks in Constanza Harbor have grown larger and larger. Today there are approximately 8,000 rail truckloads of timber in the port awaiting shipment to Great Britain.

This unusually large quantity of timber is hampering Constanza traffic and some 2,000 rail cars are kept out of circulation.

"Are these the slips that were advertised for $1.49?"

"Yes."

"Marked down from $1.98?"

"Yes. What size, please?"

"Thirty-four, long—"

"All the 34's are alike in this lot."

"Well have you any of these slips in satin?"

"No, but this is a marvelous mixture of silk and rayon."

"Well, have you any without quite so much lace?"

"Not in this lot. Now on that next table—"

"Have you any cut without panels—in two pieces?"

"Not in this lot. Now in those $2.25 lots—on that next table—"

II

"Are these the $2.25 slips that were advertised?"

"Yes these are regular $2.98 slips. You see, this is a discontinued line—"

"Have you any in size 34 long?"

"I don't believe so—in the satin. Wait—here's a 34, medium, and they run long—"

"That might do. Have you any not quite such a vivid pink—more of a flesh, or a peach?"

"Not in this lot. Now on that next table—"

"Well, have you any simpler in style—not so many ruffles?"

"I can give you a perfectly plain tailored slip."

"I don't want that either. Well, have you any without the panels?"

"Not in this lot. Now in those $2.98 slips—on the next table—"

III

"Are these the sale slips?"

"Yes, only $2.98. They were $3.50—"

"Have you any in satin, cut in two pieces, without panels, not too much lace—"

"Yes indeed. What size?"

"Thirty-four, long."

"I don't believe we have the 34, long. Now we have the 36 short and these slips run small—"

"That would be too large."

"Well how about the 34 medium. These slips run long."

"Well—that might do. Have you any a paler pink?"

"Not in this lot."

"Or a peach?"

"Not in this lot. Now in the regular stock—"

"Are these pure silk?"

"Well mostly—with of course a little rayon. Now in the regular stock—"

"Haven't you anything a little simpler in trim, and yet not too tailored—that is, something in between—"

"Well, only in the regular stock—"

IV

"Have you a satin slip, size 34, long, no panels, shaped bodice, pale pink or peach, not too fancy, but just enough detail to make it interesting."

"Well, yes in the regular Venusform—"

"How much is it?"

"Three, ninety-eight—"

Fluid Drapery, Worldly Colors in Gowns Designed for Cornell by Russian Artist

Characteristic of Valentina's subtle simplicity of line and drapery is this street frock devised by this ingenious Russian designer for Miss Katherine Cornell. It's the same dark red costume that the celebrated actress wears in her current Washington play—contrasted with a forward-perched fur toque, matching muff, and chocolate-colored gloves and shoes

Valentina Uses Restraint in All Her Creations

Lines of Clothes Have Sensual Cut Plus Simplicity

By Marshall Adams.
The Post Fashion Editor.

WHEN Katherine Cornell's play "No Time for Comedy" opened last spring in New York, not only did blase first nighters gasp at her chic contemporary wardrobe, but even die-hard critics acclaimed her clothes in their comments. Washington play-goers on seeing Miss Cornell's stage wardrobe this week will probably render the same applause for it was devised by that sure fire artist of cut and drape- Valentina.

Marshall Adams

Delightedly, the first lady of the theater admits that this is her first comedy since stardom and her first chance in years to wear a really smart up-to-date wardrobe. She and Valentina make the most of their chance for Cornell's lithe figure, opalescent coloring and strangely fascinating assortment of features are food for Valentina's design expression. Valentina is the artist whose brilliant "Philadelphia Story" gowns helped make Katherine Hepburn's play so widely discussed. So successful have the Cornell clothes been since the opening of her play that an entire new wardrobe for Washington and other cities had to be ordered because "the others just wore out from constant handling and admiration."

Restraint in Design

Calentina, the extraordinary Russian girl who came to this country with the Ballet Russe only a few years ago, and later appeared with Miss Cornell in "Casanova," now has a New York design shop with the most famous names of opera, stage and screen on her customer list. When we asked Miss Cornell why Valentina's designs are so widely sought she generously replied, "She possesses what only good designers have—restraint plus a knowledge of the nuances of color, fabric and line." Miss Cornell adds that "Valentina manages to look more glamorous than most of her clients and always knows how to put sensuousness into the drapery of the simplest frock."

She has done just that for Miss Cornell for as one drama critic put it "Cornell has so long worn the black vestments we hardly know how seductively she can manage the smartly colored clothes of comedy." The actress observes that designer Valentina is mindful ever not only of the star but of the scene's decor. For instance, against a two-toned yellow striped set, a subtle at-home gown is worn. Worldly colors also play an important part in Valentina's scheme of things, thinks Miss Cornell, for during the action of "No Time for Comedy" first is seen a soignee blue crepe housecoat, a dark red street costume with chololate colored accessories, and finally golden velvet worn with golden cantilever sandals punctuated with carmen red bands.

Beef Shanks Make Economical and Flavorsome Dish

BEEF SHANKS are an economical meat and full of flavor when properly cooked. They need long slow cooking in order to make them tender, which means that they should be cooked by braising or simmered in water. It is important that they should be cooked slowly and not allowed to boil.

Braised beef shanks are delicious. First they are browned well on both sides in hot fat, then a small amount of hot water is added and then salt and pepper seasoning. The kettle in which they are cooked should be tightly covered, and the shanks allowed to cook very slowly until done—about two hours. In cooking them, more liquid may be added from time to time as needed. Noodles cooked in boiling salted water until tender and seasoned with the beef drippings are excellent to serve with the shanks. They may also be served on a bed of noodles and the drippings used to make a savory brown gravy.

Cross-cut shanks are beef shanks that have been cut cross-wise into thick slices, and make an attractive service when prepared in this manner. A casserole of cross-cut shanks with tomato sauce over them is an appetizing cold weather dish.

Cross-Cut Shanks En Casserole

First brown the slices on both sides in hot fat, then transfer them to a casserole dish, season with salt and pepper and add a few onion slices and one cup of tomatoes. Cover the casserole and cook the shanks in a moderate oven, 350 degrees, until done, about two hours. Other seasonings such as Tobasco sauce, Worcestershire sauce, bay-leaf, cloves, thyme or celery salt may be used if desired.

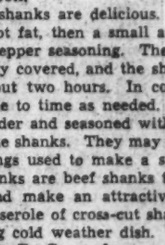
Better Publicity Is Attending Barbara Hutton

New York, Feb. 20.

THERE are few young women in the United States who have suffered from worse publicity than Barbara Hutton Mdivani Haugwitz-Reventlow, a countess of the Danish type. Barbara got off on the wrong foot even by being born a great heiress of a chain-store fortune. A fabulous debut did her no good, either, nor did her marriage to one of the Georgian Mdivanis, with a Venetian palace for a present—to him.



"Babs" Hutton

All these things worked against Baba. Then she had a nice little boy, and then she went to work on a divorce from the count. Soon she was seen oftenest in the company of a handsome boy named Bob Sweeny. But suddenly Baba's affairs have taken a turn for the better. Lately we are no longer surprised to see a picture of the pretty blonde young matron clacking away with the knitting needles. I shouldn't be astonished, any day, to see a picture of her playing on a sunkissed beach with son Lance. It would be natural.

What caused this sudden outbreak of better times for Baba?

I hear that one of the best press agents in the United States has taken over all her public contracts. He has handled mighty affairs, and popularized enormous resorts. And if this story is true, the little blonde never made a smarter move in her life. He will keep out of the paper any little errors, he will bear down on the knitting needles and the domesticity.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—The suddenest and pleasant click among places to drop in after the theater has been the Algonquin supper club, housed in the noted hostelry of that name, on Fourty-fourth street. Always famous as a luncheon spot, it has suddenly become a simple charming drop in. And packed, nightly. The place has even turned up a delightful entertainer in Greta Keller, a Viennese who sings that way. There is also a master satirist named John Buckmaster, an English actor of the better clawss. This hit is a surprise and a pleasant one.

Our Hunter College, the city school for girls on a very fancy part of Park avenue, has just celebrated its seventieth birthday. Over 600 alumnae tucked in a big breakfast, and then the birthday cake was cut by Mrs. Harriet Eagleson, 85, who got her sheepskin in the class of '71. That's a lot of years.

Engaged Girl Budgets Her Evenings Among All Her Friends; Her Fiance Disapproves

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been going with a young man nearly three years. During that time we have shared each other's problems and pleasures, large or small, and have tried to help each other. Until last October, he was away much of the time, but each of us knew we were first in the other's thoughts.

We shall not be free or financially able to marry for at least another year, and we long ago discussed the matter of "going steady." I personally don't believe in giving up all one's friendships in favor of one suitor, until a marriage date has been definitely set. I tried it once and it didn't work out, and I have noticed it doesn't work with others, either.

I maintain that one can go out for a little light fun in a friendly way with a number of people, and still know that a certain person is "tops." I think it keeps you on your toes to associate with different people. And while I have gone with many and had lots of fun, I still love this man best. In fact, I think I appreciate him more as a result of comparing him with others.

But he holds a different view and this is a source of dispute. He thinks I should go out with him only. I argue in favor of reserving all important dates and "special occasions" for him, yet having a few nights each week entirely to myself to do what I like, without any suggestions. And the same for him. We would like your opinion, and are looking forward to an early reply.

CONSTANT READER.

Girl's Policy Is Sound, Theoretically, But——

DEAR CONSTANT READER: Theoretically, your policy is best. As an unstudied courting technique, it keeps the romance keyed up to an abiding provocative tension. It allows each of you a healthful margin of freedom in which to test the validity of the reciprocal attraction which drew you together. It not only permits, but actually obliges, each of you to develop his socially self-sustaining qualities. It enables each of you to find himself most fully—as one can only find himself through assorted individual experiences digested in intervals of solitude—and through self-discovery you will be all the more powerfully identified with each other, if, indeed, you belong together.

Theoretically, it is a wise course if only because it is the reverse of "putting all your eggs in one basket;" because it prevents your slumping down, prematurely, into a fatuously limited two-way exchange that might seem to suffice at an early level of your development, but which, if perennially accepted as the be-all and end-all of your respective potentialities, might lead eventually to suffocating mutual boredom and a fretful urge to scrap the whole relationship.

However, the beneficent value of any constructive theory is largely lost if it happens not to be fully shared by persons engaged in a joint endeavor. And in the case of persons in love and planning a joint life, generous compromise is sometimes more productive of mutual gain than obstinate adherence to ruggedly individualistic behavior.

The question for you to decide, it seems to me, is what reassuring or consolatory concession you can make to your ardently apprehensive fiance, that will not severely oppress your more self-reliant spirit. Your independence of action, if carried to the point where it seriously distresses him, could react as a boomerang. Embittered, defiant, bewildered or despairing, he might seek, in time, to follow your blithe example, with the result that he might be caught up in a counter-attraction that would throw your relationship permanently off balance.

Another question more pertinent, in my opinion, than "Which of us is right?" is the question of whether your conflicting "ideologies" of behavior, as evidenced by this perpetual dispute, could ever be happily and enduringly reconciled. What you are now you will remain, in essential outlines, and the same is true of him. Marriage does not alter character or temperament.

My advice to both of you is to stop trying dogmatically to convert each to the other's viewpoint. Rather, analyze the conflict with open mind. Let each make an honest effort to revise his own philosophy and behavior, without loss of integrity, so as to better match his social stride to the other fellow's. This is the most dependable approach to harmony. No good can come of one's trying to impose his will or individualistic way upon the other. M. H.

Hose to Match Frocks, Newest Fad

Hollywood, Calif.—If Milo Anderson, Warner Bros. designer, has his way, every girl will be wearing hosiery in exact match for her frocks and so nude sheer that it becomes genuine "leg art."

He suggests for Olivia de Haviland a black linen frock, sheer black chiffon hosiery, red linen pumps and a bright red linen strawberry pinned to one lapel.

For Anne Shirley, star of "Saturday's Children," a gray silk shantung with peg top skirt, sheer gray hosiery, navy gabardine pumps and a navy shantung postillion.

Count Calories To Reduce

HOW dismayed are Mrs. Stout's fellow-passengers as she chooses a space small enough for a Mrs. Slim.

Yes, life is full of awkward, ludicrous situations if you're overweight. A pity, too, when on a low-calory reducing diet you could lose as much as two pounds a week—be gracefully, youthfully slender.

With a calory chart to guide you, you turn your back on high-calory, fat-making foods, substiture delicious low-calory ones.

Instead of a cup of cream tomato soup, 267 calories, you have a cup of clear tomato soup, only 100. Instead of 2 corn muffins, 266, you have 2 biscuits, 100. Instead of Devil's Food, 400, you have chocolate loaf cake, 150.

The quantities, you see, are about the same. But in just those three fat-making foods there are 583 more calories than in the three low-calory ones. You need take only 4,000 calories in excess of bodily needs to gain a pound, so think how rapidly you can gain eating high-calory meals three times a day!

Fortunately, on your low-calory diet, you lose just as fast. And you can cut to 1,200 calories a day and still have satisfying meals.

D. C. Notables Wonder About Lenten 'Lull'

Doubt Expressed With So Many Parties; Mrs. Grosvenor and Mrs. Coville Entertain in Honor of Mrs. Fisher

By Hope Ridings Miller

SEVERAL LUNCHEONS accented yesterday's social calendar, as informal parties for out-of-towners, for in-towners, and just for instance made dozens of notables wonder when, and if, there ever will be such a thing as a Lenten lull.

HOPE R. MILLER

Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor and her daughter, Mrs. Cabot Coville, entertained in honor of Mrs. David Fisher, of Seattle, who is being widely feted while visiting her sister; Mrs. Max Hamilton in Alexandria. Mrs. Emil Hurja gathered in a small group for luncheon at the 1925 F Street Club, where the noted director, Erwin Piscator, was the feted guest; and Mrs. George B. Trible entertained a company of 18 at the first in a series of luncheons she has planned for this season.

Wild Acres, the Grosvenor home in Bethesda, Md., was the scene of the party for Mrs. Fisher. Spring blossoms decorated the table at which covers were laid for ten. Miss Elizabeth Johnson, sister of the United States Ambassador to China, Nelson Johnson, was among the guests; as were Mrs. William Crozier, Mrs. Charles D. Walcott, Miss Rose Greeley, Mrs. Charles Adams, Mrs. Raymond Mackay and Mrs. James Taylor.

Drama talk was the order of the hour at Mrs. Hurja's luncheon, where the gathering included a small group of those whose work and interest are responsible for the forthcoming production of "Saint Joan," Bernard Shaw's play. Staring Louise Rainer and being put on in connection with the Civic Theater, the play will have its first presentation with the current cast on Sunday, March 10.

Directs Drama Shop In New York School

Mr. Piscator (pronounced pis-KAT-or) has been widely acclaimed as one of the most successful directors in Europe and was brought to this country to direct Tolstoi's "War and Peace." He is now in charge of the dramatic workshop in the New School of Social Research in New York.

Among those invited to the luncheon for him yesterday were Miss Rainer, Mrs. Demarest Lloyd, Lee D. Butler, William Wheeler, Richard Skinner, Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Rutherford, L. M. C. Smith, Charles Dillon, Miss Hazel Edgar and several others.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Trible's luncheon was gayly under way at the Army-Navy Club, where women still are not allowed to enter by the front door but have taken over the dining room in a big way. Looking around there yesterday, I saw twice as many ladies lunching together as men, the latter in most cases eating in secluded corners.

The table for Mrs. Trible's party centered the spacious room and was decorated with two low bowls of mauve sweetpeas and tulips, mingled with yellow roses. The hostess, who received in the cocktail lounge, was trimly turned out in a black frock and hat, set off with a double silver fox scarf.

Lady Chalkley Is Ranking Guest

Lady Chalkley, one of the most genial and most popular members of the British Embassy (to be frank about it, she and Mrs. Summerscale probably have as many friends in Washington as any diplomatic hostesses I know), was ranking guest. Mrs. James Carroll Frazer sat to Mrs. Trible's left, and on up and down the table, I saw Mrs. William Hemphill Bell, Miss Lydia Loring, Mrs. Ralph Smith and Mrs. Mackenzie Davison.

Also in the company was Mrs. Bruce Smith, who plans to be off to Florida today (or she may go tomorrow, or perhaps not at all) and who said she would postpone her trip if the cold weather is continuing in the South. But she hopes to be down for the Dinner-Stakes races at Hialeah tomorrow and plans to enter Patricia A, a two-year-old, in the race. If she does go, she and Mr. Smith plan to return to their Mayflower apartment early in March; and if she doesn't go, he will join her here in the next few days.

Plans Southern Trip Soon

Still others at Mrs. Trible's luncheon were Mrs. Abner Drury, who expects to leave for Miami in the next few days and who declares she is going "just to rest." However, rumor is going the rounds that she has purchased a Florida wardrobe which, if put to use down to the last smart jersey evening dress, will keep her in the partying whirl most of the time. Incidentally, the smart beige green straw hat prettily perched on her head yesterday, is worth a whole fashion story by itself.

Another especially pretty hat in the crowd was the one worn by Miss Reba Doughton. A black braid number, it was fashioned with a flat crown set off with a gray feather, splashed with gold at the base and curling upward at a snappy angle.

Mrs. Matthew White Perry was in the company; as were Mrs. William Campbell Armstrong, Mrs. Tomas Cajigas, Mrs. Katharyn Fuqua, Miss Esther Prager, Mrs. Marion Davis, Mrs. J. W. McClaran and her house guest, Mrs. George Young, of Detroit.

To Give Luncheon Again Today

Mrs. Trible will entertain again today at the second in her series of luncheons. The party will also take place at the Army-Navy Club. In the company will be Senora de Castro, Frau Witthoeft-Emden, Senora de Munilla, Mrs. Clarence Hinkamp, Mrs. William B. Shearer, Mrs. John J. Shugrue, Mrs. Leo Brison Norris, Mrs. E. L. Huffman, Mrs. Robert Jones, Mrs. John B. Gordon, Mrs. L. D. Gilbert, Miss Katherine Priest, Mrs. Kirk Smith, Mrs. F. S. Whitman, Mrs. Alva Brewer, Mrs. Neitah King, Mrs. Dexter North, Mrs. Charles Stiefel and Mrs. Vincenzo di Giralamo.

SOCIETY-GO-AROUND: Mrs. Henry A. Wallace will entertain at luncheon tomorrow in her apartment at the Wardman Park Hotel . . . Mrs. Garland Ferguson will be hostess at a tea on Friday afternoon from 4:30 to 7 p. m. Guests of honor will be Mrs. Maud Merrimon Wiggins, of Greensboro, N. C., who is spending the winter here, and Mrs. William N. Crawford, of Greensboro, who will arrive in Washington today . . . Lothrop Stoddard will leave today for New York, where on Saturday he will speak before the Foreign Policy Association. Dr. and Mrs. Walter Bloedorn are planning a breakfast in honor of Mr. Stoddard on Sunday, March 10, at the Army-Navy Club . . . Mr. and Mrs. Fernando Cuniberti will give a dinner for Mr. and Mrs. Stoddard on Tuesday, February 27.

Junior League Red Cross Unit Gives Tea

The Junior League's Red Cross committee held its annual tea yesterday afternoon at the league headquarters on Massachusetts avenue from 4 to 6 p. m. Among those present were the six junior League committee chairmen for the Red Cross—Mrs. Hugo Huettig, Mrs. Phillip Young, Mrs. Merton B. Tice, Mrs. Walter Boyd, Mrs. John Garland Pollard and Mrs. Phillip Bonsal.

Other members of the committee present included Mrs. William Anderson, Mrs. Jennings Bailey, jr., Miss Caroline Beall, Miss Lesley Burchell, Mrs. Lewis Clark, Miss Helen Clifford, Miss Bambie McKenna, Mrs. Donald McKnew, Miss Dudley Gregory, Mrs. Robert Grosjean and her guest, Miss Margaret Luedke; Mrs. E. Conrad Metcalf, Mrs. Edward Page, jr., Mrs. James Edward Reid and Miss Stellita Stapleton.

Bulgarian Envoy To Honor Earles

The Bulgarian Minister and Mme. Naoumoff will entertain at a luncheon today at the legation in honor of the newly appointed United States Minister to their country and Mrs. George Earle.

Mr. and Mrs. Earle were in the Capital briefly last week and during their stay, were guests of honor at a luncheon given by Mr. and Mrs. James Clement Dunn. They are expected to spend several days here before returning to Pennsylvania, and will sail March 9 for Europe.

NOTES of SOCIETY

The Brazilian Ambassador and Senhora de Martins gave a dinner last night.

The new Australian Minister, Richard Casey, will arrive today by plane from Los Angeles to assume his duties here. Mrs. Casey and their children will come from Australia in several weeks to join him.

Mrs. Arthur H. Vandenberg, who is recuperating from influenza, will not hold an "at home" on Thursday afternoon.

Representative and Mrs. Fred Bradley have as their guests at the Wardman Park, Mr. and Mrs. Irvin L. Clymer, of Rogers City, Mich.

Senora de Munilla, wife of the Military Attache of the Cuban Embassy, has canceled the "at home" she planned for tomorrow because of illness.

Miss Margaret Mary FitzGerald, of Boston, arrived in Washington yesterday to visit Mrs. Robert Whitney Imbrie, who will give a small tea tomorrow afternoon in honor of her guest. Those invited to the event are several former Bostonians now living in Washington.

Mrs. Randall Hagner Entertains in Honor Of Former Italian Envoy and Wife

THERE'S A slightly hardboiled Washington saying that anyone who goes away is never missed and never forgotten. Certainly the last part could apply to the former Italian Ambassador here, Augusto Rosso, and his American wife, who probably haven't eaten any meal except breakfast alone together since they arrived last week for a visit.

Another in the strenuous series of parties for them took place yesterday afternoon when attractive Mrs. Randall Hagner entertained in their honor. It started out to be "just a few friends" but ended up with William in his coachman's suit at the front door, which always denotes a "function."

SIGNOR ROSSO, who is currently "temporarily recalled" as Italian envoy to the Soviet, was surrounded by people who had known him here before, but confessed that in some instances he was having trouble connecting names with faces. Signora Rosso, the former Mrs. Frances Bunker, wore a gray suit trimmed with fox fur.

After their return to Italy next month the Rossos hope to go to Africa to visit Gen. Balbo, now Governor of Lybia.

Seen here and there at Mrs. Hagner's: Mrs. Peter Goelet Gerry, her black outfit topped off by a hat made of dusty pink petals; Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg, in green and black, and Mrs. Warren Austin . . . Senator Vandenberg having a chat with Signor Rosso . . . Mrs. Kent Legare, carrying an enormous black muff . . . Mrs. Sidney Lee and Mrs. Edward May, who are wintering here after touring Africa last year in high heels and white gloves . . . Mrs. Demarest Lloyd talking to Kemper Simpson . . . George Howe ditto with Mrs. Pearsons Rust; Maj. and Mrs. Horace Smith, Mrs. Francis Whitten, Mrs. William Littaeur, M. and Mme. Edgar Prochnik, Mrs. Patrick Hurley, in a blue suit which matched her eyes, and dozens of others.

KATHARINE CORNELL is shying away from parties while in Washington. Her pet recreation is taking her dogs walking in the park. Anyone passing her there would never think her an actress, as she uses absolutely no make-up off the stage.

WASHINGTON OFFICIALS with private telephone numbers will have to think of something better if they want to equal Francis Lederer, Miss Cornell's leading man, in exclusiveness. A Capital debutante called him at his hotel yesterday and before she had even given her name was informed by the operator that she had orders not to put through any calls to Mr. Lederer—ever.

A CLIENT of Prince Mogul, the fortune teller at the recent Grant Mason party, got her mind off her own problems long enough to ask him whether people ever put questions that weren't personal. His answer was "no"—seems that everyone would far prefer to know whether John loves them or a certain stock is going up than what will happen to Hitler or the "okies."

Prince Mogul must have decided that Mrs. Mason's guests were of a mercenary turn. Most chose to ask as their one question when a certain annuity would come in or how many dividends they could count on for March.

LUISE RAINER is putting the good thought on the forthcoming production of "St. Joan" by carrying in her pocketbook for good luck a little Joan of Arc medal. A friend who had carried it in France through the last war presented her with the charm.

MORE TRAVEL NOTES: Count and Countess Roberti will leave a week from Thursday by motor for the former's new post at the Italian Embassy in Mexico City . . . . The Jouett Shouses are off to Cuba, where they will vacation until March 15 . . . . Mrs. Sims Snow has returned to her O street apartment in Georgetown after a stay in Florida . . . . Mrs. Charles Bohlen is in this country from Moscow, where her husband is with our embassy. She is visiting friends in North Carolina at the moment.

Pattons Tell Club Group About Voyage

Fort Myer Officer And Wife Sailed Small Boat to Hawaii

When the Army takes to sails you can be assured of an amusing as well as an instructive time. At least this was the case yesterday when the commandant of Fort Myer, Col. George S. Patton, jr., discussed the family's trip from San Francisco to Hawaii in a 40-foot sailboat.

The colonel dismissed quickly the dangers of high winds with "they only make for good sailing." He spoke yesterday afternoon before the Women's National Press Club's weekly luncheon. Supplementing her husband's remarks with a few of her own on the trials of housekeeping on a 31-day journey without touching land, Mrs. Patton proved highly entertaining.

Also attending the luncheon was Miss Ruth Ellen Patton, daughter of the commandant and his wife. Mrs. Keith Merrill, sister of Mrs. Patton, was on hand. Feather hats seem to have completely taken over the Patton clan, for Mrs. Patton's chapeau, of olive green felt had a crown covered with orange, blue, yellow and green feathers. Miss Patton had a toque entirely of pheasant feathers perched atop her blond curls, with an enormous quill spiking one side of the hat.

Mrs. Pepper Among Guests

Looking as pretty as the proverbial pink was Mrs. Claude Pepper, wife of Senator Pepper, who was a guest at yesterday's luncheon. She was wearing a smart black velvet dress and matching hat banded in mink. All aglow was the Senator's wife over her latest names: Ice—a salmon-pink azelia called "the Mildred Pepper." Mrs. Pepper was with Mrs. George Sanford Holmes, whose all-black ensemble was relieved by touches of gold.

Making a colorful splash with her pink bonnet of flower petals was Mrs. Irene Caldwell, whose hat topped out a black outfit. She chatted with Miss Elinor Lee and Mrs. Arthur Condon.

But to return to the subject at hand—sailing. The colonel, in referring to his navigation, said at first they decided to take the boat to the Hawaiian Islands and sail it back to the mainland, thinking it would be hardly possible to miss the continent. But he was finally convinced that the islands were equally hard to miss. Col. Patton said "If a person would simply do what he is told and not ask why I could teach him navigation in a half-hour."

Mrs. Patton Is Author

Mrs. Patton has written several books on South sea island folklore, the most famous of which is "Blood of the Shark." She vividly described their visit to an isolated Fanning isle and which they learned had been discovered by a relative of hers.

In preparing for a journey of some 2,000 miles with no ice and no stops—not even for water—Mrs. Patton advises plenty of canned food, onions, potatoes and beer. You have to cook with salt water as much as possible, so canned foods, containing much of their own liquid, are preferable.

Asked when he would go on another trip such as that, Col. Patton replied, "In nine years, eight months and four days—when I retire."

Lothrop Stoddard And Dr. Garfield To Speak Here

Lothrop Stoddard, author and journalist, who recently returned from Europe, and Dr. Harry A. Garfield, former president of Williams College, will be speakers at the next luncheon of the English-Speaking Union.

The function will take place Monday at 1 o'clock at the Willard Hotel. Robert Lincoln O'Brien will preside.

Venezuelan Envoy and Wife Receive in Their New Embassy

Ambassador and Senora de Escalante To Be Hosts to Their Country's Minister of War and Navy Tomorrow

By Carolyn Bell.

At last, the new Venezuelan Embassy—a gleaming white modern building which Massachusetts avenue strollers have been watching with avid interest since the ground was broken several years ago—is finished. Yesterday the Ambassador and Senora de Escalante invited a few members of the press in to view their new home, complete down to the last vase.

A busy week indeed this is for the Escalante family. Aside from putting the finishing touches in their new place, they will entertain an important houseguest. Arriving at 11:25 o'clock tomorrow will be the Venezuelan minister of war and navy, Isias Medina, who, although he is here on a vacation, will be royally feted during his week's visit. The Chief of Staff of the Army, Gen. George Marshall, will entertain at dinner tonight for him.

Tomorrow he will visit Arlington and will also be the guest of honor at a dinner party to be given by Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Adolf A. Berle, jr., at their home. Various official visits and a trip to Annapolis are on his itinerary on Friday. On Saturday the Ambassador and Senora de Escalante will entertain at a reception to inaugurate the new building and present Col. Medina. On Monday Col. Medina will visit Front Royal and that night be guest of honor at a dinner to be given by the Assistant Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Lewis Compton. On Wednesday of next week Col. Medina will visit various Army posts and will leave that evening.

Frock of Fuchsia Blends With Drapes

Yesterday's party was, of course, informal and Senora de Escalante greeted her guests wearing a muted fuchsia crepe frock which (whether by design or accident) blended in with the drapes and rugs in the dining salons to the left. It was here that champagne and canapes were served.

Entering a small foyer, guests noted the lovely landing of the stairway which arches up on either side. A glass door, flanked on all sides by glass brick, centers the landing. The whole, which is 26 feet high, is draped in cheery red satin. The large salon to the left as one enters, is completely furnished in delicate period pieces and the drapes are of heavy topaz damask. Windows take up the entire side facing Massachusetts avenue.

Main topic of conversation throughout the afternoon seemed to be the murals—all done by Pedro Centeno, a Venezuelan artist—that dominate every downstairs room. The one in the small salon to the right of the entrance is perhaps most interesting. It represents the mingling of the races in South America. The composite, a male figure, stands at one end to the painting surrounded by lush vegetation while three girls dance about at the other end. Four historical figures of Venezuela—done in life size—are painted on the walls of the large salon.

Daughter Assists In Greeting Guests

Senorita Maria Teresa Escalante, daughter of the Ambassador and his wife, was busy showing guests around. She wore a black shirt-waist frock with a yolk and wide sleeves of batiste banded in black lace. Most interesting were the quarters of the envoy and his family. All ultramodern, the colors are subtle and show a great deal of taste. Silver-blue leather furniture in combination pieces are used in the studio. The drapes are deep dubonnet trimmed in a darker blue. The loveliest color of all is the very pale rose tint used in these suite occupied by Senora de Escalante. As in all the suites, the three-rooms—bedroom, boudoir and bath, are in matching tones.

The suite which Col. Medina is to use during his stay is done in soft livable green, in both light and dark tones, combined with buff. This room looks out on a balcony. A cunning bedroom is that occupied by Senorita Escalante, done in soft blues and pink. She has an extremely feminine dresser and several odd pieces done in a fuzzy pink material. Hanging above a chest of drawers is a picture of a demure young lady who strangely enough resembles Maria Teresa.

Parties Planned For Former Anita Grew

Many parties are planned for Mrs. Robert English, who is here from Ottawa, Canada, visiting her sister, Mrs. Jay Pierrepont Moffat. Mrs. English will be here about a week and is renewing old friendships in the Capital, where, as Miss Anita Grew, she lived with her father, Joseph Grew, now Ambassador to Japan.

Mrs. Moffat, whose husband is now on the high seas accompanying Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles on his European mission, will entertain at two dinners in honor of her sister. She will give a dinner this evening and another on Monday. This afternoon, Mrs. Lewis Clark will entertain at a cocktail party for the visitor.

Mrs. Whiteford Bridge Hostess

Mrs. Roger Whiteford entertained members of her card club at a bridge luncheon yesterday in her home in Chevy Chase. Covers were laid for 12.

The company included Mrs. Loyd Sutton, Mrs. Sidney Sherwood, Mrs. Harry Randel, Mrs. Burton Corning, Mrs. Adolphe Gude, Mrs. William T. Gill, Mrs. William Yoacum, Mrs. Edward Hellmuth, Mrs. W. J. Jacobs, Mrs. Joseph Batt and Mrs. Harrison Beavers.

Polish Pianist To Be Guest Of Potocki

Ambassador Plans Party After Concert At Constitution Hall

The Polish Ambassador, Count Potocki, will give a supper in honor of Artur Rubinstein after the concert next Tuesday at Constitution Hall of the Philadelphia Orchestra. The distinguished Polish pianist, who will be guest soloist that evening, will play a concerto by his famous compatriot, Frederic Chopin.

Count Potocki is expected back today from the plantation of Bernard Baruch in South Carolina, where he spent the week-end. He has reserved a box for the concert, and members of the staff of the embassy have taken a block of seats.

When Artur Rubinstein made his debut in Philadelphia on February 23, 1906—almost 34 years ago to the day—the program notes mentioned that the young pianist "was born in the ill-fated town of Lodz, which during 1905-6 had been the scene of many sanguinary tragedies. His brother is exiled to Siberia, but so far, young Rubinstein has not been directly implicated in any of the upheavals which are causing such distress and panic in the dominions of the "Great White Czar."

Today, in 1940, the distress of tragic state of Poland are again front page news.

Spanish Envoy Dines Italian Diplomat

The Italian Ambassador to the Soviet Union and Signora Rosso were honor guests at a dinner given last night by the Spanish Ambassador, Juan de Cardenas. Senora de Cardenas is in Charleston, S. C., until March 10.

The others present last evening included the Italian Ambassador to this country and Princess Colonna; Mr. and Mrs. Harold Sims, Mr. and Mrs. George A. Garrett, who will give a luncheon today for the Rossos; Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Russell and Mrs. Eldridge Jordan.

Housekeepers' Alliance Celebrates Golden Jubilee of Federation

Costumes of Several Eras Shown At Party Given at Y. W. C. A.; Saidie Orr Dunbar Is Honor Guest

By Jessie Ash Arndt
Post Club Editor

Costumes of many eras were on parade yesterday afternoon at the Golden Jubilee party of the Housekeepers' Alliance at which Mrs. Saidie Orr Dunbar, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, was guest of honor. It was at the Y. W. C. A. and was the club's celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the federation.

Mrs. Dunbar reviewed the history of the federation, describing the first meeting for organization, April 24, 1890, in New York, when representatives of 70 women's organizations assembled. They adopted as their slogan, "Unity in Diversity." In 1920, with the reorganization of the General Federation, a new slogan was adopted, "Enrichment of Life Through Better Adjustment of Human Relations." In line with this is the slogan of Mrs. Dunbar's administration, "Adjusting Democracy for Human Welfare."

The General Federation president, in the face of the world crisis, asked the club women to focus their attention on one of three things: Human welfare, peace or the study of the spiritual values and precepts on which our Government is founded.

Mrs. Dunbar, who was introduced by Mrs. Frederick Newburgh, the alliance president, wore modern dress, a black crepe gown, the sleeves embroidered in blue and gold, and a small black hat trimmed with blue wings.

Mrs. Newburgh Wore Dress of 1898

Mrs. Newburgh was dressed in the style of 1898, wearing a black taffeta suit with a white lace, high-collared blouse and a sailor hat with a large bow in front.

Miss Vella A. Winner, editor of the federation magazine, The Clubwoman, GFCW, was also a guest at the party. She wore a gown of the mode of 1916, light tan satin, and a small black hat, held securely with two long gold hat pins.

Miss Phoebe Stine, who sang a group of songs, wore a black dress with a paisley shawl and a little tan ribbon and braid bonnet of the gay 90's. She was accompanied by Miss Marie Ozabal. The program also included a talk on "Brotherhood Week," by Dr. John R. Mason, of the National Conference of Jews and Christians.

Among other guests were Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel, president of the District Federation of Women's Clubs, wearing a smart gray wool jacket dress of the latest spring style, with a matching gray hat; Mrs. LeVerne Beales, first vice president of the federation, also in modern dress.

Mrs. Ruth Snodgrass, a past president of the Alliance and second vice president of the federation, wore her wedding dress (1924), an Alice blue georgette afternoon gown, with a heavy ecru panel from waist to hem in front and hanging from the shoulder in back.

Mrs. Edgar Briant Meritt, past president of the federation and chairman of the golden jubilee committee, was a special guest. Among others were Mrs. Frank M. Stuart, president of the Petworth Club, wearing a pale green satin afternoon gown of 1900, with a little black and pink lace hat; Mrs. Philip Martin, president of the Capitol Hill History Club; Mrs. Hattie M. Roach, president of the Loyal Women's Legion; Mrs. Charles P. Keyser, president of the Entre Nous Club and federation auditor; Mrs. Ernest William Howard, chairman of legislation for the federation, and Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, general federation chairman of Indian Welfare, wearing an Indian costume.

Mrs. Hammerlund Wins First Prize

Mrs. Virginia White Speel, past president of the District Federation and chairman of the birthday parties, and Mrs. John W. Frizzell, past president of the federation, and chairman of the pioneer woman committee, were judges of the costumes for which awards were given in two classes, informal daytime dresses and formal gowns.

In the first class first place went to Mrs. Otto Hammerlund, a guest from Petworth, who wore a beaded back taffeta, Dolman style, and a small black ribbon bonnet of 1880. Second place was awarded Mrs. Ashton Embry, in a shirtwaist costume of 1898, with a black straw hat trimmed with pink flowers, and a close face veil; third went to Mrs. Fred McMaugh, a guest from Petworth, in a black Dolman style poplin with deep fringe (1890), and fourth, Mrs. Lyman F. Kebler, second vice president of the club, in a black silk and lace afternoon gown of 1890, and black hat with plumes.

First place in the formal gowns went to Mrs. Tilma B. Parks, who wore a wedding gown (1900) of white satin, embroidered and made with alencon and cluny lace; second, Mrs. Henry F. Sawtelle, first vice president of the alliance, in a garden party dress of 1905, white chiffon and lace, with a black and white hat and an embroidered parasol; third, Mrs. R. King Stone, corresponding secretary, an evening gown of 1914, pink taffeta with lace and gold thread.

Fashions—Old and New Engaged These Two

Leader Tells Of Woman's Lot in India

Mothers' Health Group Hears an Address By Mme. Kamaladevi

A resolution favoring the dissemination of birth-control information was passed by the All-India Women's Conference of 1935, Mme. Kamaladevi, distinguished Indian woman leader, told members of the Mothers' Health Association at their luncheon meeting yesterday. About 40 members and guests were present at the meeting, held at the headquarters, 715 E street, to hear Mme. Kamaladevi talk on "The Position of Women in India."

She said, although there was sentiment favoring birth control in India as indicated by the action of the conference, little had been done in that direction as there was yet no public medical service for the poor except in a few large cities.

Another foreign guest at the luncheon, who was also a speaker, was Miss Maria L. Accelay, of Puerto Rico. Miss Accelay, the first woman member of the Puerto Rican legislature, is also a pioneer in support of legislation for birth control and is largely responsible for a law recently passed there permitting the dissemination of such information.

Mr. Prentiss Willson, president of the Mothers' Health Association, opened the meeting and Mrs. David B. Karrick, chairman of the program committee, introduced the speakers. The luncheon was the fourth in a series of monthly sessions at which guest speakers have been presented.

East and West Don't Seem So Distant To Mrs. Grosvenor, Recalling Speaker

EAST IS EAST and West is West—but they don't seem so far apart when you hear a luncheon speaker in Washington and recall that the last time you saw him was at a luncheon in Peking.

When Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor attended the League of Women Voters luncheon Monday at which Dr. Owen Lattimore spoke on the Far East, she recalled that she had seen him last three years ago, when she and Dr. Grosvenor, president of the National Geographic Society, were entertained in Peiping. It was after they flew to the Orient aboard the China Clipper.

Among other guests at the Peiping luncheon were the Dalai Lama, and a descendant of Genghis Khan. Dr. Lattimore conversed with him in Mongolian, Mrs. Grosvenor recalled.

LECTURE TOMORROW—Mrs. William Wolfe Smith will present her lecture on "Famous Women of the Bible" tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock in St. Thomas' Parish Hall. It will be under the auspices of the seventh grade church school girls for the benefit of the work of Bishop Bentley in Alaska.

Mrs. Charles McNary, wife of Senator McNary, of Oregon, heads the list of patronesses, which also includes Mrs. Buchanan Merryban, Miss Sophie Casey, Mrs. Ralph Wortley and Mrs. E. K. Webster.

TO LISTEN IN—Members of the women's auxiliaries to the Rainbow Division Veterans tomorrow afternoon will listen to the coast-to-coast broadcast of a Rainbow Division program in honor of Washington's Birthday from 2 to 2:30.

FOR WELFARE—The welfare fund of the Woman's Auxiliary of the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers, will receive the proceeds of a luncheon following the business meeting of the auxiliary yesterday at the home of Mrs. N. H. Darton, 6969 Brookville road, Chevy Chase. The welfare fund is used to aid the needy families of miners.

LEAP YEAR PARTY—The Ohio Girls' Club has announced a leap year dance Saturday from 9 to 12 at the Women's City Club, 736 Jackson place as the next event on its calendar. Miss "Bill" Sweeney is chairman of arrangements and members are now getting their dates lined up for the party.

WELSH CLUB TEA—The Women's Welsh Club will entertain a silver tea tomorrow afternoon at the home of Miss Jane Daniel, 1801 Sixteenth street. Presiding at the tea tables will be Mrs. Ivor Fenton, Mrs. Harvey Tibbett, and Mrs. Edward H. Rees, all wives of members of Congress, and Mrs. Griffith Evans. Miss Pearl Griffith also will assist.

Jones Post Busy In Legion Ball

Members of Jacob Jones Post of the American Legion this year, as in past seasons, have been active in preparations for the annual department ball, to be given tomorrow night at the Mayflower in honor of Washington's Birthday. The party has been given each year since the organization of the American Legion in 1919.

This year, Mrs. Belle K. Graves, department finance officer, has charge of the finances; Mrs. Mary J. Tatspaugh is secretary to the ball committee and Miss Jane R. Cox is serving as vice chairman of the publicity committee, headed by Ted Luther as chairman.

Francis McCarthy, chairman of the ball committee and also named as assistant to John J. Mulvey, chairman of the ticket committe; Miss Edna McIntosh, of the American Legion Auxiliary, and Miss Laura Stewart, of the Jane A. Delano post of the Legion.

Montgomery Quotarians Install Saturday

Underwood & Underwood
EDITH BARNETT

Montgomery County Quotarians will celebrate their eighth birthday with a dinner and installation of officers, Saturday at 7 o'clock at the Kenwood Country Club, Bethesda, Md.

Dr. Irene Wright, of the division of cultural relations of the State Department, will speak. Dr. Mary Powell Northam, of Baltimore, a director of the Board of Quota International, will install the officers.

New officers to be installed are Miss Edith Barnett, of Gaithersburg, president; Mrs. E. Paul Steigner, Silver Spring, vice president; Mrs. Massey Black, Bethesda, treasurer; Mrs. J. R. Enright, Rockville, secretary, and Miss Lucile Barnett, Gaithersburg, director.

Mrs. Massey Black is in charge of arrangements.

Set Example For Children, P.-T. A. Told

The future of civilization presents a challenge to parents to conform to the moral standards they require of their children, members of the District Congress of Parents and Teachers were told yesterday by the Rev. Dr. Paul P. Shearer, of the Takoma Park Presbyterian Church.

Dr. Shearer, who addressed the annual founders' day meeting at the N. E. A. building, asserted that "if our civilization is cracking, as some contend, it may be because mothers today are not conforming to the moral standards of their mothers."

He charged that parents who fail to live up to the moral precepts they teach their children, and who demand of the young people something they are unwilling to do themselves, assume the role of dictators and thereby make potential dictators of their children.

Warns of Work for Luxuries

Dr. Shearer said he had no quarrel with the idea of women working after marriage but asserted that, when a man and women marry and plan to work in order to enjoy luxuries instead of "building the enduring monument of a family, it is then cause for alarm."

He cited, as an indication of moral laxity, District police records, to which he recently had access, showing that almost as many women as men had been arrested for drunkenness in the past year.

"Civilization rises no higher than the standards of its womanhood," said Dr. Shearer, pointing out that such conditions were a challenge to American motherhood.

"The magazines are full of time-saving and labor-saving devices," he said, "but what are women saving their time for? Not for their children in most cases. Time and again, when I make pastoral calls, I find the children home from school, but the mothers not there."

Candles Honor Founders

Dr. Shearer was introduced by Mrs. Earl Sapp, who presided as program chairman. Mrs. C. D. Lowe, president of the District Congress, welcomed the audience of members which filled the N. E. A. board room. During the candle-lighting ceremony she lighted the candles in honor of Mrs. Theodore A. Birney and Mrs. Phoebe Apperson Hearst, the two founders of the organization. Founders' day gifts were presented by the presidents of the various P.-T. A. units. Mrs. T. H. Young was in charge of the candle-lighting observance.

Shafer Seeks ABC Inquiry Showdown

Hire Investigator Or End Hearing, Says Legislator, Indicating Impatience

A showdown in the District liquor inquiry was demanded yesterday by Representative Shafer (Republican), of Michigan, after the first major witness, Ralph A. Lee, proved reluctant to testify against the ABC Board which had just granted him a Class C license.

Shafer, who indicated impatience with some of the questions asked Lee by committee members, insisted that the special subcommittee of the House District Committee either employ a paid investigator or drop the whole inquiry on the ground the two complaints which brought about the inquiry had been adjusted.

During an executive session which followed the hearing Shafer warned the subcommittee that an undirected inquiry in which unsupported charges were aired would provide ammunition for the drys and lead either to a return to prohibition or a government dispensary system.

The subcommittee decided to continue the hearing today and Friday, after which it will decide whether to ask the House for funds to hire an investigator or drop the investigation.

Nothing Definite Known

"I've seen too many District investigations sabotaged by loose remarks and questions," Shafer said. "There have been lots of rumors floating around, but no member of this committee knows anything definite."

Shafer's remarks came after Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, asked Lee whether he was approached by anyone who said he could obtain a liquor license for him. After Schulte had accused the witness of evading the question, Lee replied that "three or four people told me they could get me a liquor license," but added that they were not "in the liquor business."

Lee was not asked to identify the persons, and did not volunteer to name them.

One of the two complainants whose cases led the House District Committee to order an inquiry, Lee told the subcommittee that he wasn't "going to carry on hard feelings forever" with regard to the ABC Board, which on Monday reversed a former decision and granted him a license for Lee's Tavern, 2622 E street northwest.

Procedure Called "Wrong"

Under cross-examination, however, he said he believed the ABC Board was "wrong in its procedure" when the license was denied, and that the Interior Department, which also changed its position, had been legally wrong when it made an objection after the time of a scheduled hearing.

Before Lee testified, A. E. Demaray, associate director of the National Park Service, and George E. Clark, of the National Capital Parks Office, said that "someone" at the ABC Board had called and asked whether the Park Service had any objections to the granting of Lee's license.

They testified that they had subsequently objected because the property was too close to Potomac Park, and they were afraid "unsightly" neon lights might be used. The officials said they had not withdrawn their objections, but had been overruled by Undresecretary of Interior Wirtz.

Lee told the subcommittee that he had talked with Wirtz, and that "other persons" had contacted the Undersecretary in his behalf.

Chairman Eberharter admitted after Lee's testimony that unless something more definite developed the inquiry could not proceed much further.

Schulte Disagrees

Schulte disagreed with Shafer, however, that a paid attorney or investigator is needed by the subcommittee.

"Let's hear the charges," he said. "I've no one to shield."

"Neither have I," shot back Shafer.

After the hearing Shafer explained that he has no objections to a thorough investigation of liquor conditions in the District providing it is conducted in an orderly fashion with witnesses examined in advance of their testimony. He said he didn't want to be involved in a repetition of the milk inquiry, which has caused him "much embarrassment."

Shafer said he believes the Alcoholic Beverage Control Act should be revised, that the number of package stores ought to be reduced, and that local residents be given preference in the granting of licenses. He does not favor a Government dispensary system, however, because of his experience with its operation in Michigan.

This morning the subcommittee will hear Edward M. Welliver, former counsel for the ABC board, offer recommendations for changes in the liquor law and regulations.

Man Found Dead In Vacant House By 3 Children

A man tentatively identified as Percy Lee Tiller, 51, was found dead yesterday afternoon in a second floor closet of a vacant house at 1519 Lamont street northwest.

The name was found on a Social Security card in one of his pockets. The card also listed the address, 617 Roxborough place northwest.

Three boys, playing in the house, found the man and called Policeman William Boland, who was walking his beat nearby. The body was taken to the morgue.

The house in which he was found was purchased about a year ago by the District for a playground development. Police said they thought the man had entered the house during the cold spell.

Pupils Demonstrate Work at Night Session; Student Team Defeats Elders in Information Please Quiz

Woodrow Wilson High School hummed with activity last night as parents looked in on their children who were singing, drawing, sewing, drilling in the armory, playing in the orchestra and working in the art metal shop and foods laboratory.

After 11 of these groups were shown in action in various rooms, the Woodrow Wilson Home and School Association held its meeting in the auditorium. The organization requested that an assistant principal, serving as dean of boys, be provided in the 1941 budget.

A student team triumphed over a parent team in an "Information Please" program conducted by Charles Barry. The students included Judy Chalmers, Virginia Riley, Henry Silsbee, Paul Smith, Cromwell Warner. The line-up of parents included Mrs. Raymond Clapper, Mrs. M. J. Proffitt, Capt. John Ewald, Clarence L. Forsling, W. C. Bowen.

Four girls, Marian Ross, Annette Davis, Betty Stribling and Jane Daniels, presented Hawaiian dances.

House Group Drops Probe Of Gas Sales

Elwood Seal Is Asked Whether a New Law Will Be Needed Here

Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal yesterday was called upon for an opinion as to whether legislation is needed to protect the motoring public against misrepresentation in the sale of gasoline as a House subcommittee abandoned an investigation.

Chairman Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, cited the fraudulent advertising section of the District criminal code and suggesetd that it seemed broad enough to cover the sale of regular gasoline as high test or other efforts to cheat the buyer.

"If this law hasn't got enough teeth in it," Nichols said, "we'll draw up a new bill."

Dickinson Explains Tests

The subcommittee heard Dr. H. C. Dickinson, of the Bureau of Standards, explain how tests were made of gasoline samples found deficient in octane count early last year.

While explaining he was unfamilar with local marketing conditions. Dr. Dickinson, in response to a question put by Nichols, said that on the basis of the reports of George M. Roberts, superintendent of weights, measures and markets, since March, 1939, there appeared to be no conditions in need of correction.

Octane Rating Increases

The witness said that the major oil companies now test their own and competitors' gasoline regularly as to octane rating and other qualities. The octane rating of gasoline has been on the increase within recent months, he said.

"The public is really getting the benefit of improved quality," he said.

Listen to God Audience Told At Noon Rites

Lenten churchgoers yesterday were told to "see God" and "listen to God" at noonday services in the Penn Theater and Epiphany Church.

The Rev. J. Lowrey Fendrich, pastor of Metropolitan Presbyterian Church, spoke at the Southeast union services on the text, "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God." To see God is to realize God's mind in us, our spiritual destiny, he said. Purity in heart he described as singleness of purpose, rather than moral or physical purity.

"Keep your eye single, center it on your divine destiny, and you will see God," he said. He spoke in place of the Rev. Edward H. Pruden, pastor of the First Baptist Church, who was ill with the grip.

The Very Rev. Chester B. Emerson, D.D., dean of Trinity Cathedral, Cleveland, told his listeners at Epiphany Church that "our whole duty is to listen for the voice of God and obey what we have heard.

"When we hearken to God we shall hear a word of wisdom for our confused minds, and we shall sense a tone of assurance which will allay our panic of fear and uncertainty," he said.

"We shall have the promise of peace for the turbulence within, and we shall be assured of an everlasting covenant with Him Whose wisdom is certain, Whose authority is absolute, Whose peace is sure, and Whose covenants are inviolable."

Zoning Action Rescinded By Citizens

Friendship Heights Group Withdraws Approval of Change To Commercial

In a tumultuous session attended by 350 residents of the neighborhood, Friendship Heights Citizens Association last night rescinded its approval of a zoning change which would allow the erection of a large department store opposite the Janney School, Albemarle street at Forty-second northwest.

More than half of the persons at the meeting, held in the school, were not members of the association and participated only as observers.

Immediately after the meeting petitions were circulated urging the Zoning Commission to reconsider its change in zoning, from residential A to commercial, which would permit Sears Roebuck Co. to construct a one-story plant. The building site, 36,763 square feet, is bounded by Wisconsin avenue, Albemarle street, and River road northwest.

The association on February 7 voted to indorse the zoning change, and had commissioned its president, Samuel J. Flickinger, to state the organization's stand at the Zoning Commission's hearing. Last night's special meeting was called on petition of members opposing the indorsement.

Feared Traffic Increase

Construction of the store, which would have parking facilities on its roof, was opposed chiefly on the ground it would greatly increase traffic hazards in the sector.

It was pointed out that within the area of the proposed store were the Janney, Alice Deal, Woodrow Wilson, Immaculata Seminary, Dumblaine and St. Ann's schools, drawing 3,000 children, and three churches.

Flickinger explained that the executive committee, of which he is chairman, together with representatives of the churches, had inspected the Sears Roebuck model of the proposed plant, and that they had unanimously agreed to support the zoning change, with certain qualifications, because there was adjacent to the lot in the residential sector enough commercial-sector land to allow for the erection of a three-story building.

Thus, Flickinger said, the committee and association had approved the change "as the lesser of two evils."

That sentiment had reversed since the Feb. 7 meeting was apparent as many speakers protested the project, and few rose to defend it. It was pointed out, however, that the "barn door was already closed" since the Zoning Commission had acted, and the only recourse left was in the courts through the request of an injunction by an abutting property holder.

Hearing Possible

Leonard L. Tucker, who introduced the rescinding resolution, said it was still possible for the residents to gain a hearing from the zoning board "on sufferance." Six residents volunteered to appeal to Congressmen to express the sentiment of the neighborhood to District and zoning commissioners.

According to Mrs. William E. Wise, president of the Janney Parent-Teacher Association, Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee has promised to aid in obtaining a rehearing. Letters have been sent to officials asking that the proposal be dropped, it is said.

Maintaining that the four blocks around the disputed land already contained the worst traffic conditions in the District, James Richardson warned that the increased flow of traffic to the store would make conditions worse than ever.

Proponents of the zoning change averred that the company would take pains to keep from creating new traffic hazards and that police would be able to handle any extra traffic problems.

Columbia Heights Forum

The Citizens Forum of Columbia Heights last night gave its support to W. T. Walter, principal of Powell Junior High School, as principal of the Calvin Coolidge High School, which will open next year.

A committee was appointed to appear before the House subcommittee on reorganization of the District government and urge that an elective council be provided that would give the citizens a voice in District government. Named to the committee were H. C. Phillips, chairman; A. M. Edwards and W. W. Coulliette.

Dr. A. L. Howard Retires From City Schools After 50 Years—and Isn't Sad About It

DR. FRANK W. BALLOU, Superintendent of Schools — DR. A. L. HOWARD, Retires After 50 Years of Service — DR. CHESTER HOLMES, Assistant Superintendent of Schools

Dr. Howard was given a testimonial dinner last night at the Kennedy-Warren on his retirement as head of the department of business education, District public schools

Dr. A. L. Howard's retirement after nearly 50 years in the District school system was marked by a testimonial dinner last night—but none of his younger colleagues told more jokes in their speeches or appeared any livelier than he.

Approximately 200 teachers and others heard him lauded by school officials at the dinner at the Kennedy-Warren. Then Dr. Howard stood, with his new gift watch in hand, and looked somewhat like a testimonial to the fact that retirement isn't a melancholy occasion.

Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, read a statement which the Board of Education incorporated into its records. It traced Dr. Howard's career from his appointment 49½ years ago as an elementary school teacher at a $400 annual salary to the headship of the department of business education, a position which he has held since 1918.

Teachers in that department, which has increased from 35 to more than 170 since 1918, gave him the watch. Miss Edith Drumm made the speech of presentation.

Dr. Howard, a native of Washington, will be 70 years old tomorrow. He was welcomed to the ranks of the retired by Allan Davis, former principal of Roosevelt High.

Since Dr. Howard is building a new home as one of the first forward-looking gestures in his retirement, Mrs. Gladys I. Sanders sang as one of her solos, "I Love A Little Cottage."

Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education; Robert L. Haycock, assistant superintendent; Dr. C. M. Holmes, assistant superintendent, who was toastmaster, and Miss May P. Bradshaw, principal of Roosevelt High, paid tribute to Dr. Howard's service.

In the family group surrounding Dr. Howard at the dinner were his wife, three daughters, Mrs. Robert M. Harper, Mrs. W. T. Birthright, Mrs. T. R. Burns, jr. and their husbands.

Laxity Denied In Inspecting Old Dwellings

Houses Reported Are Examined, Oehmann Says

Accusations by the Washington Housing Association that the District building inspector's office is lax in enforcing laws pertaining to bad housing conditions were termed last night by Col. J. W. Oehmann as "making a mountain out of a mole hill."

The building inspector said every old dwelling reported by the association as being in violation was being inspected regularly and that he had issued orders to his staff to serve notice on landlords.

In a statement, the association president, J. Bernard Wyckoff, said a special building inspector assigned to follow up the complaints of the association was removed from this work last May.

"Since then, the building department appears to have been busy on inspection of new buildings, neglecting the inspection of the old dwellings reported by the association as having legal violations," Wyckoff said.

This special inspector, Charles Garner, has been put back to work covering his regular territory, Col. Oehmann said. He said the complaints from the association are handled by the 10 building inspectors on his staff, the assignments depending upon the location of the complaint. The city is divided into 10 territories.

Thirty-four years ago Congress passed a law providing for condemnation of insanitary buildings. The act provided for a board, consisting of the assistant to the Engineer Commissioner in charge of buildings, the health officer and the inspector of buildings. The board was to have jurisdiction and authority to examine the sanitary condition of all buildings, to condemn those in such condition as to endanger health or lives of occupants and to cause all such buildings to be vacated and removed. According to the association statement, the board had 20 years of "active life." After 20 years the law was contested in the District Supreme Court and the District was compelled to pay $1,100 damages for the demolition of two "insanitary, brokendown houses," the association reported.

The present board consists of Col. Oehmann, Assistant Engineer Commissioner John L. Person, and Health Officer George C. Ruhland.

Kennedy to Retire After Leaving London

Boston, Feb. 20 (AP).—Joseph P. Kennedy, United States Ambassador to Great Britain, said tonight he would retire from public life when he completes his present work at the Court of St. James's.

Here for a physical checkup before sailing Saturday from New York to resume his post, the Ambassador told interviewers:

"I will be all through when I finish at London—but I can't say when that will be."

Capital News In Brief

Two Men Held Up

Two bandits last night robbed a District man of $23 in his home as another took $9 from a Chevy Chase (Md.) resident in a street holdup.

Two young colored men forced their way into the home of Wardell Carter, at 921 Union court northwest, and took all his pocket money after threatening him with a gun and a razor.

Joseph G. Cooper, Chevy Chase, stepping into his automobile in the 3800 block of Harrison street northwest when a man forced him at gunpoint to turn over $9. The man fled down an alley.

Program of Spirituals

Negro spirituals will be sung by the Glendale Community Chorus and a WPA quartet at 8:30 p. m. today in the Garnet Patterson Auditorium, Ninth and U streets northwest. The program is part of a national festival of American music sponsored by the WPA.

Debate Ramspeck Bill

The Ramspeck Civil Service extension bill was denounced and praised in a debate last night before the Federal Personnel Association in the Willard Hotel.

Representative Paul J. Kilday (Democrat), of Texas, said the bill had the double merit of extending the classification system to field workers and protecting the civil service system. E. Claude Babcock, president of the association, said the bill was unconstitutional.

Convention Plans Made

Plans for the five-day convention of the Five State Dental Clinic here in May were discussed last night by the general committee in charge of preparations, headed by Dr. G. B. Clendenin, at a meeting in the Willard Hotel. The convention will be held at the Willard May 19 to 23.

29 Are Indicted

Twenty-nine persons were accused of offenses ranging from assault to robbery in 29 indictments presented before Justice Peyton Gordon of the District Court yesterday.

The grand jury dismissed charges against three persons.

Those indicted and the charges were:

Receiving stolen property—Clarence Carter, 44, colored.

Running a lottery and having numbers tickets—Thomas P. Torrillo.

Assault with dangerous weapon—James R. Piercy, 29; Edward Woffard, 24, colored; William H. Daniels, 27, colored.

D.C. Racketeers Worst Critics, Siddons Says

Better Business Bureau President Explains Activities to Rotary

Promoters of rackets are the "severest critics" of the Washington Better Business Bureau, Frederick H. P. Siddons, president, said yesterday.

In an address yesterday before the vocational service committee of the Washington Rotary Club, Siddons said his group is "justly proud" of this criticism.

"We have constantly maintained vigilance against those who prey upon the public and business alike and will continue to expose their fakes and aid wherever possible in their prosecution," he said.

The meeting yesterday at the Willard Hotel of the vocational service committee is part of the program of Rotary Observance Week in commemoration of the thirty-fifth anniversary of the founding of Rotary. Highlight of the observance is the dinner at 7 p. m. today in the Willard.

Yesterday's meeting was under the guidance of Walter Hill Smith, chairman of the vocational service committee. Among those present were Claude Woodward, Lawrence E. Williams, Edward D. Shaw, Charles J. Columbus, Alvin Q. Ehrlich, Lawrence S. Smith, Z. D. Blackistone 3d, Henry P. Fowler, Minor Hudson and Col. Harrison Brand.

Trophy Presented To Col. Smith

Col. Sumpter Smith, chairman of the interdepartmental commission supervising the Gravelly Point Airport, last night complimented members of the Washington Air Derby Association on their boosting the nearby site on the Potomac River from the start.

Col. Smith spoke at the Raleigh Hotel after accepting the association's trophy for his part in the national airport project. The trophy had been presented to Col. Smith by Speaker Bankhead at the Capitol earlier in the day.

2 Boys Hurt In Traffic; Victim Dies

4-Year-Old, Coming Back From Errand, Struck by Auto; Youth on Bicycle Hit

A boy and a youth were injured in traffic accidents yesterday as an elderly pedestrian died from injuries. The fatality, the second in 24 hours, brought Washington's 1940 traffic toll to nine, eight fewer than at the same time last year.

Eight-year-old Vern Prentice, of 218 John Marshall place, son of the director of the Gospel Mission, was injured last night when he was hit by an automobile leaving the District Municipal Garage.

Mrs. Harvey Prentice, the boy's mother, said he was returning from an errand on Pennsylvania avenue at the time of the accident. He was taken to Casualty Hospital, where examination disclosed his condition was not serious.

Driver of the car was John Tablear, 43, colored, of 2205 Flagler place northwest.

Knocked From Bicycle

Claude Mallard, 16, of 57-A L street northwest, was treated for head injuries, face and leg cuts at Casualty Hospital last night after he was knocked from his bicycle at Eighth and K streets northeast by a car which police said was driven by Edgar J. Long, 48, of 28 I street northwest.

Latest automobile victim was William Stetson, 73, no fixed address, who died at Casualty Hospital early yesterday. He was struck by an automobile at Sixth and G streets northwest, Sunday.

Stetson was unidentified for more than 48 hours. Police identified him yesterday through fingerprints on file at headquarters. His address had not been determined last night.

Hospital attaches said Stetson died of a fractured left leg and shock. He was knocked down, according to police, by a car driven by John P. Rowles, 47, of 1918 Calvert street northwest. Rowles will appear at a coroner's inquest, the date of which has not been set.

Struck by Street Car

James Ritter, 70, of 210 F street northwest, died at Casualty Hospital early Monday of injuries suffered a few hours after the Stetson accident, on the same street only four blocks away. He was struck by a street car in the 200 block G street northwest.

A coroner's jury yesterday investigated the hit-run death of James H. Jones, 60, of 624 New York avenue northwest, and held the "unknown driver of a black truck" responsible for his death.

Jones died at Emergency Hospital last Friday of internal injuries, fractured legs and shock, six days after he was struck at Ninth and M streets northwest, by a truck which failed to stop.

Witnesses told the jury yesterday that Jones was crossing the street when a truck "traveling at a moderate speed" knocked him down and sped away.

Seventeen persons had been killed in traffic mishaps at this time last year.

Capt. Rohde Urges Assistance For Finland

Money and supplies for Finland now mean help for the entire democratic world, Capt. Borge Rohde said here last night.

Capt. Rohde, husband of the former Ruth Bryan Owen, once American Minister to Denmark, warned of the danger to democracy of a victory by the Soviet "juggernaut."

The former Danish Royal Guard officer, speaking at a meeting of Zeta Beta Chi, women's business sorority, in the Washington Hotel, said this country's varied racial makeup fitted the United States for leadership in promoting world understanding.

July 12 to Be D. C. Day At West Coast Fair

Commissioner Hazen yesterday announced District of Columbia Day will be observed July 12 at the San Francisco World's Fair. The District delegation will leave July 3.

Legs, Pictures and Things

In Which a Filler-In Tackles a Mail Jam

— Dancer Zorina's Wobbly Limbs Are Costly;
— Jottings on Evolution of Carmen Miranda;
— Capitol Preens Its Coming Attractions

By Gerald G. Gross

Substituting for Nelson B. Bell.

BROWSING THROUGH THE MAIL, stacked mountain-high, on the desk of N. B. B., who is having a dickens of a time shaking off That Cold:

"Zorina's million-dollar legs," writes Harry Brand, from Hollywood, "are nicking Twentieth Century-Fox for a loss of several thousands."

He goes on to explain that, while the dancer has returned to work in "I Was An Adventuress," after a 10-day influenza siege, her underpinning is still so wobbly that the studio has had to postpone her ballet scenes for a month to give her a chance to regain her strength.

"This is the first time in 10 years that she has failed to keep to a schedule," according to the despondent Mr. Brand.

"Having expounded with interesting evidence the case of forthcoming attractions that would follow 'Gone With the Wind' at the Palace, Loew's Division Manager Carter Barron today takes up the argument in favor of Loew's Capitol and its promising schedule," bulletins (Hoo)Ray Bell.

He—or they—would have you know that "The Light That Failed," which brings Ronald Colman, Walter Huston and Ida Lupino to the Capitol for a week beginning Friday, will be followed by such elaborate features as "Broadway Melody of 1940," with Fred Astaire and Eleanor Powell; Shirley Temple in "The Blue Bird;" "The Man From Dakota," with Wallace Beery and Dolores Del Rio; Tyrone Power and Dorothy Lamour in "Dance With the Devil;" "My Son, My Son," starring Madeleine Carroll, Brian Aherne, Louis Hayward and Laraine Day; Robert Young and Helen Gilbert in "Florian," and "The Farmer's Daughter," with Martha Raye and Charles Ruggles.

Somewhat delayed in the publication is the announcement that the opening of "Saint Joan" at the Belasco has been postponed from March 3 to March 10. Luise Rainer is the star of this Washington Civic Theater production of the Bernard Shaw masterpiece.

Whereupon into this third floor substituterie walks Joe Flynn, hungry for a chunk of type in the interests of "The Streets of Paris," which he is representing on this visit to Washington. He politely proffers attractive art and copy concerning the revue which comes to the National, March 4, and here is where dog bites man—WE tell HIM a story about Carmen Miranda, the star of his show.

It was one day last summer and we had gone up to New York to greet Dr. William M. Mann, director of National Zoological Park, and Mrs. Mann, who were returning from an animal collecting expedition in South America. As she was waiting to go through customs, Mrs. Mann asked:

"Has the musical featuring Carmen Miranda opened yet?"

"Who," we replied with another question, "may Carmen Miranda be?"

"A singer who can give a song things it doesn't have," said Mrs. Mann. "But you'll find out for yourself. Bill and I heard her in Rio a few weeks ago."

It happened that "The Streets of Paris," with the aforementioned Carmen Miranda, premiered in New York a day or two after the Manns disembarked and pretty soon, thanks to press notices and the radio, the capricious interpreter of "Souse American Way" had a coast-to-coast reputation on this continent.

"Very interesting," said Mr. Flynn, when we'd finished, "but have you heard that Billy Branch, who throws knives at his wife, is being sued by her for ——.

Miscellany—Locale premieres still being fashionable, "Northwest Passage" made its debut last night in Boise, Idaho, with Gov. G. A. Bottolfsen as guest of honor. "The Light That Failed" was screened yesterday by the Loew forces but this department couldn't make it. "To Meet Three Saints," opening program of the Washington Catholic Theater Cycle, will be given at 8:30 p. m., March 3, in St. Paul's auditorium, 1421 V street northwest. Andrew R. Kelley, newspaperman and drama editor, will be honored by the Variety Club at a testimonial dinner at the Willard, March 8.

Katharine Cornell's personal following being vast as it is and "No Time For Comedy" not being what one would term a great play, although it is certainly better than average, there is, unhappily, a good chance that the brilliance of the star's reputation will distract attention from the provocative thesis of Mr. Behrman's play.

That is anything but what it should be. While Miss Cornell's performance is 18-carat and those of Francis Lederer, Margalo Gillmore and the other members of the small cast are comparable, the conviction will not down that here the play, if it ever was, is the thing.

It was about time a play came along pitting the so-called unimportant against the so-called important, appraising the relative merits of lightness and heaviness. Who was it said he would raher write the Nation's songs than make its laws?

Mr. Behrman has treated the idea skillfully and entertainingly. His show would—or certainly should—survive without the presence of a Cornell and, having her as Linda Esterbruch, it is a double-barrelled success.

Incidentally, there is the usual matinee today and an extra holiday matinee tomorrow.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Feb. 20.

With submarine warfare taking up so many of the headlines, it reminds me of something Josephus Daniels said more than 20 years ago—"Thank God, romance is not dead in the Navy." Fay Bainter caused a crisis in the American fleet. As the bride of Lieut. Comdr. Sidney Venable, she went to France to help entertain soldiers during the World War. The two were sent to different stations and at the end of the war Fay cabled her bridegroom that she was heading home aboard a liner. He received the cable on his own destroyer at New York—was so excited, phoned the engine room—fired up the boilers—met Fay in mid-Atlantic and escorted her home with all flags flying.

But there was the dickens to pay. The Navy, which said nobody could swipe one of their boats for love, took the commander's sword away—called him for court martial. When things looked worst, Secretary Daniels reviewed the case—said he was glad there was still romance in the Navy—and Venable got off with the loss of rank and five demerits.

Here's a human interest story I've never heard before about two gallant gentlemen who had the greatest admiration for each other, and both facing the sunset of their lives. One was that wonderful editor of the N. Y. World, Frank Cobb, and the other Woodrow Wilson, who, until the end, kept up an animated correspondence.

Mr. Cobb was very amused one day to receive the following letter from Mr. Wilson (who was in a wheelchair at that time): "Why don't you take up golf? It would do wonders for you. It did for me." Mr. Cobb passed away the following week.

And speaking of big men, Pat O'Brien says he had quite a time on his trip East with "The Fighting 69th." One night at a banquet he was seated next to Gov. Lehman, then at a Finnish relief dinner his dinner neighbor was none other than Herbert Hoover. And then there were only one place left for him to go. Yes, you've guessed it—he went to Washington where he met the President, Franklin D. Roosevelt himself. After all that, Pat says Hollywood looks a snip commonplace—but good.

Feeling Great, Bette Davis Back at Work on New Film

By Frederick C. Othman

United Press Hollywood Correspondent

Hollywood, Feb. 20 (U.P.).—Bette Davis, looking only vaguely like the tired woman who appeared in "Dark Victory," returned to work before the camera today, a walking example of the theory that maybe an actress deserves an occasional rest.

Her eyes were bright and her cheeks were round and she said she didn't even feel like herself, after seven months of doing nothing except sleep. She gained 35 pounds and immediately had to lose 15 of them because she couldn't zip her skirts on.

She's working in "All This and Heaven Too," with Charles Boyer and if there's anything in the idea that an actress ought to feel well to do good work, it should be the best picture of her career. If it is, it really will be something.

Between scenes, she leaned back in a Warner Bros. chair, drank a pot of Warner Bros. chocolate, ate some Warner Bros. cinnamon toast and said she believed her vacation might prove an excellent Warner Bros. investment.

14-Hour Jeeper

"I'm always reading about how actors want to get away from it all," she said. "About how they're sick of Hollywood.

"It wasn't that way with me. I liked my work and I didn't want to get away from anything. But I was so tired I could hardly see.

"I made five pictures last year, with only one week between each one, and they weren't easy ones, either. When 'Dark Victory' came up I told the studio I didn't believe I could do it. I felt terrible, and I looked it. But the studio said I was supposed to look bad and I suppose it turned out all right."

(Her supposition was correct. Odds are that she'll win the Academy award next month for the best performance of the year as the girl with the brain tumor, who wasn't supposed to know it, but did.)

"Anyhow," Miss Davis continued, "when I finally got my vacation, and I will admit I had to fight for it, I just went to bed, and for ten months I slept 14 hours a day.

"My friends and family thought there was something seriously wrong with me. I began to wonder, myself. But after a while I caught up on my sleep.

Back to New England

"I went to New York, but life there seemed to be as trying as it was in Hollywood. And of all the things I didn't want to do was go to night clubs and spend my evenings talking to other tired actors.

"So I went up to Franconia, N. H., where I'd bought a little piece of ground with a barn on it, and got interested in building me a house. That really was fun and relaxation. I'm a New Englander, anyway, and it was great to be back again among people who only cared what you were, and who didn't give a hoot about what you might have done in Hollywood.

"When I finished that last picture I weighed 101 pounds. When I got back I weighed 136. Now I'm down to 116 and I certainly don't want to get any thinner."

Miss Davis said she thought it was a shame actresses had to train down to skin and bones.

"They can't be healthy when they're under weight," she said, "and to make it worse they seem to have set the fashion for women all over the country to be too thin. I'm glad to see curves becoming fashionable and I know that when I retire from pictures, I'm going to be a nice, plump, comfortable-looking middle-aged lady. There'll be no streamlined figure for me."

Sacrifice of Youth

Heart-wrenching drama and the story of a young girl's sacrifice feature, "A Bill of Divorcement," RKO Radio's newest offering. Maureen O'Hara, Adolphe Menjou, Fay Bainter, Herbert Marshall, Dame May Whitty and Patric Knowles head the cast.

A Dramatic Lombard

Cast in the role of a high-minded nurse, Carole Lombard is said to have one of the finest dramatic parts of her career in A. J. Cronin's "Vigil in the Night." Brian Aherne and Anne Shirley share honors with the star.

Complicated Cast

A small boy, a big dog, a little girl and a litter of puppies supply most of the complications of "Little Orvie," RKO Radio's picturization of the famous Booth Tarkington story. Eight-year-old Johnny Sheffield plays the title role.

"Why so quiet?" asked Goldwyn, "Who's listening?" . . . "I'd say hello to you louder," replied Krasna, "except that I hear you were going out of business."

SAM BEHRMAN: Margalo Gilmore, who is touring with Katharine Cornell in your play, "No Time for Comedy," flew in for the week-end, to visit her family. She's a bit weary of touring, and doesn't envy Miss Cornell her stardom. "Overnight jumps, always traveling, traveling, traveling," sighed Miss Gillmore. "I don't want to be a star. What a price to pay—so that the people of Texas will have heard of you."

CORDELL HULL: Larry Adler received a censored letter from Australia, but was able to decipher the sentence which the censor had obliterated. It read: "Do you think America would enter the war, if we paid our debt?" . . . Walter Herrick: Your daughter, Eileen, and her groom, George Lowther, are telling all—for True Story magazine.

G. W. Routs Maryland, 44-26, for D. C. Title

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 20.—The repercussions of the Joe Louis-Arthur Godoy affair were felt at least as far South as Orlando. The fight served to loosen the tongue of the local fight promoter, a canny gentleman named Turner Scott, and much of the vagueness of Mr. Godoy's early fistic background was cleared up.

POVICH

When he entered the ring against Louis, Godoy was supposed to have participated in 64 professional bouts, which is a passel in any weight division and, in fact, more than twice as many fights as Champion Louis himself had to his credit. But aside from two decisions over Tony Galento, little was known of Godoy's other campaigns and his handlers volunteered precious little information. In fact, they never boasted about those two victories over Galento until after Tony dumped Louis on the floor for a spell. Then those two triumphs over Galento became important to Godoy.

But, thanks to Mr. Turner Scott, who as we were saying is Orlando's fistic impresario, we are able to get a line on the caliber of at least 15 of Godoy's early opponents in this country. "I ought to know," says Mr. Scott. "I was Godoy's 'garbage man' when that Chilean bum first came to the United States claiming to be a fighter."

If you are a bit rusty on your prize fight parlance and are wondering, perhaps, just what a fistic "garbage man" might be, Mr. Scott explains: "The garbage man is the guy who goes out and rounds up the bums to be thrown in there against the fighter we're building up. Primo Carnera had a half-dozen working for him. The fights aren't fixed, but we're careful that the bums we get won't lick our hero. In other words, we've got to be sure that they can't fight much—that they're really garbage."

Well, says Mr. Scott, he personally dug up no less than 15 stiffs for Godoy's early campaigning in America, mostly in Florida. "I rounded up some pips, too. Altogether we sent Godoy to the post 15 times against some of the choicest bric-a-brac you ever did see and every time we push a guy out to fight him, we tie a rope around the stiff's neck to haul him back in after the referee's count."

All this time, says Scott, they are working out of Miami, where Godoy landed on his first trip to the United States. "I'm handling fighters down there with Bill Gore about seven years ago when we hear that a fellow named Louis Buoy is bringing in a big lug that he rescued from the Chilean army for a century note. It's Godoy, of course.

"Well, we meet the boat from Havana and here comes Buoy and a big guy who has to be Godoy. He already looks like he's been punched around a bit. Anyway, we stick him in a gymnasium for a once-over and the first thing we notice is that he can't punch his way out through a soda cracker. No wallop whatsoever. He's never in position to throw a punch that will hurt, and we begin to think he is a real dilly.

"But after a while we begin to notice, too, that if he can't hit he can certainly take it. We have three big lugs in there with Godoy at various times and he takes their Sunday punches and laughs at 'em. We know we got a tough guy and that's something, so then we go out to line up the garbage.

Another thing about Godoy. "He had the best arms and legs I ever saw for certain things. For example, he could climb a tree like a monkey. I've seen him shinny up a cocoanut tree in ten seconds flat and dangle there at the top grinning like something out of the jungle."

It wasn't any great surprise to Mr. Scott that Godoy went the 15-round limit with Louis. In fact, the local promoter predicted exactly that eventuality in the Orlando Sentinel-Star before the fight. "I never did see how Louis could knock Godoy out," recites Scott.

"We'll give Louis all the credit due him for being a good fighter but he never has been too fast a thinker inside the ropes. There are situations he don't know how to meet unless his trainer, Jack Blackburn, takes him aside and drills him for weeks and once that opening gong rings there's no time for conferences. Louis doesn't know how to adjust himself to the unexpected and we know now that he never expected Godoy to fight from that low crouch.

"Anyway, Godoy figured to be the toughest guy Louis ever fought. Not the best, but the toughest. That's one thing we always did say about that Chilean, he could take it. I don't believe Louis was alibiing when he said he was afraid he'd hurt his hands punching that Chilean. He would, too. The punches that Louis knocked those other guys out with wouldn't knock out Godoy, who is the closest thing to an iron man I ever did see."

The man who had more to do with Godoy's fistic style than any other was another Chilean named Stanley Loyaza, who took an interest in the fellow when he married the daughter of Godoy's first manager, Louis Buoy. Loyaza in his day was a prominent contender for lightweight honors in American rings and, like Godoy, was known best for his durability.

It seems that when the Chilean, Buoy, went broke in his efforts to build up Godoy, a Florida fight manager named Bill Gore bought the fighter cheaply. Gore still holds a contract on Godoy that he thinks is perfectly valid and any day, now that Godoy is established as an attraction, Gore will shout for his cut of the fighter.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Feb. 20.—This particular fool being known for his penchant for walking in where angels have a reluctance to step, he would like today to name his official first ten of U. S. basketball.

CONSIDINE

They are (and please don't spread this around). 1—New York University. 2—Southern California. 3—Oklahoma Aggies. 4—Colorado. 5—DePaul. 6—Duquesne. 7—Long Island U. 8—Santa Clara. 9—Purdue, and 10—St. John's, of Brooklyn.

Don't ask us why. But if the football writers of New York can give off a reflective burp, after their weekly gridiron luncheon during the season, and vote an official first ten, so can we. For we have the same license. We, too, haven't seen 70 per cent of the teams.

We base our own official figures on victories. N. Y. U. is the only unbeaten team in the country playing major foes. Southern Cal. has lost one, mopped up the Midwest and stopped L. I. U. The Oklahoma Aggies lost their opener, then won 21 straight. Colorado is the Rocky Mountain champ for the third straight year. DePaul beat Purdue, the coming Big Ten champ, won 15 straight after losing in overtime to Southern Cal, and the other two games it lost saw three of its regulars out of the line-up.

As for Duquesne, it lost only to Southern Cal, and it beat the next best team, in our official ratings, L. I. U. Santa Clara has won 15 of 18, despite a slump in midseason. Purdue heads the hotbed of U. S. basketball, the Midwest, and St. John's rates the tenth position if for no other reason than it knocked off Loyola, of Chicago, and Bradley, in Peoria, Ill. Basketball teams are still 50 per cent tougher at home and Bradley is tough even away from home.

Four of the top-flight teams play tomorrow night at the garden. N. Y. U. plays St. John's, and L. I. U. takes on DePaul. The double-header, thirteenth bill of the garden season, is long since a sellout. It will shove the season's attendance beyond the record of 196,000 spectators, set last year, and there is still another date to go, which means that the new mark will be something around 225,000. As Calvin Coolidge would put it, that's a lot of people; nearly 226,000, in fact.

College basketball has gone into the big time, long since, but surprisingly its players still remain homebred. DePaul's players all are Chicago boys, and the L. I. U.'s hail from New York. For some reason, probably the nature of the game, colleges which have scoured the country looking for a court genius here and one there have wound up in the ashcan. The better teams were raised together. That is why schools that have little or no standing in any other sport can become great figures in basketball, if they can capture, by one device or another, a cluster of basketball acquaintances to man their club.

Incidentally, the president of the National Professional Football League, Carl Storck, announces today that pro ball—"contrary to popular belief"—is not hurting college football. He points with some pride to the fact that attendances at college football games rose 1 per cent last year, while the Storck Club was attracting 12 per cent more than during 1938. Storck wants no one to think of the two cliques as rivals, and we trust you'll mind him. He points out that every one of the 287 big league pro players last year was a college grad, and that some colleges have been sporting enough to hire former pros.

That's very nice, but it's an outcropping of pro ball's incorrigible inferiority complex, in that it is defensive in tone. The pro game doesn't have to blow kisses at college ball any more. It's a bigger,

Tony Penna, Demaret Tie In Western

Snead, Needing Two Pars, Wilts, Ends Up in 3d Place; Play-Off Is Today

By the Associated Press

Houston, Tex., Feb. 20.—Tony Penna, who didn't know he had a chance, and Jimmy Demaret, whose friends wouldn't let him forget it, tied for the Western Open golf championship today in a garrison finish seldom equaled for sheer drama.

Penna and Demaret lagged behind Sammy Snead starting the final round, but mournful Sam wilted with the title in sight and dropped to third place, a stroke behind.

A nine over par total of 293 gave Penna and Demaret top honors, founded on Penna's last day rounds of 74—73 and Demaret's 76—71 over the par 71 River Oaks course.

Penna was the first of the three-some to post his score and settled back to watch the fight between Demaret and Snead, who were playing together in the last group of entrants.

Players Are Told

Members of the gallery of 5,000 told them the situation as they came up to No. 17: Snead could win by parring the next two holes even if Demaret did likewise.

Snead belted his drive down the 374-yard fairway. It trickled to the edge of the rough on the left and his low second shot caught a trap. He was on in three and down in two for a bogey five.

That finished Snead. He took a par on 18 but it wasn't good enough.

Demaret, who had to stop and joke with friends all along the route, parred 17 to gain a stroke on Snead and pull even with Penna.

His second shot on the par 4 No. 18 rolled 20 feet above the hole. He dropped a wisecrack to the gallery—"Boy, how I'd like a drink of water now"—and then stepped up to his putt.

Drops Next One

It trickled within 2 feet. But Demaret dropped the next one without much delay. It was the last putt of the day, and the most important one.

Demaret and Penna will play off their tie tomorrow over 18 holes for $1,000 top money of the $5,000 tournament.

In fourth place was Craig Wood, of Mamaroneck, N. Y., with 75, 74—296. Following him were Sam Byrd, Philadelphia, 72, 75—297; Dick Metz, of Chicago, 74, 77—299, and Harold (Jug) McSpaden, 77, 78—300.

Ralph Guldahl, of Dallas, and Clayton Heafner, of Linville, N. C., were hot on Snead's heels when the day's play began but blew themselves to whopping scores and out of the running.

Guldahl had 77, 81 for 303 and Heafner 81, 77 for 302.

Miss Irwin Tops Golfers

N. J. Girl Shoots 76; Patty Berg Second

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 20 (U.P.).—Laddie Irwin, of Montclair, N. J., equaled par 76 today and and copped medal honors in the qualifying round of the annual mid-Florida women's golf tournament.

Second was former National Chamion Patty Berg, of Minneapolis, with 78. Jean Bauer, Providence, R. I., had 79.

Others qualifying for match play beginning tomorrow were:

Shirley Ann Johnson, Chicago, 82; Clara Callender, Long Beach, Calif., 83; Marion Miley, Lexington, Ky., 84; Mrs. E. H. McFarland, Orlando, Fla., 85; Neona Coppic, Toledo, Ohio, 85; Mrs. Lillian Zech, Chicago, 86; Mrs. Leon Solomon, Memphis, 87; Jane Cothran, Greenville, S. C., 88; Mrs. Charles Harbaugh, Willoughby, Ohio, 89; Janet Younker, White Plains, N. Y., 90; Mrs. Miriam Lyon, Orlando, 90; Mrs. A. W. Sumter, Columbus, Ohio, 90, and Mrs. Calvert Shorb, South Bend, Ind., 90.

Nats Opening Day Tickets Go on Sale

From the little stucco office at Seventh and Florida avenue came word yesterday that tickets to the Nats' opening game on April 17 with the Boston Red Sox will go on sale today, starting at 9 o'clock.

Those who have already made reservations may avoid the rush by sending checks for their seats.

Sports Postscripts

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 20.—Elmer Gedeon, the 6-foot-4-inch outfielder the Nats signed from the Michigan campus last season, today received special batting instructions from Clark Griffith, who prided himself on his own hitting ability when he was the American League's leading pitcher . . . Bucky Harris frowns at Gedeon's cramped batting stroke . . . the warm day promised the Nats today by the Orlando Chamber of Commerce was not forthcoming . . . in fact the morning was so cold and windy that practice was deferred until the afternoon, which brought little improvement in the temperature . . . on Thursday the Washington squad will be guests at the Florida rodeo at nearby Kissimmee . . . the only Washington player who has any skill whatsoever atop a horse is Jimmy Bloodworth and he isn't in camp . . . Louis Minzel, one of the smaller of the Cuban contingent, showed power with the bat today and is ticketed for the Nats' Greenville, S. C., farm . . . Joe Krakauskas holds the running record for Tinker Field with 11 quarter-mile laps around the place . . . Jake Early and Al Evans, the only two catchers in camp, were held after school today for a special pop fly catching lesson by Coach Bennie Bengough . . . despite the fierce wind they were catching everything he hit . . . Clark Griffith admitted today that his "last offer" to holdout Dutch Leonard had been supplanted with a new "last offer" . . . the pitcher with the best control during the Nats' batting practice was a 43-year-old fellow named Bucky Harris, who always did have a swell throwing arm . . . all of the Nats' board of strategy admit that they are impressed with the possibilities of big Jack Sanford, the first baseman who is under contract to Charlotte . . . along about 1942 they think he will be Washington's regular first baseman . . . any day now, Clark Griffith will announce that Cecil Travis has signed his 1940 contract . . . they are only $500 apart in their negotiations.

Colonials and Terps in Wild Scrambles During Title Battle

Plays Havoc With Terps' Zone Defense

Colonials Take 13th Victory of Season With Little Trouble Before 3,000 Fans

By Jack Munhall.

The havoc a team of sharpshooters can wreak upon a zone defense was forcibly illustrated last night as George Washington's crack point pumpers routed Maryland, 44 to 26, at College Park, to lay claim to the District collegiate basketball championship.

The Colonials, in easily winning their thirteenth game against only four defeats, can boast the local crown by virtue of a victory over Georgetown, which in turn has twice beaten American University, plus the contest of Maryland, which numbers Catholic University among its victims.

For Maryland last night's surprisingly decisive setback was its eighth in 20 starts and a sad disappointment to a majority of the year's largest crowd to see a basketball game in this vicinity. More than 3,000 fans packed into Ritchie Coliseum to watch the Colonials lead all the way after the first minute of play as their swift passing and accurate set shooting riddled the Terrapins' antiquated 3-2 zone defense.

Efforts Futile

Although a beaten team from the waning minutes of the second half, Maryland did not discard its zone for a more mobile man-for-man defense, and consequently the Colonials enjoyed great success in freezing the ball. At times the visitors retained the ball just outside the Maryland foul line for as long as 30 seconds while the Old Liners made futile efforts to intercept.

Little Bobbie Gilham and the veterans, Capt. George Garber and Eddie Auerbach, were the big heroes of George Washington's impressive victory, which was balm for the Colonials' recent upset defeat by West Virginia. Gilham, a sophomore with promise of becoming one of the greatest players ever to wear the Buff and Blue, paced his mates with 12 points.

DeWitt, DuVall Star

Auerbach was his runner-up with 10. Garber, though he finished far down the list of leading scorers with his two baskets, was nevertheless the classiest ball handler on the floor. His passing made possible many of George Washington's 21 field goals. The Colonials dropped in only two points from the free throw line, while six of Maryland's points were made via the charity route.

In defeat George De Witt and Mearle Duvall were outstanding figures for Maryland, between them accounting for 21 of the team's 26 points. Duvall, an ever improving sophomore, was, with Gilham, the game's offensive star, with his 12 counters, fashioned from four field goals and as many foul shots.

De Witt, dropping in nine points, played a stellar floor game, setting up two of the four baskets credited to Duvall.

Terps Start Strong

Maryland was in the ball game only about 5 minutes. The Terrapins started off as though to pull a big upset by taking a 4-0 lead on consecutive potshots by DeWitt and Bill Rea. The baskets came in the third and fifth minutes of the half after both teams had warmed up slowly.

The Colonials tied the count on field goals by Gilham and Auerbach. Maryland went ahead at 6-4 as Rea again slipped in one from the floor but that was the last time the Terrapins had an advantage. For Joe Comer, George Washington center, sank a follow up and a set shot to give the Colonials a lead to which they added steadily and convincingly.

The score at half was 26-15 in favor of G. W.

Bill Tilden Winner Over Foeltz; Whalen, Kozeluh Defeated

By the Associated Press

Miami Beach, Fla., Feb. 20.—Fifth-seeded Karel Kozeluh, of Greenwich, Conn., and eighth-seeded Joe Whalen, of Hollywood, Fla., were blasted out of the $2,500 Southeastern professional tennis tournament today as Don Budge and other favorites moved into the quarter-finals.

Young John Nogrady, of New York, former Metropolitan junior champion, outsteadied Kozeluh, 6—4, 2—6, 6—4. Art Hendrix, of Annapolis, Md., tennis coach at the Naval Academy, disposed of Whalen, 6—2, 6—3. Both Kozeluh and Whalen are former national pro champions.

Budge paced the top four seeded players through the third round as he eliminated Peter Peterson, of New York, 6—1, 6—4. The California redhead's persistent rival, Fred Perry, of Hollywood, Calif., coasted through a 6—4, 6—4 match with Charles Wood, of New York.

Bill Tilden, the 47-year-old veteran from Hollywood, trimmed Frank Foeltz, of Washington, 6—3, 6—2, and Bruce Barnes, of White Plains, N. Y., eliminated Carl Rohman, of White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., 6—1, 6—2.

Richards, Like Col. Lindbergh, Can Remember a Certain Ride

Teamed With The Boob to Gain Glory, But Not the Prize in Redland Hunt Race

By Walter Haight

Col. Charles Lindbergh will never forget that ride he took to Paris; Paul Revere remembered to his dying day that ride when the British were coming; I have more than a faint recollection of a certain ride home last New Year's morning and believe you me, John Richards, local air conditioning dealer, always will have stamped deep in his memory a ride he had a year ago.

In the past ten years I have witnessed many a horse ride. From New England to Florida, from Marlboro to California I have seen men and boys on horses. I saw Jockeys Meade and Fischer stage their saddle and fist battle through the stretch in the Kentucky Derby. I saw Jockey Georgie Woolf bring Azucar from last position along the rail, fairly squeezing horses to finally get in front and win the first $100,000 added Santa Anita Handicap. I saw a steeplechase jockey thrown while in the lead, get up, catch his mount, bound into the saddle and win by a nose. I saw a staggering horse, ridden over the finish line, drop dead 10 yards away.

HAIGHT

But when I saw John Richards' ride last March, I believe I saw the daddy of them all. He didn't ride in a Kentucky Derby. There was not a $10,000 jockey fee awaiting him. There was some glory involved, but it was only by chance that a reporter was there to see his ride, or at least part of it.

Richards' performance was in the 1939 Redland Hunt point-to-point race, starting and finishing at Brooke Johns' farm out near Olney. With his brothers, Joe and Walsh, John had purchased, at auction, a horse which had spent a long time in a riding academy. His name was The Boob. When the Richards boys first obtained him, The Boob lived right up to his name. He almost had to be dragged over the jumps. He would not run straight But he had ability. Patience and kind treatment brought him around.

The Richards boys were proud of The Boob. They wanted him to win the Redland point-to-point, a test of five miles, up hill and down and over fences, brush and chicken coops. They agreed to have Miss Judy Johnson, the well-known trainer who had been working with The Boob, ride the horse in the race.

They All Gathered

When the program began, the Richards brothers and their sisters,

Loyola Five Beats Cards By 41-31 Count

C. U. Holds Opponents Even in First Half; White Tops Scorers

Special Dispatch to The Post

Baltimore, Feb. 20.—The Catholic University basketball team suffered its thirteenth defeat in 14 starts this season here tonight, bowing to Loyola's second-half splurge, 41-31.

The visitors held Loyola on even terms in the first half and the score was tied, 14-14, at intermission. In the last 20 minutes, however, Loyola, undefeated leader of the Maryland College League, proved much the stronger team and won going away.

Johnny White, of Catholic University, was the game's high scorer with 11 points. Next was Bernie Thobe, of Loyola, with 10.

C. U. returns to the court at home tomorrow night to meet St. Vincent's College in an 8:15 game at Brookland.

Jervis Spencer, Turf Commission Head, Dies at 63

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Feb. 20.—Jervis Spencer, jr., chairman of the Maryland Racing Commission since 1930 and widely known sportsman, died tonight in Union Memorial Hospital. He was 63.

Spencer, nationally recognized as a turf authority and five times winner of the celebrated Maryland Hunt Cup Steeplechase, suffered a heart attack February 11 shortly after returning from a hunting trip in the Carolinas.

He was vice president and treasurer of the Maryland Trust Co. and had been a member of the racing commission since 1921.

Funeral services will be held Thursday.

Santa Anita Derby Field Now 25

By the United Press

Arcadia, Calif., Feb. 20.—The field for the sixth running of the Santa Anita Derby began shrinking tonight but when all noses were counted it still appeared that a record 25 3-year-olds would go after the $50,000 purse on Thursday.

None of the top contenders dropped out, but ten of the more uncertain eligibles were declared—either officially or unofficially—after the management of the green Santa Anita plant announced definitely that the race would not be split regardless of the size of the field.

Racing officials did say, however, that if more than 20 colts, geldings and fillies lined up, an old-fashioned tape barrier would be substituted for the new electric starting gate.

Although as many as 21 candidates have started in a single race at Santa Anita in the past, a tape never has been used.

Owners and trainers will drop the names of the starters through the entry box tomorrow. The weather forecast calls for blue skies for the next two days so the brown loam racing strip is expected to be crisp and fast for the scramble after the richest 3-year-old turf prize in the West.

The closest approach to a favorite still was the Milky Way Farm's three-ply entry of Tough Hombre, Gallahadion and—if the track is off—Chatted, Ueil McCarthy's filly. Augury, remains the solid second choice, although a number of fans and experts are divided among Millsdale Stable's Sun Pharos, L. B. Mayer's Sir Jeffrey, C. S. Howard's Mioland and the Foxcatcher Farm filly, Fairy Chant.

Others regarded as certain to go in the mile and one-eighth run are Norman Church's Exemplify, Foxcatcher's Maestro Sascha, Loma Rica Rancho's Last Gold, McCarthy's Big Ben, R. C. Stable's Royal Crusader, W. C. Stroube's Exarch, Kozinsky Brothers' Blue Suit, William Ziegler's Weigh Anchor, H. C. Hill's Sweepida, W. L. Ranch's Sky Dog, the Millsdale's Millbriar, and Mayer's The Gob.

Candidates dropped today included Carminita, Son Altesse, Certainty, Miss Yankee and Pilot Biscuit. Those in the doubtful class were Big Ben, Valdina Star, Son of War, Sir Lancelot, Tay Sweep, Albert Jay, Millfang, Polymellor and Kantan.

Wasdell's Slugging Features First Batting Drill of Nats

Power Drives Are Pleasing To Manager

New Style at Plate Gives Youngster a Fierce Swing; Dodgers Seek Him

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 20.—Jimmy Wasdell, leading candidate for the Nats' first base job, rapped for attention today. He rapped long and loudly with his bat against the pitching of a half dozen rookie hurlers and his screaming drives won the interest of Manager Bucky Harris.

Of course the pitching wasn't much to speak of. The rookie pitching talent was simply laying them over the plate during the workout which was the first time a pitcher had faced a batter in the Nats' camp. But it was with particular interest that Harris watched Wasdell's batting efforts.

Harris saw a new sort of Wasdell connecting solidly with everything that even approached the plate despite the fact that the chunky little first baseman was looking at a pitched ball for the first time since September.

Jim Has New Style

But what delighted Harris was not the lengths of Wasdell's drives, particularly. It was the manner in which Jimmy was swinging his bat. Apparently a thing of the past was Wasdell's former habit of letting his bat go through with one hand, a cardinal sin in the eyes of big league managers. Wasdell was swinging consistently with both hands.

He was pulling the ball, mostly, and getting terrific power on his swats which were dropping at the base of the rightfield fence nearly 400 feet from the plate. Harris made no secret of his delight at that fact.

'Minneapolis men told me that Wasdell was a changed hitter last season, but I couldn't believe it until I saw it," said Harris. "But it seems that he's done with that foolishness of letting the bat go through with one hand. He always did have power and that's what we need on this club."

Harris revealed also that the Brooklyn Dodgers had made the Nats a large offer for Wasdell within the past few months. "They wanted him as on outfielder on his record in the Minneapolis outfield, but Mr. Griffith wouldn't sell him. We still think he's a first baseman."

Williams on Mound

The only other hitter who approached Wasdell's distant clouts in the batting drill was Roberto Ortiz, the strangely gigantic Cuban. Ortiz was getting hold of pitches and driving them into the hedges in leftfield, 350 feet away, on a line.

The pitchers were getting all the worst of it during the workout. They had orders from Harris to lay the ball in there for the batters and it had little zip to it. The only pitcher to attempt anything was Arthur Castor, the young Cuban who had been pitching all winter in Havana.

Harris got his first glimpse of two other pitchers. Almon Williams, big right-hander whom the Nats bought from Chattanooga, took a turn on the mound, as did Sid Hudson, the Florida State League sensation. The Nats' manager liked the action of both rookies, but reserved opinion on their talents until they were ordered to bear down.

"By next week," said Harris, "I'll have a better line on these fellows. I can tell right now that some of 'em will never be big-league pitchers, but there are others that I want a long look at."

Cameo A. C. Meets, Plans for Baseball

Manager (Connie) Wyche, former leader of 7-Up A. C. and now head man of the Cameo A. C., yesterday announced the final organization meeting of his baseball club before the start of the season. Players will meet at 1500 Trinidad avenue northeast on Saturday at 7:30 p. m.

First action for the Cameos will be on Easter Sunday, when they travel to Roanoke Rapids, N. C. The team will be entered in the local Industrial League. So far Manager Wyche has signed five ace hurlers—Otis Printz, Lefty Brown, Gigie Adair, Frank Deavers and "Doc" Payne.

Colonials Open Baseball Practice

Preliminary baseball practice began yesterday at George Washington University, where pitchers and catchers are holding forth in the school gym.

Coach Ed Morris has delayed calling the remainder of the squad until March 7 so as not to conflict with the end of the basketball season.

Joe Judge Signs to Coach Georgetown Nine in 1940

Joe Judge, former star first baseman of the Washington Nats, signs a contract to coach Georgetown baseball team in 1940. H. Gabriel Murphy, graduate manager of athletics, witnesses the signing. Judge will enter his fourth year as baseball coach this spring

Judge Signed By Georgetown For 2 Years

Former Nat Star Will Continue as Baseball Coach; 19 Games Listed

Joe Judge, former Washington Club first baseman and major league baseball star, will carry on as head coach at Georgetown University for two more years.

This was assured yesterday afternoon when Judge signed his contract, carrying a gratifying increase, in the presence of H. Gabriel Murphy, graduate manager of athletics.

A little over his playing weight and a bit grayer around the temples, Judge otherwise is little changed over the fine athlete who won the plaudits of local fans over a span of 17 long years prior to closing out his career.

In his first year as coach at Georgetown, 1936, Joe Judge steered the Hoyas through an undefeated season. Within the past two seasons he has turned in fine records and is looking forward to his fourth season at the Hilltop with some optimism despite the possible loss of George Pajak, his crack third baseman. Pajak, who fractured his left arm in a basketball game with American University last week, may not be available for baseball as a consequence.

A 19-game schedule has been arranged by the Hoyas for 1940 and the schedule will feature a brace of games between Georgetown and George Washington Universities, who are now preparing to extend their friendly rivalry to another field.

Another attractive home game is a meeting with formidable Fordham locally on April 23. The Hoyas will face Fordham in a return game on a three game invasion of New York on May 3.

Judge is expected to sound his first call for candidates around March 11 and will speed up preparation for the opening game with American University on March 25.

The schedule:

March 25, American University, Washington; 27, University of Pennsylvania, Washington.

April 4, Harvard, Washington; 5, Dartmouth, Washington; 9, Western Maryland, Washington; 11, Michigan, Washington; 12, Lafayette, Washington; 17, Navy, Annapolis; 19, Temple, Washington; 23, Fordham, Washington; 26, George Washington, Washington.

May 2, New York U., New York; 3, Fordham, New York; 4, Army, West Point, N. Y.; 8, Maryland, Washington; 11, Maryland, College Park; 14, Princeton, Princeton, N. J.; 17, West Virginia, Washington; 21, George Washington, Washington.

Campolo-Baer Fight Plans Unchanged

New York, Feb. 20 (AP).—Although Valentin Campolo, Argentine heavyweight hopeful, lost a decision to Jack Marshall, of Texas, at Newark, N. J., last night, Promoter Mike Jacobs today said he was going through on schedule with the Campolo-Buddy Baer bout booked for Madison Square Garden March 15.

"Anybody can have a bad night," said Jacobs.

Campolo's loss to Marshall was the second bout in his current United States invasion. In the opener, he had scored a technical K. O. over Jim Robinson.

Gallaudet Plays Teachers Tonight

Gallaudet College's next to last game of the season is listed for tonight at the home gym, the Blues playing host to Bridgewater Teachers in the 8:30 feature. A preliminary will be played between Gallaudet Jayvees and the D. C. Silents.

Blair Smith, coach of the Blues, will send a much-improved lineup into the game in an effort to avenge a previous beating at the hands of the Teachers.

In its last game of the season Gallaudet clashes with Frostburg Teachers Saturday on the local court.

Bernie Garner Sets Lutheran League Record

170 Game Establishes Season Mark; Collins Tops WPA's With 414

Bernie Gerner set a season's record last night as he rolled a 170 individual game to feature play in the Lutheran Church League at the Arcade bowling alleys.

Anna Poor topped the women's division with a game of 135 for an individual game. Luther Place No. 1, was the outstanding team, taking victories in individual games and team set.

ICE PALACE

The first four places in the Chevy Chase Commercial League remained unchanged as each team registered a 2-1 victory. Stumpp, of the Cherner team, took individual honors with 163-394, and Hot Shoppe walked off with team honors, 650 and 1,781.

Pat Collins' game of 178 and set of 414 featured PWA League rolling, and Collins' Accounts five took team laurels with 642 and 1,743.

Preparations for the special match which Ice Palace five, of the Saturday Night League, will roll against Chevrolet Texaco, of Martinsburg, W. Va., have been completed. It will be held Sunday at 2 p. m.

QUEEN PIN

Southeast five, of the Diamond Cab League, took an odd-game decision over Hotels behind the stellar rolling of Sam Hirsch. Hirsch had 140 for high game and 372 for high set.

Service Station went into a first place tie with Concessions with Elmer Wesley rolling game of 125 and set of 350. The only sweep of the night was registered by Union Station over Credit Union.

With the Ollie Pacini Near-Star Sweepstakes only four days off, a record entry was anticipated for the event Saturday. Already such fine bowlers as George Simons, Ralph Bates, Courtney Litz and others are on the line.

Open to bowlers with averages of 117 or under, the sweeps will offer a $75 prize as well as a gold medal to the winner. Ray Parks, last year's winner, is not eligible due to his improved average. Two shifts will roll, the first at 3:30 and the second at 7:30.

LUCKY STRIKE

The Friendship team dominated the Distributors' League, with H. Otis rolling a 158 high game to tie the season record and the team rolling a season high game of 609. Otis also had 398 high individual set and the team rolled 1,628 for high set of the night to take three from E. Kahn.

In the U. S. H. A. League, Ward Cameron had 148 high game, a second-half record, and Bernie Grove rolled a 334 high set. Josephine Bresnahan, of All Saint's B team, rolled 136 high game in the Ladies' Catholic League, while Helen Eschenger, of St. Francis', rolled 330 high set. St. Anthony's A took high set honors with 536.

Stouffer Winner In Cue Tournament

Merle Stouffer was the winner of the pocket billiard tournament staged by Headquarters and C Company. He wan 10 of 11 games and also carried off the prize for high run with 42. Stouffer will be the favorite in the masters' tournament, scheduled to begin March 1.

Eustace and The Angel in Mat Feature

Man Who Amazed Harvard to Tackle Villain Tomorrow

The gentleman who brought "oh's" and "ah's" from Harvard University anthropologists will pitch camp in Washington some time tomorrow, annihilate a couple of 2-inch-thick beefstakes and trot out to Turner's Arena for a few waltz routines with Villain Alan Eustace in the top bout on Promoter Joe Turner's wrestling card.

He's none other than The Angel, the lad whom Harvard's brains gazed upon once and breathed the equivalent of "it ain't so."

Whatever their inner compunctions were about approaching The Angel, they finally went over him with various instruments and arrived at the conclusion that Angel is the closest thing to neanderthal man they have yet found—alive and talking, that is.

"His fatal distortion and head enlargement are undoubtedly due to a condition of the pituitary gland—a condition which should tend to weaken him but hasn't," the Harvard scientists reported.

The Harvard Committee for Exploration of The Angel consisted of Prof. Earnest A. Hooton, department of anthropology; Dr. Carleton S. Coon, assistant professor; Dr. C. C. Seltzer and Dr. William H. Sheldon, research associates, and Dr. Hallam L. Movius, jr., assistant curator of the Peabody Museum.

It was thought that The Angel might have escaped from some museum, but this was refuted when he broke into a toothless smile and accosted the startled pedagogues.

The supporting cast for the debut of The Angel, otherwise known as Maurice Tillett, in the Capital is topped by Lou Plummer and Cliff Olson. Carl Pojello, The Angel's Barnum, meets Jim Coffield, Don Evans takes on Rudy Dusek and Tommy O'Toole opposes Jim Casey in preliminaries.

8th Victory For Wilson Teacher Five

A dazzling point spree in the final quarter won Wilson Teachers' eighth basketball game in ten starts last night, 37-36, over a fading Bridgewater Teachers team.

The final and winning point was registered by "Flash" Gordon with a few seconds of the game left.

Trailing by a 34-27 count going into the last period, after lagging through most of the game, the Owls staged their finest rally of the year to nip the invaders. Hal Ifshin, Jack Lewis and Charley Clark were the big guns in the rush, their points being capped by Gordon's crucial one.

Clark was out in front in his team's well-distributed scoring with 11 points, and second was Lewis with eight. Barkman and Barber, with 13 and 12 points, were high of the four men who contributed points to the losers.

In the preliminary, Eastern's junior varsity five turned back Wilson juniors, 27-25.

Eagles Win, 49-41, Over Johns Hopkins

A. U. Never Headed After Rush in 1st Period of Game

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Feb. 20.—American University of Washington scored an upset 49-to-41 win over Johns Hopkins University's basketball quint tonight.

The Hopkins team, outplayed throughout, stayed in the running largely through a series of free throws. American went ahead in the early minutes and Hopkins trailed thereafter.

The officials called 19 personal fouls on the American players and Hopkins gained 11 of its points from the free-throw line.

Dundee Faces Ray Landis in Amateur Bout

Former Welter King's Son on Gonzaga's Card February 28

Ray Landis, Phil Furr's amateur lightweight protege, who is expected to take up the professional end of the business in the near future, will fight Lew Dundee, 18-year-old son of the former world's welterweight champion, Joe Dundee, February 28 in the amateur show Frankie Mann plans to stage in the Gonzaga hall, 47 I street northwest.

Landis, who won the 135-pound novice title in the Golden Gloves tournament, was one of 31 amateur fighters honored at a banquet by the Gloves committee last night at the Ambassador Hotel. Trophies and medals for winners and runners-up were awarded at the dinner, attended by officials of the Amateur Athletic Union, District Boxing Commission and prominent sports figures.

The Landis-Dundee fight will be a supporting bout on the card sponsored by the Boosters Club of St. Aloysius Church which will decide the 126-pound senior championship of the Washington Golden Gloves tournament.

Gilbert Mayo, defending champion, will meet Willie Tapp for the title and the right to be one of the eight senior champions who will represent the Capital in the national Golden Gloves bouts March 4-6 in New York's Madison Square Garden.

Joe Dundee will be in his son's corner when he meets Landis. The two were to meet January 2, but Landis' automobile broke down while he was returning to Washington from Cumberland, Md.

Cincinnati Reds Get Their Man Amid Mysterious Goings-on

'Put the Snatch' on Rookie Gene Hinrichs, Late of Texas; Melodrama on Every Hand

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, Feb. 20.—All the elements of a musical comedy plot entered into it—detectives, mysteriouse strangers, hotel room conferences and bumping rides over country roads—but the National League champion Reds got their man.

"Their man" is young Gene Hinrichs, portside rookie late of Henderson, Tex., and one of 91 athletes thrown into free agency several weeks ago by Baseball Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis.

How he was snatched from under the eyes of at least two big league clubs—Brooklyn and St. Louis—was told today as General Manager Warren C. Giles pawed through a mass of business preparatory to leaving next week for the Reds' spring training camp in Tampa.

Here's the Story

The story, as pieced together from Giles and others who should know, runs something like this:

Hinrichs came to Cincinnati for conferences, agreed apparently that "everything's O. K.," and left the Reds' offices, only to be met in the lobby by a uniformed bellboy from a nearby hotel.

"Come this way," the bellboy said—and led young Mr. Hinrichs to a suite occupied by none other than Rogers Hornsby. Hornsby, booked at the time to manage Montreal, a Brooklyn farm, apparently carried an offer that interested the Rockwell City, Iowa, youngster.

Hinrichs left Cincinnati that afternoon. Next day, Giles received a telegram, sent from Cincinnati's Union Terminal and "postmarked" an hour before train time, that Hinrichs had been summoned home because of a "big offer" from another club.

Everything Was Dropped

Giles wrote a telegram himself, engaged a detective agency to deliver it aboard a train at Kankakee, Ill., then telephoned to Assistant General Manager Frank C. Lane, who at the time was refereeing a a basketball game in Oxford, Ohio, 30 miles north of Cincinnati.

"Drop everything," ordered Giles—and Lane, still wearing his white knickers, boarded a Chicago-bound train.

Lane showed up in Rockwell City, talked a hotel clerk into driving him to Hinrichs' farm home—and there found Hinrichs in conversation with a St. Louis Cardinal "scout."

Lane reported he "had to use a lot of salesmanship," but did it so suavely that after Hinrichs chose to sign with the Reds, Branch Rickey's helper actually drove the pair back to Rockwell City, where Lane and his "captive" boarded a Cincinnati train.

But the end was not yet.

Lane said at Iowa City a sports writer boarded the train, introduced himself as Hornsby's proxy and offered Hinrichs $100 to get off the train. Hinrichs refused.

P. S.—Clyde Sukeforth was named to manage Montreal.

Hamlin Signs $12,000 Dodgers' Contract

Clearwater, Fla., Feb. 20 (AP).—Holdout Luke Hamlin, the Brooklyn Dodgers' star right-hander, today signed a contract believed to call for a salary of $12,000, plus a bonus of $3,000 if he wins 20 games. Hamlin collected a similar bonus last season, when he won 20 and lost 13.

Signing of Hamlin, who immediately took part in his first workout, brought all of the Dodger pitchers and catchers into line.

Cardinals Name Dates for Seven Games at Night

St. Louis, Feb. 20 (AP).—Dates for the Cardinals' seven night games in St. Louis announced today, with the Brooklyn Dodgers leading off under the lights on Tuesday, June 4.

The other National League teams will play here at night as follows: Boston, Tuesday, June 11; Cincinnati, Tuesday, July 2; New York, Thursday, July 11; Philadelphia, Wednesday, July 17; Pittsburgh, Wednesday, August 14, and Chicago, Wednesday, September 4.

The lighting plant, now under construction at Sportsman's Park as a joint venture of the Cardinals and the Browns, will be ready about the middle of Mya. The Browns, who open a two-week home stand May 14, have not yet announced their night schedule.

Connie Mack Cuts Holdout List to Catcher, Pitcher

Anaheim, Calif., Feb. 20 (AP).—Connie Mack slashed his holdout list to two today as Pitchers George Caster and Ed Heusser announced after brief conferences with the Athletics manager they would sign contracts.

Caster, who lives at Long Beach, Calif., wanted only a few minor technicalities ironed out. Heuser up from Memphis, Tenn., on his third major league trial, wanted a hike big enough to take care of increased living expenses.

Still holding out are Catcher Frank Hayes who wants $15,000 instead of the $9,500 offered and Pitcher Lynn Nelson, who also wants an increase on the basis of leading the A's staff in victories last season.

Rinaldi Beaten

New Pork, Feb. 20 (AP).—Wesley Ramey, of Grand Rapids, Mich., won an eight-round decision over John Rinaldi, of New York, tonight.

sounder, more honest profession, and some day it will catch up with the public and realize it.

My friend Aram Salisian, an Armenian who might have been a wrestling headliner if he could have stomached the modern game, tells me that Stanislaus Zbyszko, at 63, could still dump 80 per cent of the modern bums if the bouts were on the level.

Salisian, holder of many amateur titles, had many offers to turn pro. He worked with Frank Gotch in his youth and believes that Gotch, George Hackenschmidt (who stood 5 feet 10, weighed 210, had a 22 neck and a 52 chest), the Terrible Turk and Ed Lewis were the best four men ever lived. He thinks that if another Gotch came along, and went square, the game would come back, once he showed the public that if it follows closely it can detect great suspense in two blokes standing on their feet for hours, waiting for an opening.

Salisian can rip phone books into confetti and crack planks with his knuckles, then go down in the kitchen of his New York restaurant and whip up, with those same dukes, a flaky "key-maly beurek" that would collapse if you sneezed at it. We wish all reformed rasslers turned out as well as he.

Eastern Wins and Forces Play-off in High Series

By Bill Burnett

Looking for the first time like the defending champ, Eastern's big blue five threw the interhigh basketball series into a three-way playoff yesterday, flailing Wilson by a 41-21 count in the opening half of the last regular double-header of the season.

The closing portion of the bill at Eastern gym, witnessed by a packed house of about 1,500 fans, was taken by Central, 39-28, over the futile forces of McKinley.

As a result, Central took undisputed hold of second place in the standings under Roosevelt, and the other two berths in the championship round robin were split between Eastern, Western and Wilson. Officials, in a hasty conference after the games, came out with this playoff schedule:

Friday, Feb. 23—Wilson versus Western at Tech gym., 8 p. m.

Tuesday, Feb. 27—Loser of Friday game versus Eastern at Tech gym, 3:30. (Winners of Friday game and Tuesday games enters championship tournament).

Though it won by one of the largest margins in the series, Eastern's opponent was by far the toughest faced by yesterday's victors. Wilson went into the game tied for second place and Eastern was hanging on the fringe of things in fifth place.

And the main credit for Eastern's victory went to Bob Custer and Moe Shulman. Custer "gunned" for 21 points, the high-point effort of the season in interhigh play. Shulman took the less spectacular role, passing the ball to Custer for most of his shots and retrieving it off the backboard.

While blasting the ring in his sensational scoring spree, Custer had the remarkable average of 10 good field shots out of 17 attempts. Shulman got no field goals, but made good on three out of four foul shots. An unexpected bit of scoring was turned in by Warren Earhardt, Tide forward, in the first half when he registered four net "pot" shots on seven efforts. He wound up with 12 points, second high of the game.

As in its beating by Central last Friday, Wilson was a poor substitute for the club which started its season with a bang. If the Tigers did anything right, the 1,500 fans failed to notice it.

After one quarter the count was only 9-7 against Wilson, but at the half it had fallen behind, 17-12. A single charity point by Roy Cowdrey in the third period, plus Custer's hottest streak of the game, left the count at 30-13 going into the last quarter.

If Central had wished, it could have won its game by 30 points. It was playing the same ineffective Tech which had lost 11 games and won only four throughout the season.

By virtue of two baskets by Sam Di Blasi and one by Harry Martin in the last minute of the first quarter, the Mount Pleasanters were leading 14-8 at the whistle. They stretched it to 27-13 at the half, and hung on for a 33-20 advantage after three periods. Central's third team held the Trainers in check in the last eight minutes.

Di Blasi and Teddy Thomaides split honors for the winners with eight points each, though game honors went to Jack Walsh, Tech guard, who stood out valliantly in the shellacking with nine points.

Behind the consistent goal-making of Ray and Anders, Rockville High registered its ninth triumph this season yesterday on its home court, 31-24, over Sidwell-Friends five.

Ray turned in 11 points and Anders 10 as the Montgomery lads took their third straight victory. High point honors, however, went to Friends' Dulcan, who had 14. Newmyer, ace scorer of the losers, was bottled effectively and held to 6 points, four on foul shots.

A fast pace in the opening half spelled victory for Rockville. It led by 20-16 at the half and was never seriously threatened.

Tonsilitis Deprives Hoyas of 2d Star For Game in Tech Gym; Kiernan Gets Call As Substitute; Pajek Already Out

Georgetown University's basketball team absorbed another jolt yesterday as it awaited tonight's game with Penn State's Nittany Lions at Tech High School's gymnasium, 8:30 o'clock.

It was definitely learned that Al Lujack, clever sophomore forward, will be unable to perform tonight due to a siege of tonsilitis. Lujack, in Georgetown University's Hospital since last Saturday, had hoped to be available for tonight's test, but was officially ruled out of action yesterday.

Already deprived of the services of George Pajak, high-scoring forward, who suffered a fractured left arm in the American University game last week, Coach Elmer Ripley yesterday rearranged his starting line-up as best he could on short notice.

Jim Kiernan, sophomore forward, is to replace Pajak in the starting order and will be paired with Buddy O'Grady. Jim Giebel is to remain at center, while Capt. John Schmitt returns to a starting guard, where he is to team up with Irving Rizzi.

The Hoyas tonight will entertain one of the biggest and most powerful college clubs to visit here this season in Penn State. The Nittany Lions will boast a starting line-up that averages 6 feet 2 inches and in the vicinity of 180 pounds, and a squad that numbers nine men who stand 6 feet and better among 14 players.

Key man of the invaders is George Barr, 6-foot 2-inch 205-pound forward, who is leading his team's scoring with 134 points. Second ranking is Clifton McWilliams, 6-foot 4-inch 205-pound center, who has 76.

The visitors have won 9 of 15 games this season and have scored an average of 37 points per contest as against 26 for the opposition.

The invaders defeated Georgetown in early season, 33 to 22. Other conquests include a defeat of West Virginia, comqueror of Georgetown and George Washington universities, 32 to 23; a rout of Army, 47 to 20; a victory over Navy, 40 to 17, and landslide over formidable Rutgers, 47 to 19.

Tonight's preliminary brings together Georgetown's freshmen and Army War College at 7 o'clock.

Perry Again Sued For Divorce by Helen Vinson

Los Angeles, Feb. 20 (AP).—Film actress Helen Vinson today sued Fred Perry, former world singles tennis champion, for divorce, charging "cruel and inhuman" treatment.

It was her second suit. The first was filed March 15, 1939, but she had it dismissed a short time later, saying they had decided to renew their "perfect romance."

The couple was married just before midnight September 12, 1935, in Harrison, N. Y., and after a hamburger and champagne supper, Miss Vinson declared the union would be a success because:

Heurich Meets Sphas Here Tomorow for Runner-up Berth

Without so much as flexing a muscle the Washington Heurich Brewers are to move into third place in the American Basketball League tonight when the Troy-Celtics meet the New York Jewels.

The fourth-place Brewers, but one-half game removed from the pace-making Jewels in the hottest American League race on record, will go out after their third consecutive victory over the Philadelphia Sphas and second place simultaneously tomorrow night when they entertain the Sphas at Heurich gymnasium, 8:30 o'clock.

This will be the second to last local game on the regular season schedule of the Brewers locally, they being scheduled to close down their regular season activities Sunday afternoon when they meet the New York Jewels at Heurich gymnasium at 2:30 o'clock.

Dash to Brooklyn

They are to rush to New York for an 8:30 o'clock nightcap with the Jewels at Arcadia Hall, Brooklyn, Sunday night and will close their regular season in Philadelphia's Convention Hall against the Baltimore Clippers on the night of March 2.

Probably the most colorful American Basketball League game in local history will find the Brewers and Sphas fighting desperately to remain in the running for the American League's title tomorrow night. The regular season champion receives a $500 cash bonus to be distributed among its players and the four teams so closely bunched at the present time are prepared for a fight to a finish for this prize.

Woodward Fifth Victim Of St. Albans

Saints Victors, 35-23; LeFevre and Trimple Set Scoring Pace

A young and inexperienced Woodward Prep five was turned back by St. Albans yesterday, 35-23, as the winners took their fifth triumph in 10 games.

There was never any doubt of the outcome after the first two periods when the Saints rushed into a 15-9 lead. Woodward's Kelly, center, was high pointman for the game with 11. Le Fevre and Trimple paced the Saints' scoring with 9 and 7 points, respectively.

South B. C. Swims Charlotte Hall Today

Southeast Branch of the Washington Boys Club swimmers make their first of two tank outings this week today when they entertain Charlotte Hall M. A. at 3:45. In an earlier meeting the Cadets went home with a 50-16 victory.

Saturday Southeast will participate in the Postal Swimming championships of North America. The two fastest times registered in the local pool will be sent to Scranton (Pa.) Y. M. C. A., where all entries will be judged. Age classes will be 13-years-and-under and 15-years-and-under.

C. U.'s Home Cage Season Ends Tonight

Cards to Try to Better Record With Victory Over St. Vincent's

Catholic University ends its home basketball season tonight at 8:15 o'clock againts St. Vincent's of Latrobe, Pa., at the C. U. gym. The Cards, in the throes of one of their most disastrous seasons, hope to reverse an earlier defeat inflicted by the visitors.

On the first occasion, C. U. led by 4 points at the half only to fade in the second period and go down to an overwhelming 50-37 defeat. Oddly enough, St. Vincent's will be the third out of the last four opponents that uses a zone defense.

The Cards faced a zone against St. Peter's, Maryland and now St. Vincent's. The visitors are coached by Gene "Red" Edwards, co-captain of the 1926 Notre Dame football team.

The Cards have the unique record of having lost every game on the road, the lone victory they did score this year coming at the expense of St. Peter's on the home court. Despite their poor record, the Redbirds hope to wind up their home season with a victory. The Cards play Villanova Saturday night at Philadelphia, then engage LaSalle, Seton Hall and Washington College—all on the road.

Perhaps surpassing the varsity game in interest is the tilt between the C. U. freshmen and St. John's Prep. The Cardinal Cubs have a slightly better record than the varsity, having won five and lost four games. Two former St. John's stars, Ed Viehmeyer and Jim Mulvihill, will be in the line-up for the C. U. freshmen. This game starts at 7 p. m.

Espey Rolls 447 As Elks League Pin Records Fall

With Eddie Espey, former District junior champion, leading the way, the Esquires stattered three al-time records in the Elks League last night. Espey rolled a set of 447 and his team came through with a game of 654 and a set of 1,799. Espey had a city record within grasp if he had maintained the pace he set in the first two games. He rolled 162 and followed this with 177. However, he finished up with 108. The Espire were opposing the Charity team and won two games. P. Brockdorff and Walrop were prominent.

Victory Morn Drives to Half-Length Triumph at Hialeah

Former Parr Star Leads 3-Year-Olds

Pint-Sized Gelding Carries Colors of Howard; Flinchum's Mount Disqualified

By the Associated Press

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 20.—Victory Morn, the equine runt of racing, today came through with his first victory for Maxwell Howard since that sportsman purchased the pint-sized gelding out of the Ral Parr estate in Maryland last fall for $21,600. Making his third start of the winter, Victory Morn held on courageously to win the featured Naranja Purse of a mile and a furlong by a half length.

Mrs. Payne Whitney's Day Dodger was second, four lengths better than H. P. Headley's Stagefright. Circle M. Ranch's Titilator, an odds-on choice recently purchased from Headley, finished an ignominious last in the field of four three year olds, all eligible for Saturday's $20,000 Flamingo Stakes.

Victory Morn's triumph was somewhat tainted. For a while after the race, it was thought the second disqualification in as many races would materialize, for Victory Morn bore out in the final drive and interfered with the fast finishing Day Dodger. A claim of foul finally was dismissed.

The victor paid $6.30 for two and completed his trip in the good time of 1:51 4-5 under top weight of 117 pounds. Jimmy Stout was astride the midget son of Challenger 2nd-Bright Luna, which won $31,290 as a juvenile.

After this race, Don Meade, who rode Titilator, complained of a pain in his right side and canceled his remaining mounts of the day.

Flinchum drove Maeline first to the wire in the 6-furlong fifth race, but after a long delay, the stewards decided to disqualify the combination. This moved Sungino into first position, with the favored Bull Whip receiving the place and Cardinalis the show. Maeline led virtually from the start, but Flinchum allowed the gelding to bear in and force Meade to take up on Bull Whip near the sixteenth pole.

Richards' Ride Is Rated at Top

too, gathered to watch The Boob do his stuff. Joe Richards was to ride his own horse, Twin Star.

In the first race of the day, Miss Johnson, riding a horse that balked at a jump, was thrown against a log and broke a collar bone. She was thus eliminated as The Boob's rider.

The Richards boys went into a huddle. John, dressed in a business suit, agreed to ride The Boob. He pulled his hat down tight on his head, tied some cord around the bottoms of his pants legs.

His brother Joe, on Twin Star, was to show John and The Boob the way. If everything went right, John was to drive The Boob to the front in the final straight run.

John had never seen the course. Riders are allowed to walk over the route within 24 hours of the race. But John had just returned from a business trip to the middle west and, in fact, had not been on a horse in more than three months.

Looking more like a beginner in the Rock Creek saddle class than a man about to go five miles over a rough, tough course, John brought The Boob up to the starting line. His dark business suit, his black shoes and his slouch hat were out of place among the hunt-groomed riders. However, if his outfit was not becoming, his courage was.

I stood with Miss Johnson, who refused to have her shoulder set until the race was over. We watched the start and saw John get The Boob away behind his brother Joe. He was following the leader as the field went out of sight in the wood thicket at the bottom of the hill.

Then there was that long wait until the horses and riders came in sight again. Finally, some moving specks appeared down in the valley. I looked through my binoculars.

In fourth position and going strongly was The Boob, easily recognized through his rider.

"He's doing all right," shouted Miss Johnson. "And he's following his brother. I hope he can make those four brush jumps around the big field."

I scanned the horses to see how many were still in the race.

"Look, Walter!" shouted Miss Johnson. "The Boob is losing his saddle!"

It was true. The saddle was on his side, but somehow John was still on The Boob's back. His feet slipped out of the stirrups. A good mile to go and he was bareback! But that was not the only hazzard. As he came to the first of the four jumps, the saddle went under The Boob's belly and was dangling.

But John was doing more than just staying on. He kept digging his heels into the Boob's sides and kept him right on the tail of Brother Joe's mount. There were only two horses in front of the brothers. On one was Commander Lee. With two jumps to go, one of the leaders had dropped back but Commander Lee's mount still had a five-length lead. It was at this point, when straighted for the run home, that John urged The Boob and passed his brother With 25 yards to go, The Boob, with saddle rocking under his belly, caught Commander Lee and his mount.

Without stirruns, without saddle, without spurs, John was hustling and scuffling as if his very life depended upon the outcome.

The glory was to belong to John and the gallant The Boob—but not the prize. In fact, the courageous pair did not even "finish in the money."

In approaching the finish, John, so intent in his task of getting The Boob home the winner, failed to steer him to the outside of the brush to enter the finish lane. Instead, he took The Boob over the jump. The Boob had to be disqualified for the technicality.

On March 9, a week from Saturday to be exact, T. T. Mott, M. F. H., and the Redland Hunt will hold the 1940 point-to-point race out Onley way.

Capt. John L. Horner, of Rockville, is the racing secretary. Among the entries the good captain will handle will be one for The Boob. The rider? Why he will be John Richards—dressed for the occasion. Don't miss it.

Twin Horses? Wrong Again, It's Muddy River and Royal Rebel

You might think these jumpers are one and the same horse, or at least twins, from their style of taking the barrier in schooling for tonight's show at Fort Myer. Actually, it's Col. William M. Grimes up on Muddy River at left and Sally Seward on Royal Rebel

75 Entries in Fort Myer Horse Show Tonight; Despite Weather

Rain Which Held Up Schooling Fails To Cut Down List of Exhibitors

By Anne Hagner

Although early figuring showed that the Fort Myer Horse Show, to be held tonight at the Post Riding Hall, might suffer from bad weather which has made schooling impossible for most exhibitors for the past month, last-minute entries boosted the total of horses to nearly 75.

Already entered are Mr. and Mrs. George P. Greenhalgh's Abdication, Palm Sunday and Big Boy, which starred in last month's President's Birthday show and should be in line for some repeat victories; Mrs. D. N. Lee's Red Fox, winner of two blues in January and considered by many to be one of the likeliest prospects on the list of hunter championship candidates; Charles Carrico's Recall, dependable hunter and hack who cannot be overlooked in the figuring, and the Government's High Spade, winner of the working class in the December show.

In the open jumping division are such notables as Lisbeth Steig's Hi-Ho, fresh from taking a first and a second in last week-end's 110th Field Artillery show near Baltimore; Capt. Charles McClelland's Smacko, making his initial bid for points that count for the season championship; Lieut. Col. Frost's Jeb Stuart, frequent winner in the North; Capt. J. H. Collier's Gay Cockade, well known little jumping mare from Virginia; Lieut. and Mrs. David Wagstaff's Enterprise and Rowdy; Charles Lang's Pat O'Malley, from Baltimore; the Government's Mount Carmel, to be ridden by Capt. James Quill; Lieut. O. K. Kane's Lord Barrie and Ard Patrick, and many other good performers.

Surprise Entry

Fritz Kleemann, instructor in riding at Arlington Hall School, has made a surprise entry in Cagliari, an 8-year-old mare that he imported from Europe six years ago. He schooled her in Greenwich, Conn., and the pair won many hunter and hack classes, topping their career with the championship of the Newark, N. J., show. Then she was sold to Catherine Lord, of Butlers Island, Conn., but Kleemann reserved the right to buy her back if her new owner ever put her up for sale. She was hunted regularly with the Ox Ridge and Fairfield Hunt Clubs and was shown all through the North, but Kleemann finally repurchased her and installed her at Arlington early this week.

"Take Your Choice"

She is a dark bay and has been trained in high school movements so that she is an ideal hack. Her full brother, Cronus, won the dressage event in the 1936 Olympic games in 1936 with a German officer up, and Kleemann plans to continue the mare's education along those lines. He will also show her in hunter classes, but has entered her only in the road hacks class Wednesday night, for she has not yet gotten completely rested from her train ride from Connecticut.

Classes scheduled for Wednesday are the student team jumping, for which Arlington Hall's first team is now leading in points; working hunters; the "take-your-choice" jumping event, in which seven of the nine fences in the ring must be jumped; road hacks; open hunters, and open jumpers. The first class begins at 7:45.

Local Banks Expect Gain in NHA Loans

Banks Will Allot Newspapers Most of 1940 Advertising

By Thomas M. Cahill.

With spring on the way, local bank officers are forecasting an early start in requests for loans under Title 1 of the National Housing Act, providing for porperty repair, alteration and modernization. There was an increase in the demand for these loans at this time last year, and as good weather will soon be prevalent, some clients have already begun to discuss loans for improvement of their properties.

For a number of years, the District of Columbia Bankers Association has promoted Title 1 loans because the property modernization program affords more work and business for those engaged in the building and allied trades.

Joins Mutual Benefit Life

George L. Naramore, former assistant national bank examiner, and for the past nine years local representative of the Fidelity Investment Association, has just become associated with the Washington office of the Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co., of Newark, N. J. A life-long resident of Washington, Mr. Naramore is well known in church and Masonic circles, and in the financial district. He is a member of the Washington Round Table.

MARAMORE.

Newspapers will receive more than half of the advertising expenditures from the country's banks this year, with the next largest amount going into direct mail, according to a study by a committee of the Financial Advertisers Association. Thirty per cent of the banks studied are increasing their appropriations this year and all but 5 per cent of the remainder are maintaining the same budget as for last year.

Percentages of the budgets to be employed in the newspapers range from 50 per cent in banks of $100,000,000, or over, to 64 per cent in banks of the $25,000,000 to $50,000,000 class. Radio will be used chiefly by the very large banks and only by smaller banks in cities having local radio stations covering their territory. The survey also indicates that from 25 to 50 per cent of the advertising will be devoted to loan copy and that savings copy will be used principally by the largest institutions.

The report states that banks are becoming more public relations conscious than ever and that the study showed the practice of bank officials appearing before schools, clubs and organizations is increasing.

Home Loan Bank Loans

Exceeding all previous records except those in 1937, the 12 Federal Home Loan banks in 1929 advanced $94,780,587 to member institutions to aid them in meeting expanded demands for home-financing funds, it is reported by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board. One hundred new members entered the Federal Loan Bank System during 1939, 97 of them being State-chartered savings and loan associations or similar institutions and three of them new Federal savings and loan associations. As of January 1, 1940, this national home mortgage credit reservoir had 3,920 members, including savings and loan associations, cooperative banks, homestead associations, savings banks and insurance companies.

At the close of the year, cumulative advances of $581,922,460 had been made to member institutions since the system was created by Congress in 1932. Of that total, $400,609,469 had been repaid leaving a balance outstanding of $181,312,991. The system itself and member institutions in general were further strengthened during the year in a number of ways. Assets of member institutions increased approximately $300,000,000, rising to a total exceeding $4,700,000,000. There was a decrease in the number of member institutions borrowing from the regional banks, the number dropping from 2,606 to 2,339 chiefly because of the rise in the amount of private savings placed by the public in the share accounts of member institutions. During the last year, there were 55 mergers of members, 16 sales of assets, 47 liquidations, three removals and voluntary withdrawal of ten members. At the opening of the year 1940, there were 110 applications pending for membership in the bank system.

Retail Advertising Equals Year Ago

Chicago, Feb. 20.—With a slight loss compared to last year registered during the week ended February 10, volume of retail advertising placed thus far this year is practically on a par with that placed during the corresponding week of 1939, Advertising Age reported today.

Although 96,184,051 lines of retail display have been placed in the newspapers of the 80 cities reporting to the publication during the six-week period ended Februar. 10, this is only 21,114 more lines than were placed last year.

Resigns

ROGER J. WHITEFORD, who resigned yesterday as president of Associated Gas & Electric Co. Whiteford succeeded John I. Mange in the office less than a month before the utility filed its recent petition in Federal court to reorganize. Whiteford had been proposed by the directors as trustee under the reorganization.

Equitable Life Assets Rise to 2.4 Billions

New York, Feb. 20.—Life insurance policyholders are average men and women and not accountants or statisticians and they cannot be expected to be interested in compilation of figures unless they are simplified and interpreted in human terms, Thomas I. Parkinson, president of the Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States, stated today in announcing a "humanized" report to Equitable policyholders.

"The annual report of a life insurance company is essentially the story of life insurance 'at work' and in giving the figures on our year's operations we have endeavored to explain simply and clearly, with the aid of pictures, just how life insurance works," Mr. Parkinson stated.

An average of $547,905 a day is paid out to living policyholders and beneficiaries during 1939, or a total of $199,985,481 for the year, the report discloses. Of this total, $35,023,648 was paid in the form of dividends, bringing aggregate dividends paid to policyholders by the society in its 80 years of operations above the billion dollar mark.

Assets of the society increased $140,987,380 to a total of $2,401,891,529 on December 31, 1939.

"These assets are large only because they are the combined funds of the 2,400,000 'partners' in the Equitable Society who, by spreading the financial risks of death and old age over such a large number of persons, create additional security for the individual policy," Mr. Parkinson said.

Bank of Montreal New York Agent of Bank of England

Montreal, Feb. 20 (Canadian Press).—The Gazette says today that "Following the week-end decision of the British Treasury to requisition British national's holdings in 60 United States securities announcement was made yesterday in London that the Bank of Montreal has been appointed the sole agent in New York for the British Treasury, in whom these securities are now vested, and for the Bank of England, for the purposes of this transaction." The Gazette continues:

"The Bank of Mantreal's function will be to give effect to the British Treasury's objectives, which were described in the official order as:

"1. To insure that realization of these securities in the American market shall be orderly, and

"2. Assure that the total volume of sales of American securities from United Kingdom sources, both in securities taken over by the Government and those still privately held, 'should continue over a period of time at about the average volume of recent months'."

Daily Oil Output Up 36,719 Barrels

Tulsa, Feb. 20 (AP).—Daily oil production in the United States increased 36,719 barrels to 3,719,633 for the week ended February 17, the Oil and Gas Journal said today. Illinois moved upward 20,566 to 407,583, California 6,000 to 626,100, Kansas 2,050 to 176,700 and all Texas 3,745 to 1,361,177. East Texas declined 2,702 to 397,298; Oklahoma 2,000 to 429,350, Louisiana 1,095 to 278,212, Eastern fields 750 to 100,150, Michigan 57 to 64,871 and the Rocky Mountain area 2,490 to 87,650.

New Jersey P. S. 1939 Profit Is $25,722,729

Equal to $2.88 Per Common Share; $2.34 The Year Before

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 20.—Public Service Corp., of N. J., reported today 1939 net profit of $25,722,729 or $2.88 a common share, compared with the 1938 figure of $22,733,245 or $2.34 a share.

Molybdenum Corp.

Molybdenum Corp. of America and subsidiaries reported for 1939 net profit of $518,468, or 90 cents a capital share, compared with $232,469 or 40 cents a share, for the previous year.

Artloom Sales Record

A. S. Mitchell, president, Artloom Corporation, reported in his annual report to shareholders that the net sales for 1939 amounted to $4,976,637.63, compared to $979,219.15 for the previous year. The largest year in net sales since 1929 totaled $2,750,76.58, which were the sales for 1930. The largest net profit reported during this period of nine years was $43,317.78 in 1935. Net earnings, after all charges but before taxes, amounted to $438,906.72 and after taxes and creating a reserve for price protection and market fluctuation of $70,000 were $248,906.72, equal, after the payment of the regular preferred dividends of $31,143, to $217,763.72, or slightly under $1.09 per share on the common stock of the corporation.

McCall Corp.

McCall Corp., publishers, reported in a tentative statement 1939 net profit of $739,606, equal to $1.40 a share, compared with $561,842, or $1.06 a share, in 1938. Net sales increased to $12,543,064 from $11,781,290.

Tubize Chatillon Corp.

Net earnings of Tubize Chatillon Corporation for 1939, after all charges including depreciation, idle plant expense and income taxes, totaled $1,138,955 compared with $281,934 in 1938, according to the annual report made public today by Roland L. Taylor, chairman of the board. "Sales in 1939 were approximately 50 per cent ahead of 1938 both in units sold and dollar volume," Mr. Taylor reported in his letter to the stockholders.

Sterling Products

Sterling Products reports for the year 1939 consolidated net profit of $9,140,026, equivalent to $5.25 per share on 1,740,871 shares of stock outstanding at the end of the year. This compares with earnings of $8,741,363, equivalent to $5.10 per share on 1,712,877 shares for the preceding year.

Oneida Designs New Plan for Wage Security

Oneida, N. Y., Feb. 20 (AP).—A wage security plan, designed to combat bad times and factory shut-down periods, was announced today by Oneida, Ltd., for the benefit of 2,700 workers in plants at Oneida, Niagara Falls and Toronto, Canada.

The company, a silver manufacturing firm which grew out of Oneida's famous cooperative community enterprise started 92 years ago, also announced bonuses totaling $230,000.

M. E. Robertson, general manager, said the new security wage savings account was intended to provide income security and guarantee as far as possible a minimum of 36 hours pay a week, 49 weeks a year, for all hourly workers with more than one year's service.

Robertson explained that in addition to the cash bonus of one week's pay which each worker receives immediately, the company is giving an extra bonus equivalent to 40 hours work at the employe's regular wage rate.

"If the worker leaves this 40-hour bonus in the security wage savings account, the company will contribute an additional 32 hours, making a total of 72 hours," he said.

In the event of an employe leaving the company, he said, all contributions will be returned in cash.

The Market

Stocks Are Steady and More Active Interest Centers in Tranfer Tax Fight Domestic Bonds, Except Utilities, Are Higher

New York, Feb. 20.—Wall street was only a minor center of financial interest today, there being more significance to what was taking place in Albany and more spectacular price changes in the wheat market in Chicago. The last named contributed to a late rally in stocks after a few hours of familiar irregularity. Coppers fared the best in the late advance and special moves in a handful of miscellaneous issues combined to bring about a net gain in the composite averages of 0.13 point. Trading stepped along at a slightly faster pace than recently, the big board's turnover being 807,860 shares.

If the street had entertained any fears that the mobilization by Great Britain of her nations' holdings of certain American securities would lead to heavier liquidation, such thoughts were put to rest as a second day passed without any evidence of unusual pressure. Obviously this liquidation will have to be absorbed, but it is just as obvious that it will be executed with care. It would be more to the disadvantage of Great Britain than to America to have our market unsettled by disorderly selling, for Britain must have money for her purchases of war materials here, and more than any other seller she wants a high price. She would get just the opposite if liquidation were allowed to proceed as it did on the outbreak of the World War in 1914. It is apparent that it will not.

Wall Street Fights Tax

Outside of Manhattan, the interest of the financial community centered in Albany, where a representative group of Wall Street folk went to state their views on the relatively high transfer tax imposed on sellers of securities by this State. The stock exchange rolled up its heavy guns at today's hearing on the Coudert-Mitchell bill, and was well supported by such organizations as the State Chamber of Commerce and Merchants Association. The view of the Street, which is well supported with factual evidence, is that high transfer taxes have brought in less revenue.

The bulge in securities, which came when the wheat market stepped ahead, brought good gains in the metals and steels, with fair gains being scored by the aviations and better grade rails. Buying of the metals was encouraged by a quarter-cent advance in the price of refined copper to home consumers, placing the new rate at 11½ cents a pound. This was the first price change since February 8. Two major producers instituted the move, which was attributed in the trade to a tight spot copper situation and large demand.

Bond Offerings Well Taken

Within the final district there was general satisfaction over the new offerings of today, which were well taken. A banking group of 58 houses, headed by Halsey, Stuart & Co., Inc., which purchased $33,000,000 Port Authority 3 per cent bonds, resumed public offering of the issue after having disposed of more than half of the flotation. W. E. Hutton & Co. offered at the market 40,000 shares of $1 value common stock of Rustless Iron & Steel Corporation. The reception given both issues was encouraging.

A few special issues broke into the limelight. A break in Brooklyn-Manhattan transit issues followed a warning from the company and the Brooklyn & Queens Transit Corporation that holdouts who have not assented to the unification plan cannot expect a price higher than that already offered after the consummation of the plan. Brooklyn & Queens preferred closed off 7 points and at one time was down 14. B. M. T. preferred closed off 6 points. Other traction issues were little changed.

Colgate Hits New High

Colgate Palmolive Peet went to a new high and closed up 1¾ following publication of the company's favorable earning statement, showing the largest sales in its 134 years of existence and the best net income for any year since 1931. It was the second most active stock in today's trading, the leading position being held by Loft, which dropped 1¼. Bendix led the aviations with a gain of nearly 2 points and Canada Dry was prominent with a 1¼ points gain.

Oils did little in today's trading and statistical news on the industry, was bearish. The American Petroleum Institute's weekly report showed another large increase in refinery stocks and gasoline in transit, amounting to about 2,000,000 barrels and bringing the total to nearly 94,000,000 barrels.

Steel shares paid little heed to a softened scrap market. They came back slightly after early irregularity and motors followed a similar pattern.

Treasury Bonds Lower

Brooklyn, Queens County & Suburban Consolidated 5s of 1941 declined 5 points today, while Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit issues moved within a narrow range. A generally easier tone prevailed in Treasury bonds on the big board with changes ranging from 2/32 point off to 1/32 point higher.

Illinois Climbs As Oil Producer

Centralia, Ill., Feb. 20 (AP).—Illinois took another giant stride toward third place nationally in petroleum production last week with a daily output of 407,583 barrels, the Oil and Gas Jorunal announced today.

The State's production showed an increase of 20,566 barrels per day over the previous week and now is only 22,000 barrels per day less than that of Oklahoma, third largest producing State. Oklahoma's output in the previous week exceeded Illinois by 44,000 barrels daily. Texas and California are first and second.

Seiberling Votes $75.38 on Class B

Akron, Ohio, Feb. 20 (AP).—Seiberling Rubber Co. declared today a dividend of $75.38 on Class "B" preferred stock to eliminate arrearages. President J. P. Seiberling said this cleared the way to later resumption of common stock dividends.

Refinancing was made possible by sale of 28,000 shares of $2.50 convertible prior preferred, on which the directors today declared a dividend of 45 cents for the January 26-April 1 period. The usual $1.25 dividend on Class "A" preferred also was declared. All dividends are payable April 1 to March 15 stockholders.

Southern Pac. Nets $1,080,316 in Month

New York, Feb. 20 (AP).—Southern Pacific Co. reported today January net operating income of $1,445,326, compared with $935,850 in the same month of 1939. Gross income increased to $17,503,418 from $15,766,513 a year ago.

Louisville & Nashville

Louisville & Nashville R. R. Co. reported for 1939 net income of $7,394,231, after taxes and charges, or $8 a share, compared with net income of $2,706,016 or $2.31 a share for the previous year.

Erie

Erie Railroad's January net operating income was $1,080,316 against $745,105 in January, 1939, the road reported today. Operating revenues were $7,117,055 compared with $6,274,751 the preceding January.

Boston Wool Market

Boston, Feb. 20 (AP) (U. S. Dept. Agri.).—Boston wool houses were receiving very little interest in most kinds of domestic wools today. Efforts have been made to secure orders for the new Arizona wools at around 87 cents, scoured basis, delivered to Eastern users, but this price had no attraction for buyers. Scattered offerings of country packed mixed lots of three-eighths and one-quarter blood bright fleece wolls quoted at 36@38 cents in the grease delivered to users found little buyer interest. Limited quantities of low quarter-blood domestic wools were sold at 77@80 cents scoured basis for territory lines and at 42@43 cents in the grease for bright fleeces of this grade.

Bankers Outside of New York Chief Underwriters in Quarter

Underwriting participations in issues registered under the Securities Act of 1933 and offered for sale during the three months ended December 31, 1939 amounted to $210,895,000 for 34 issues, according to an analysis prepared by the Research and Statistics Section of the Trading and Exchange Division. This total included $188,860,000 for 13 bond issues, $13,211,000 for 11 preferred stock issues and $8,824,000 for 10 common stock issues.

Firms outside of New York City accounted for a majority of the underwriting business during the fourth quarter. Ninety-nine of these firms had underwriting participations of $109,388,000, or 52 per cent of the total. While these firms had 50 per cent of total participations in bond issues, they accounted for 65 per cent of total participations in preferred stock issues and 75 per cent of total participations in common stock issues.

Firms outside of New York City led to an even greater extent in the management of underwritten issues. During the fourth quarter, 17 such firms managed an aggregate of $173,691,000, or 82 per cent of the total amount. A breakdown by types of issues indicates that firms outside of New York City managed 84 per cent of the bond issues, 45 per cent of the preferred stock issues and 93 per cent of common stock issues.

Of the 144 firms which had underwriting participations during the fourth quarter only 31 firms acted as managers. Yet these firms had aggregate participations of $92,251,000, or 44 per cent of total participations. The 17 firms outside of New York City which acted as managers had total participations of $38,527,000 in issues managed, as compared with only $15,447,000 in other issues. This contrasted with the record for 14 New York City firms which acted as managers, only $14,343,000 of their participations being in issues managed, as compared with $23,934,000 in other issues.

The five firms which secured the largest amount of underwriting participations during the fourth quarter were as follows: Halsey, Stuart & Co. Inc., with $27,960,000, Harriman Ripley & Co., Inc., with $11,190,000, Blyth & Co., Inc., with $7,951,000. The First Boston Corporation, with $7,900,000, and A. G. Becker & Co., with $7,148,000. Of these the first and fifth firms are located outside of New York City. These five firms accounted for 29 per cent of total participations.

In terms of the amount of underwritten issues managed the five leading firms ranked as follows: Halsey, Stuart & Co., Inc., $145,500,000, White, Weld & Co., $10,900,000, Harris, Hall & Co., $9,000,000, Harriman Ripley & Co., Inc., $8,000,000, and A. G. Becker & Co., $7,320,000. The first, third and fifth of these firms are located outside of New York City. These five firms accounted for 56 per cent of the total amount managed.

Wheat Jumps Five Cents in Final Hour

Part of Gains Lost, But Closings Are 1¼ to 2⅜ Cents a Bushel Up

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Feb. 20.—Frenzied trade struck the wheat pit in closing minutes today for the second time in the last four sessions, shooting prices up cents from early lows to the best levels since early January.

The burst of buying—similar to that of last Friday and coming after the market had drifted rather indifferently during most of the session—boosted May wheat to 1.07, up 5¼ from the day's low and within about 3 cents of the season's high established early in January. July soared to 1.04¼ and September to 1.05⅝, the latter setting a new season high.

Part of the gains were as quickly lost, but prices finished 1¼@2⅜ higher for the day; May, 1.04@1.04½; July, 1.02½@1.02¾. Corn finished ⅜@⅝ up; May, 57⅛@57¼; July, 57½; oats, ⅛@⅜ up; soybeans, 1 cent up; rye, ⅝@⅞ up; lard, unchanged to 3 cents a hundredweight lower.

There was little in the news to account for the closing surge in wheat. Some traders pointed to indications of intensified sea warfare. Others said that efforts by early short-sellers to get back into the market revealed no wheat was for sale until prices had been jumped up 3 to 5 cents. Stop-loss orders to buy then added momentum to the upward movement.

Copper Advanced ¼ to 11½ Cents

New York, Feb. 20 (AP).—Two leading producers advanced the price of copper today ¼ of a cent a pound to 11½ cents, delivered in the Connecticut Valley. This is the first increase in the price of the metal for spot delivery since it started down from the 12½ cent top reached last autumn during the flurry of war buying.

The price finally came down to 11¼ cents February 7, but in the last week fresh buying has come into the market from French and other sources, which caused a boost in the scrap copper price yesterday.

Gasoline Supplies Rise to New Peak

New York, Feb. 20 (AP).—Stocks of finished and unfinished gasoline increased 2,3[illegible],000 barrels during the week ended February 17 to a new record high of 93,985,000 barrels, the American Petroleum Institute reported today. The previous high was 93,192,000 barrels on March 19, 1938.

A sharp rise in refinery operations and the seasonally low level of gasoline consumption were responsible for the increase. Reporting refineries speeded operations to 83.6 per cent of potential capacity from 80.7 per cent the week before.

Cotton Holds Steady Against Foreign Sales

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 20.—The cotton futures market righted itself today after keeling over early under foreign pressure. Final prices were 1 point higher to as much lower.

Bombay interests offered contracts when price discounts on New York widened despite an advance in the East Indian market. The list was pushed back an outside of 6 points. Liverpool sold at a slower rate.

Overseas selling soon let up and the market steadied.

The sharp rally in the wheat pit at Chicago encouraged short covering and speculative support, pulling final prices to the day's best levels.

Cottonseed Oil

Speculative interests came to the rescue of cottonseed oil futures today after a morning slump. The final price range was 2 points higher to 1 lower following early losses of 4 to 10 points.

While switching operations were the dominant trade note, the sharp run-up in wheat and recovery in lard attracted support.

Gold Imports Include Shipment From Russia

Gold imports totaled $55,216,779 in the week ended February 14, an increase of about $600,000 from the previous week. The Commerce Department said that the imports included $5,569,978 from Russia, the first direct shipment from that country in about two years. The shipment drew considerable attention when it was unloaded from the Russian vessel Kim, at San Francisco.

Other principal shipments included $7,040,193 from Norway, $6,759,270 from Sweden, $3,733,306 from the United Kingdom, and $28,036,587 from Canada. Gold deposited under earmark at the Federal reserve banks by foreign central banks and governments declined $15,105,735 during the week to a total of $1,110,250,000.

Italy Refuses Britain Arms To Kill Nazis

Attempt of English To Get War Supplies Results in Collapse

By James M. Minifie
Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Rome, Feb. 20.—With the return to England today of the last remaining members of the British purchasing commission, the breakdown of Britain's attempts to obtain war supplies in Italy became unmistakable. Hitherto they had been reported as "temporarily blocked."

It is believed the hitch came recently when, after four months of negotiations, it was decided in high quarters that it would be incompatible with the Italo-German alliance signed last May, to sell to England weapons which would be used to kill Germans.

British May Cut Off Coal

This argument would not have prevented Britain acquiring such materials as training airplanes. It is believed that an order for several hundred was contemplated, although there has apparently never been any question of obtaining bombers here, in view of the much superior types available in America. The British appear, however, to have adopted an "all-or-nothing" policy, and, failing to get what they wanted in the category of weapons, declined to purchase only secondary requirements.

Neutral observers believe one result of the breakdown will be a refusal by the British to send coal to Italy—with which the orders were to be paid—or to let German coal reach this country by sea from Hamburg. They would thus cut off about 8,000,000 tons annually, or two-thirds of Italy's annual imports.

Italian authorities have decreed that all supplies of foreign coal must be reserved for factories and the iron and steel industry.

Pressure on Rumania

Copyright by New York Times

Bucharest, Feb. 20.—The pressure the British have been putting on Rumania in recent weeks to force the government not to favor Germany in its oil exports, almost amounted to a strangulation of Rumania's foreign trade.

After the appointment of the Rumanian oil commissioner, the British representative in Bucharest asked the Rumanian government twice whether the commissioner intended to force the British oil companies to sell their oil to the Germans. The Rumanian answer was unsatisfactory.

The British first withdrew all licenses for exports to Rumania. In addition, ships carrying cargoes for Rumania were held up in Gibraltar or in the Dardanelles and were sent to Malta for minute investigations.

This proceeding caused much damage to Rumanian shipping and the state maritime service had to instruct its captains to take on board only goods for which a British navicert had been obtained. The British made it difficult to obtain these.

These British reprisals caused a shortage in metals and rubber.

In the meantime, negotiations were being carried on with regard to the oil question. In oil circles it was stated two days ago that both the Rumanian government and the oil commissioner had agreed definitely that oil companies controlled by British or French capital would not be compelled to sell their oil to Germany.

It is doubtless due to these assurances that the news arrived here today that the rubber consignment being awaited was on its way, that the goods intended for Rumania, lying in foreign ports for weeks, had again received their navicerts.

Roger Whiteford Resigns as Head Of Associated Gas

New York, Feb. 20.—Roger J. Whiteford, Washington attorney, has resigned as president of Associated Gas & Electric Co. and its subsidiary, the Associated Gas & Electric Corporation, it was announced today.

Whiteford was elected chief executive of the associated system last December to succeed John I. Mange, resigned. Whiteford was understood to have accepted the post on a temporary basis, since when the companies have filed petitions to reorganize under the Chandler Act. Whiteford has been recommended by Associated directors for appointment as a co-trustee when such selection is made by Judge Vincent L. Leibell in Federal Court.

In view of the fact that the two top holding companies in the utility system are now in the hands of the court, some doubt was expressed at the companies' offices at 61 Broadway today as to whether a successor to Whiteford would be immediately selected. S. J. Magee, vice president, is now the senior official, it was pointed out.

Thomas Raney, Railroad Man, Is Dead at 58

Thomas M. Raney, 58, freight representative for the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, died yesterday at his home, 414 Nicholson street northwest. He had been an employe of the B. & O. for 40 years.

Mr. Raney was a charter member of Rosensteel chapter, Knights of Columbus, and was active in fraternal and charitable circles in the Catholic Church.

He is survived by his wife, formerly Miss Daisy Rabbit; three brothers, Eugene J. C., John D. and James P. Raney, jr., all of Kensington, and two daughters, Miss Margaret Raney and Mrs. Calvin Cruickshank, of Washington.

Requiem mass will be said Friday at 9 a. m. at the Church of the Nativity. Burial will be in St. John's Cemetery, Forest Glen, Md.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

"How well do you know your Culbertson?" might be the heading for today's list of questions, taken from a Culbertson teachers' and players' examination. The answers, which for your convenience will be found at the foot of the column, are in agreement with the "Gold Book," Ely's latest bidding manual.

Of course, if you don't play Culbertson, you need not expect to win a high grade on the quiz, but it might please you to see how nearly your bidding ideas stack up with his.

1. You hold:

♠ A K Q J
♡ A J 10
◇ K 4
♣ J 10 6 3

How many defensive honor-tricks have you?

4½ plus 3½ plus 4 plus 5 4

2. Suppose you win the contract at spades. How many playing tricks would the same hand contain?

6½ 6½ plus 7 plus
7½ 7½ plus 6 plus

3. Your partner has opened the bidding with two notrump. You hold:

♠ 7 6 2
◇ Q 7 5 4 2
♣ 9 8 4

Bid three diamonds?
No bid?
Bid three notrump?
Swear at your luck?

4. The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 NT	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	?

You, South, hold:

♠ Q J 8 6 4
♡ 9 7 4 2
◇ 8 5 3

What is your next call?

Three spades No bid
Four hearts Three notrump

5. In figuring the honor-tricks scattered around the table do you use:

The rule of 4-5-6-
The rule of 8?
The rule of 2 and 3?
The rule of 11?
The rule of x plus 1?
The rule of thumb?

6. What name is given to the play of sacrificing an unsupported honor for the purpose of either killing an entry in the dummy or creating an entry in partner's hand:

Bath coup?
Deschapeiles coup?
Vienna coup?
Coup d'etat?
Whitehead coup?

Answers

1. Four-plus honor tricks.
2. Six and a half plus playing tricks.
3. Three notrump.
4. Four hearts.
5. The rule of eight.
6. Deschappelles coup.

Today's Radio Highlights

George Burns and Gracie Allen celebrate the eve of George Washington's Birthday in typical manner—WJSV, 7:30 p. m.

A game of "Truth" that evolves into a game of "Murder" provides mystery and excitement for lovable "Dr. Christian," or Jean Hersholt—WJSV, 8:30 p. m.

Ruth Gordon, whose portrait of Mary Todd in the cinema version of "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," has created much favorable comment, re-creates the role of Susy Sachs in "The Church Mouse," which she played so successfully on Broadway in 1931—WJSV, 9 p. m.

A 6-year-old prodigy, Baby Barbara, is interviewed by Fred Allen on the "Persons you didn't expect to meet" portion of the Town Hall program. The little girl, a gifted xylophonist, will play a portion of the "Poet and Peasant Overture"—WRC, 9 p. m.

Louis Sobol, noted columnist, biographer and commentator, begins a weekly series of comments on the news of Manhattan—WOL, 9:15 p. m.

The American Medical Association presents a radio adaptation of "The Story of Louis Pasteur." Musical score from the film is directed by Joseph Gallicchio—WMAL, 10 p. m.

"At the Balalaika" and "The Things You Are" are the two hit tunes featured on Kay Kyser's College—WRC, 10 p. m.

The Pageant of Melody presents Attilio Baggiore, Kathryn Witwer, and the octet. Miss Witwer, soprano, sings "Il Est Doux," from Massinet's "Herodiade." Baggiore sings "Mattinata" and "Santa Lucia," and the two soloists join the octet in "Wein, Wein du Stadt Allein" in the finale. Henry Weber conducts—WOL, 10:45 p. m.

Sen. Connally Improves

Physicians at Walter Reed Hospital last night said the condition of Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, who collapsed Friday night during a seize of sneezing, was satisfactory and that he should be discharged in a few days.

with Slocum

Our nomination for the letter of the year:

Dear Mr. Godfrey:

Would you like to be able to impress listeners when you talk. My course in the art of public speaking will eradicate all semblance of stage fright and nervousness. Let me know if you are interested.

Yours truly,
M——— D———
Speech Expert.

Yesterday we printed a couple of lines of doggerel about the gentleman who "combed his hair with a wagon wheel and died of a toothache in his heel." We asked for identification and further lyrics and a couple of phone calls have made it plain that the name of this bit of Americana is "Old Dan Tucker." Another thing, "Old Dan" was no Yankee. The verses I have heard via phone were all reeled off in nice Southern accents. In fact there was one accent, but——.

A few days ago we told the harrowing tale of Arch McDonald and his brave sacrifice to duty in going down in an auto to that hot sticky Orlando to cover the Senators training antics. He is now beset by another hardship. He can't get a record of "The Old Pine Tree" any more. He's used up the available local supply. When he's broadcasting for the "Twenty Grand" people it's alright, because their theme is a series of hoofbeats, but Arch is looking around for a good theme for his other sports talks and his baseball broadcasts. How about "Minneapolis Must Be Heaven 'Cause Wheaties Come from There."

We inadvertently broke a Lenten pledge the other day and the punishment was swift and horrible. We were shifted to a new office, right next to Arthur Godfrey's palatial suite and now the morning's are made hideous by the Godfrey vocal lessons. It reminds us of the offstage noises made by McGillicuddy's Seven Seals in vaudeville.

I Take This Man

BY ANNE TEDLOCK BROOKS

The proprietor remembered Brenda and Alan. "Drive way out here in the snowstorm? We must give you an extra good dinner to make up for it," he said

Brenda Holliway—successful young artist with a large advertising agency.

Lynne Winship—wife of Cary.

Alan Tremaine—young mining engineer home from Brazil.

Paget Blair—an old friend of Brenda.

Brenda has invited Alan to have dinner in her apartment, and in the office tells Cary of the arrangement. Cary congratulates her on her conquest in a half-hearted manner. During the dinner Brenda and Alan tell each other of their work. As he prepares to leave, Brenda suddenly realizes that Alan is in love with her. Alan was almost a nightly caller after that, for he wanted Brenda's love any they had grand times together.

Chapter 6

TONIGHT she and Alan were driving out of the city to an inn off the main highway. They had found it one Saturday afternoon and had promised to go back for one more dinner before he left.

A hint of snow was in the air, and Brenda wondered if they might get caught in a storm. But Alan was so dependable, she knew, that she went on with preparations to go with him.

The sky had cleared, and a late sun appeared for a moment as they left the tall buildings behind.

"Warm enough?" Alan asked turning the heater on low.

"Yes, come what may, I'm well prepared!"

She was wearing a green wool suit under the warmth of her mink coat. And a green hat covered her hair which she was wearing curled about her shoulders. Her dark eyes shone from the fresh air, and Alan glanced at her again and again.

"Brenda," he said just before they turned off the highway, "I find myself hating to look at a watch or a calendar. The time has passed all too quickly for me."

"We have had fun, haven't we?" She slipped her hand under his arm for a moment, and he reached down and captured it.

It had grown dark early, and they were out of the heavy traffic now. They met only a few cars after they turned off the highway. Alan kept her hand. Brenda made no pretense to withdraw it. He had never kissed her, and Brenda wondered now why he had not. Paget Blair kissed her occasionally, but she had never found any excitement in his kisses. Cary—

She shivered slightly, and Alan pulled her over closer to him. He put his arm about her.

Alan Talks of Love

"Brenda," he began slowly. "I have no right to say this to you. I love you. I have from the very first night."

She was silent. Of course she had known!

"I want to marry you, Brenda. But I can't ask you to go to Brazil with me. That isn't any life for a girl." He was talking it out, trying to let her see the reason he could not ask her to marry him.

Alan drove the car off the road into a sheltered place. He kept his hand on the wheel, and said, "I have to tell you this, Brenda, because I want your love more than anything."

Brenda's face was white in the flare of light from the dashboard. She felt shaken with Alan's words, and wished in her heart she could love him. She was very fond of him. But she loved Cary Winship. Even if she could never be Cary's wife.

Alan was saying: "You could go to Rio. And wait for me while I'm out in the camps, but I'd never ask you to go to the camps with me." His voice sounded grim. "It's too much to ask, isn't it, Brenda?"

He looked at her and said suddenly: "Why, you're crying. What is it? But then I know. I've guessed it over a dozen times. That's why I haven't mentioned my love to you sooner."

"You knew?"

"All along. I could kill him. But Cary's a great fellow. I don't blame you. I like him and Lynne better than any of my friends. But you'll get over it, Brenda. You can, you know! I thought I'd never get over Margot," he laughed lightly. "But I did. It wears off. I had hoped," he said softly, "that I could help you to forget."

She lifted her face to him. "Oh, Alan, you have helped. If only you knew how much!" and because she was grateful, and because he cared so much, she lifted her lips.

Their First Kiss

Alan kissed her. A long, hard kiss, and Brenda stirred and said, "Alan!"

"Oh, Brenda, darling! I could make you love me. Let's get married. Let's get married tonight; I need you." He held her to him closely, and Brenda felt his heart beating.

He put her from him roughly. "I'm mad! Of course, I can't ask you to marry me. I've been like an insane man. Trying to make myself give up my work and stay here and go into the steel factory for Dad."

"But why give it up, Alan? I could go to South America." Suddenly she knew she must. "I would go, I would know then that I'd forget Cary. If you need me, oh, Alan, I need you, too!"

He shook her shoulders gently. "You don't know what you're saying, Brenda." He kissed her white eyelids. "I'd risk your loving another man, but I can't risk taking you out in the jungles, out in the heat, the rain, the dangers of malaria and wild beasts—"

Brenda laughed shakily. "You've said a dozen times that you're not afraid of them. I'd have you. I'd not be afraid, either." It would have to be this way. She could not trust herself with Cary now. She loved him too much.

Alan kissed her lips, gently, this time. "Brenda, we could do it. If you'd promise to mind me, and do just as I tell you."

"I promise!" She sat very still in his arms. I'm giving my life into his hands, she told herself. He will make me forget my unhappiness. Anything to get away from Lynne and Cary. Anything to keep from seeing them together again!

Then, in sudden contrition, she said: "But, Alan; what would you feel about me? You would not want me if I cared for another, could you?"

"Want you, Brenda!" he laughed softly. "Under any terms, dearest, I want you. Make your own." He picked her up for a moment. "I'll just make one rule for you. And that is—that you're not to worry about that phase of the question."

A Wish Expressed

He drove slowly toward the inn, which was just a short distance ahead. They could see the lights shining from the ship lanterns outside the door.

"We'll make our plans after dinner," said Alan, giving her hand a gentle pat.

As they walked toward the inn after parking the car, big soft flakes of snow started falling thick and fast.

"Do you think we should start back, or shall we risk it?" Alan asked. Then, "But of course not! You must have your dinner. You must be hungry. I am. Let's run!"

She hurried along beside him. "It won't snow long, and we're both starved! It's fun out here in it!" She caught some of the flakes in her outstretched hand.

The proprietor remembered them. He said, "Drive away out here in this snowstorm? Well! Well! I must give you an extra good dinner to make up for it." He bustled away into the kitchen.

There were few diners present. An elderly couple sitting close to the fireplace in the lobby were listening to the radio. But the dining room was empty save for one small occupied table.

Brenda's cheeks were glowing, her dark eyes bright from the cold. Alan regarded her across the table. She wished suddenly that she had never known Cary Winship. It would be so easy to care for Alan! She smiled at him wistfully.

"Better not smile at me like that." She raised her black brows inquiringly and he went on, "I would be tempted to tell you what I wish and then you might be sorry."

"I'm afraid I'm terribly curious, Alan. Tell me. I promise I won't be sorry."

"I hope we get snowbound and there's a minister close!" smiled Alan.

News of the Blizzard

Brenda and Alan were finishing their dinner when the news came over the radio. A blizzard was bearing down from the North. All motorists were warned to get under cover as quickly as possible. The room had become quiet at the first words, and the warning came to the couple seated at the table as clearly as though they had tuned the dial for it purposely.

Brenda could not help smiling at Alan's look of dismay.

"It's a judgment, Alan, for having made your wish a while ago!" Her laugh tinkled out merrily, and the man with her looked at her and smiled wanly.

"Of course, it isn't as though it were 1910, Brenda, you know. It's Saturday evening and no one will miss you. You can get back to your office Monday morning without any one hearing about this."

"No, Alan, I'm definitely going to be compromised! You'll have to make an honest woman out of me."

Alan said, "In this day and age, when even the high school kids dance all night, eat breakfast at the diners, and drag home when their fathers are going out with their dinner pails on their arms! You can't pretend to be that old-fashioned! You don't have to marry me yet, Brenda. Besides, I think every girl should have a church wedding. You'd resent it later."

Brenda looked at him in great surprise. "Not more than half an hour ago you said you wished this very thing would happen. Why have you changed, Alan?"

"I've just realized how unfair I've been to you. Taking you off guard, and now all of this."

"I've not been taken off guard, Alan. Of course, I'd not expected to get married tonight, or I'd have worn something more appropriate for the occasion."

"Brenda, you're not serious?"

Playing With Fire?

She looked at him gravely. "Are we playing with fire, Alan? Do you want to marry me?"

"More than anything in the world. But, Brenda, you must be certain that you're not making a mistake. It would be heaven having you with me on the journey back to Brazil. I would not be long at the camp the first time. Later, yes, I may have to go into the interior, but we can plan that when the time comes. It means long, lonely hours of waiting for me back in Rio."

"I would have my work, Alan. I intend to keep up my painting. Perhaps I'll enter some work in the international exhibit next spring."

He pulled his chair over closer to hers and took her hands.

"Then you'd go into this marriage trying to make a success of it? Oh, Brenda, I care too much to have you with me a little while and then to not ever have you again."

She looked into his eyes. They were steady upon her own. He was fine and strong, generous and dependable. That much she had learned through long hours of talking with him.

"I promise to try to make it a success, Alan. It would be easy to love you. I want you to know that. If only I'd not known Cary first! But I promise never to speak of him, and I'll try to not think of him." The tears spilled out over her long lashes and ran down her white cheeks. Alan wiped them away gently.

Russia Buys More War Metals Here

Exports in January Set Record Since 1931, Commerce Discloses

Exports from the United States to Russia in January were valued at $11,313,000, the largest total for any month since June, 1931, figures at the Commerce Department revealed yesterday.

Many of these purchases were believed to consist of copper and metal-working machinery, both important in the conduct of war.

Substantial quantities of molybdenum and aluminum, both of which are covered by President Roosevelt's "moral embargo" against aircraft shipments to Russia, have been exported to that country since the outbreak of the European war, the figures disclosed.

Shipments of molybdenum were heavy in December. Whether there were any exports after the State Department added it to the embargo list on December 15 is not known. Department officials expressed the belief that very little, if any, of the goods covered by the proclamation had been exported.

Used in Plane Parts

Molybdenum and aluminum are used in the manufacture of airplane parts.

The State Department notified producers of these materials, as well as other aircraft articles, that it was against American policy to sell them to powers that bombed or machine-gunned civilian populations.

Exports to Russia in January were more than 11 times exports to Finland in the same month. Shipments to Finland in January were valued at $1,004,000.

Soviet purchases in this country since the pact with Germany was announced in August have risen to the largest monthly totals since 1931, and have been concentrated on a few items which are essential to a nation at war.

Meanwhile, Secretary of State Hull yesterday informed Representative Hook (Democrat), Michigan, that there were no exports of aviation gasoline to Russia during 1939 or during January, 1940, "with the exception of two barrels for experimental purposes."

There was a mild hint in Hull's letter to Hook that the Secretary might not oppose legislative embargo against shipments of essential war materials to the Soviet.

"There is no existing legislation," he pointed out, "which authorizes the prohibition of the export of petroleum products to the U. S. S. R. or to any other country. Before such exports could be prohibited, new legislation would be required."

Molybdenum Cargoes

Exports of regular gasoline to Russia in 1939 totaled 883,530 barrels, Hull explained. All of this went to Siberia, he said.

In December, according to Commerce Department figures, 5,165,000 pounds of molybdenum, valued at $1,906,000, were shipped to Russia. Shipments in other months following the German invasion of Poland were: September, $192,000; October, $1,945,000, and November, $732,000.

Exports of aluminum ingots were valued at $535,000 in September, $283,000 in October, and $2,000 in November.

Higher Ranks In Army, Navy Asked of House

Edison, Woodring Urge Action to Keep Pace With Expanding Force

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Secretaries Woodring and Edison yesterday asked Congress to provide increased rank and prestige for the high command of the expanding Army and Navy.

In a letter to Speaker Bankhead, Edison proposed legislation which would allow the rank and pay of a vice admiral to be given to commanders of naval units afloat "performing special or unusual duty or executing a special or unusual mission."

While the Navy Secretary did not say what commanders might be given the rank under the plan, some members of Congress believe the Navy wants to promote the commander of the Atlantic Squadron, who has operated the nentrality patrol since last September.

At Discretion of the President

It was also suggested that the commander of the special European squadron, being on an "unusual mission," might be elevated to vice admiral if the bill is approved, but others considered the three-ship unit too small for such rank. Appointments would be at the discretion of the President.

Rear Admiral Hayne Ellis heads the Atlantic Squadron, greatly enlarged in recent months by the commissioning of laid-up destroyers for neutrality duty. Rear Admiral Charles Courtney is commander of the European detachment.

Secretary Woodring asked the House to increase the number of brigadier generals from 46 to 50 to permit the four major line branch chiefs at the War Department to be selected from such rank rather than from among the colonels.

"It is intended to increase the prestige of the chiefs of these four great combat branches of the battle team," Woodring said in a letter to Speaker Bankhead, "by making each chief a prospective major general of the line, a probable corps area or department commander, and possibly a chief of staff.

Broaden the Viewpoint

"It will, therefore, broaden the viewpoint of chiefs of arms in the knowledge that they are later to command troops of all arms and not merely retire as at present . . . It will place such appointments among the most distinguished in the Army."

Later, Woodring said, the rule should be applied to the chief of Air Corps, but not now while there are so few brigadiers.

Col. Harrington and Gov. James Debate Relief a Mile Apart

Republican Decides to Admit Press, So WPA Chief Makes His Speech In His Own Office, Before 12 Democrats

A debate unique in the annals of the Capital took place yesterday, when the two debaters held forth to audiences more than a mile apart.

Hopelessly split over the issue of publicity vs. privacy, Gov. Arthur H. James of Pennsylvania and Work Projects Administrator F. C. Harrington expounded their views on the Pennsylvania relief situation, each to his own peculiarly sympathetic audience.

While Col. Harrington presented his case to Pennsylvania's Democratic Congressmen in his own office, the Governor talked before Pennsylvania's Republican members of the House for more than an hour at a meeting on Capitol Hill covered by an ample supply of reporters and photographers.

Harrington Shy

The tempest boiled up from efforts to hold a joint Harrington-James conference to thrash out 6-month-old Republican charges that the WPA is discriminating against the State of Pennsylvania.

The time of the conference was arranged; Gov. James said he was coming to Washington; and all was apparently going well with the idea when Col. Harrington learned that the Republicans planned to permit newsmen to attend the discussion.

His insistence on privacy was unchangeable and no less so was the Governor's demand for publicity.

Up to the headquarters of the Work Projects Administration at New York avenue and eighteenth street trooped 12 of the 14 Democrats in Pennsylvania's House delegation; while simultaneously 17 of the 19 Republicans rallied round the Governor in the old House Office Building.

James Shows Charts

After Col. Harrington's conference, Representative Walter (Democrat), said the Administrator had explained Pennsylvania's allegedly low WPA enrollment "to the complete satisfaction of everyone." Walter said the State's WPA quota would be filled if local authorities would sponsor the projects.

The Pennsylvania Democrat added that the Governor's visit to Washington was "part of his Presidential campaign."

On the other hand, James, fortified with numerous charts, cited figures to prove from various angles that Pennsylvania's WPA quota and total enrollment are unjustifiably low. He also produced photostats of affidavits of two former WPA employes who said they had been dismissed because they refused to take active part in politics.

Funeral Service For Mrs. Munsey To Be Held Today

Funeral rites for Mrs. Edith P. Munsey, 74, a resident of the District for 49 years, will be at 2 p. m. today at the Francis Asbury Methodist Church, Sixteenth and Lamont streets northwest. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

She died Monday at her home, 1019 Monroe street northwest.

A native of Carmel, N. Y., Mrs. Munsey came here in 1890 to join the old United States Pension Office, now a part of the Veterans' Administration.

She retired in 1908 when she married Edward E. Munsey, also a Pension Office employe. Mr. Munsey retired last July from the Veterans' Administration, where he was a reviewing attorney.

Mrs. Munsey was active in the Francis Asbury Church.

Besides her husband, she leaves a brother, William C. Peck, of Easton, Pa.

Loretto Hannan, Lifelong Resident Of Capital, Dies

Miss Loretto Hannan, 66, a lifelong resident of Washington, died yesterday at her home, 2710 Thirty-fifth street northwest.

Miss Hannan was the daughter of Daniel and Catherine Morris Hannan. She was educated at the Georgetown Visitation Convent.

Surviving is one brother, Edward Hannan, with whom she lived. Funeral services will be at 10 a. m. tomorrow at the home. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Mrs. S. C. Johnsen, Active in Danish Circles, Dies at 69

Mrs. Sarah C. Johnsen, 69, founder of the Danish Club of Washington, died yesterday at her residence, 1612 E street southeast.

A native of Denmark, Mrs. Johnsen came to this country in 1909. She moved here from New York City 20 years ago.

Since her arrival in Washington, Mrs. Johnsen had been active in Danish welfare work here. When Prince Frederic and Princess Ingrid visited Washington last year Mrs. Johnsen was among club members who greeted the royal couple at the Danish Embassy.

Surviving are her husband, Ingvard Johnsen; a daughter, Mrs. John Sirola, also of this city, and a son, Marius Johnsen, of Denmark.

Funeral services will be at 11 a. m. Friday at her residence. Burial will be in Congressional Cemetery.

PWA to Drop More of Staff This Month

'Several Hundred' Employes Will Go, Officials Report

By Alfred Friendly.
Post Staff Writer

"Several hundred" more Public Works Administration employes will be dismissed on or before the end of the month, responsible officers said yesterday. About 80 PWA workers received their furlough notices Monday.

Officials said that prior to a conference on the matter to be held within the next day or two, exact estimates were not available. They believed the total to be terminated at this time, however, would be less than 1,000. About one-third of the total will be Washington employes, it was believed.

PWA now employs a staff of about 3,800, of whom 1,482 work in Washington and the remainder in the field. The agency is rapidly completing projects now under construction and no funds have been appropriated for new activities. By July 1, PWA must cut down to a skeleton staff of about 1,000 to carry on supervision of some of the larger projects.

Last Dismissals in January

PWA's last major wave of dismissals took place at the first of the year, when 1,000 employes were cut from the rolls. Four hundred were in the District, and 600 in the field.

Inquiries yesterday revealed that the United States Housing Authority, also in the midst of a curtailment program, contemplates no further discharges before the end of the fiscal year. About 300 USHA employes were furloughed in the first part of January, leaving a present staff of about 1,060 paid from administrative funds. Budget officers said yesterday that savings had been effected and that incumbents could be continued for five months.

PWA officers said yesterday that favorable reports had been received from the field on the employment of many former PWA workers in private industry. At the request of Federal Works Administrator Carmody, regional directors were asked to supply prospective industrial employers with reports of furloughed workers, listing their qualifications. A study is now under way to determine how many of those dismissed have thereby found other employment.

Congress has enacted and sent to the President a law undoing a hardship to Federal employes working a five-day week.

The new legislation provides the employe can be charged with absence only for the days when he would have been required to work. It affects employes of the Navy Yard, Government Printing Office, Bureau of Engraving and Printing and city postoffice.

ODDENDA: The Government employs about 1,200 dollar-a-year men. . . . Despite the Congressional sniping program of Senator Tobey (Republican), of New Hampshire, and Representative Reed (Republican), of New York, the Senate Census Committee has received only six letters in recent weeks on the subject. Two voiced objection to the housing census and four insisted that questions on income be retained.

Congress Told Credit to Finns Would Not Violate Neutrality

Hackworth, Legal Adviser to Hull, Says Loan Would Be Within International Law; Denies State Department Has 'Policy'

By Turner Catledge.
Copyright by New York Times

Congress was told again yesterday that a new extension of credit to Finland would violate neither the neutrality policies of this Government nor the law among nations.

After apparently accepting this view of the proposed Finnish aid from Green H. Hackworth, legal adviser to the Secretary of State, the House Banking and Currency Committee decided to continue hearings at least through today on the bill to enlarge the Export-Import Bank's capital sufficiently to make this and other export loans.

Republican members, especially Representative Wolcott, of Michigan, wanted to find out from departmental officials whether the Federal Reserve Bank of New York has been acting as fiscal agent for the Allies in the present war, and whether there have been consultations with the State Department on that matter.

Questioned about the State Department's "policy" in relation to the Finnish-Russian conflict, Hackworth scouted the suggestion that the department had such a policy. It had some ideas on the subject, he said, but nothing of so formal a nature as might be called a policy of action or attitude.

"Whether they are or are not at war is not for me to say," he said in answer to a question from a committee member. "But I'm wondering whether we are not privileged to take them at their word."

Col. John H. Jouett, president of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce, appeared before the committee to urge that the Export-Import Bank be left free to finance the shipment of commercial aircraft out of the United States. He assured the committee that belligerent countries were not interested in commercial planes for commercial uses. He explained that in the past the bank had been authorized to finance the export of commercial aircraft, but the provision in the pending bill that nothing could be financed from the new funds that was listed in the President's proclamation of last September, would shut off that particular business.

Certain committee members seemed to sympathize with Col. Jouett's contention. Representative Miller, of Connecticut told his colleagues that it was more difficult to convert a commercial plane into a fighter than to turn a tractor into a truck.

"The cost is prohibitive," Miller said.

Administration leaders were losing hope today of getting the bill to a vote on the floor before next week. Even should the committee finish its work on it today or tomorrow, it is unlikely that the leadership will permit the reciprocal trade agreements extension resolution to be laid aside for prior consideration of the Finnish aid measure.
